Serving and Promoting Our City's Future

Virginia Beach, Virginia, February 1, 1968

SUN Phone: 425-2401

Could this be the gate to a new municipal golf course for Virginia Beach? It very well could be since the bill to allow the use of a substantial part of Camp Pendleton for this purpose has received support and is advancing through channels of the Virginia General Assembly.

Golf Bill Progresses

Legislation is moving briskly and without opposition through the Virginia General Assembly that would create a new municipal golf course in Virginia Beach.

The bill would allow the state to lease 265 acres of Camp Pendleton on the south end of the Beach Borough to the city on a 99-year agreement for top-notch public 18-hole golf course.

The bill was introduced by Virginia Beach House of Delegates members B.R. Middleton and Kenneth Whitehurst. The land to be used adjoins the city-owned Redwing Park.

A companion bill introduced also by Whitehurst and Middleton would lease additional acres of the National Guard summer encampment for a sand erosion replenishment site.

The bills have won approval of the State's National Guard Commander, Gen. Paul Booth, and are expected to win legislative approval.

A separate bill to change the charter of the city has also been introduced and affirmative action is expected soon. The changes would raise the legal limit of the amount of nonreferendum general improvement bonds the city could issue from $1 million to $2 million and the maximum water and sewerage bonds from $2 million to $4 million. Another change would allow City Council to require homeowners to connect to water and sewer systems provided and to charge for the connections.

Attorneys Contend Land Was Illegally Indicted

A hearing is scheduled tomorrow in Virginia Beach Circuit Court on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus for Peter Edward Land, who faces charges of murder and rape.

An indictment was returned against the 29-year-old Land last Friday by a grand jury charging him with the December rape and murder of Mrs. Carol J. Dorschel. Police officials told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN Land was arrested after the grand jury returned the indictment.

Land's attorney, Lowell Clarke and Winston Spiller, contend the indictment was illegal and unlawful, and violated Land's rights. This was based on Land never receiving a preliminary hearing and allegedly never having waived his right to such a hearing.

This point was discussed by the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN with Andre Evans, Commonwealth's Attorney for Virginia Beach. Evans said that under provisions of Virginia law "if a person has been arrested he must have a preliminary hearing or waive his right to such a hearing, but if he has not been arrested then an indictment can be presented to the grand jury." This point will apparently be the center of concern in tomorrow's scheduled hearing on the petition. Should the petition be denied, the date of Land's court appearance in Circuit Court could be set during the court's docket call scheduled for next Monday.

The arrest of Land followed one of the most intense police investigations in the city's history and represented an uncounted number of man hours by the investigators involved in the case. The body of Mrs. Dorschel was found on the evening of Dec. 18 by Fred E. Rose, walking to his Virginia Beach Boulevard home, to a water and mud filled ditch at London Bridge a short distance from her Byrd Lane home.

A medical examiner's report indicated the woman had been sexually assaulted, and that her death was due to manual strangulation. The report also indicated the woman apparently had been killed and concealed in the ditch one week before, Dec. 11, the day she was reported missing from her dishwashers job at the Pine Tree Inn, approximately one mile from where her body was found.

Moments after discovery of the body, 2nd Police Precinct C.O. Capt. R.C. Davis accompanied by Lt. F.S. Krahenbill and officer C.L. Lowell were summoned to the scene, and were joined by Capt. W. W. Davis, detective bureau C.O. with Sgt. C.W. Simmons and detective H.J. Coffield. These men continued their investigation in the field into the morning hours of the following day. The investigation was then placed in the hands of Sgt. Simmons and Coffield, who were assisted by Sgt. C.H. Harris and D.W. Pope of the detective bureau.

The intensity of the investigation was illustrated in a statement by Capt. Davis to the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN to the effect that 45 to 50 persons were questioned during the investigation. Sgt. Simmons said, "We only had two suspects, and one of those was eliminated the first day. Then on the fifth day," Simmons continued, "we focused on the suspect who was eventually arrested."

Shade Your Ground Hog

If you avoid black cats, and never walk under ladders, and throw salt over your shoulder if you spill any, then tomorrow is the day to go ground hog hunting.

According to American folklore, Feb. 2 is the day the ground hog, or woodchuck, creeps up out of hibernation to see what the weather's like. If he sees his shadow, he crawls back into his hole for six weeks' snooze-time—expecting that much more winter weather.

If there's no shadow, he stays outdoors, knowing that spring has come.

Joint School-Police Effort

Narcotics Found in Schools

By Les Lehig

An investigation is underway into the movement of marijuana throughout the city of Virginia Beach. The investigation indicates the public school system of the city was being used as one method of distributing the drug throughout the city.

A reliable source told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN public school officials, as well as police, were aware of the movement of the drug, and worked together to stop the activity. Members of the Police Division youth bureau, vice squad detectives and school officials worked side by side as interviews of students and parents were carried out.

As of yesterday afternoon, approximately 20 persons, all of whom were juveniles except two, had been charged with various drug offenses, Sgt. C.R.

Weast told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN these charges involved possession of drugs, use of drugs, and contributing to the delinquency of minors through the use of drugs. The two adults involved were identified as Eddie Ridder, 18, charged with possession, and 19-year-old Eddie Young, charged with contributing to delinquency of minors.

Sgt. Weast said charges thus far involved students of First Colonial, Cox and Kellam high schools. Weast also said that many more students were interviewed as well as many parents, and that with the exception of the two adults involved, the majority of the students were released to the custody of their parents.

Sgt. Weast also said, "We have found that sales have been transacted within the school system, but as a rule made outside the school." Weast emphasized, "Although students were involved, the majority of activities took place outside the schools. The material was not being distributed in the schools."

The investigation, according to Sgt. Weast, also resulted in the intercepting of a package which contained a large quantity of marijuana which was mailed out of state to a Virginia Beach student before it reached that student. Weast said this was due to the efforts of Sgt. L.O. Sutton. The investigation also resulted in the confiscation of paper used for wrapping cigarettes, containers which had traces of the drug, machines which were used to roll cigarettes and razor blades which were used to cut the supplies of "whole" marijuana.

Officials said the investigation began a month ago when several places in the city were placed under surveillance, is continuing and indicates other places will be involved. The concern of authorities over the matter was reflected in comments from Sgt. Weast who said, "As far as I am concerned, the investigation has just begun. It is a day and night operation, around the clock, and we are carrying our investigation outside the city."

Weast also pointed out how much residents of the city and parents of children can assist in the investigation by offering any information which may have a bearing on the case, when he said, "I think the people within the city should realize we have this problem, and we need their cooperation."

Police Chief James E. Moore also demonstrated the extent of his concern over the matter when he told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "We consider this a very serious thing and we're going to do everything possible; we won't go to sleep on it. We will continue our surveillance."

Moore also expressed his concern for those persons who may subject themselves to the use of the drug and the physical harm they can do themselves when he said, "I don't think the young people of today realize the fierceness of it, and we need their help and the help of everyone."

Any investigation of this size represents the joint efforts of many persons. This was pointed out by Chief Moore who said, "A great deal of the credit goes to the city school officials and parents. I think we've had wonderful cooperation from the school authorities, and we've also had a great deal of help from the parents."

The way Chief Moore summed up his praise of the method of investigation with "The juvenile officers, vice squad detectives, and public school officials have done a marvelous job."

The investigation into the presence of drugs in the public schools of Virginia Beach was an outgrowth of a raid last Saturday on a dwelling on 25th Street.

Police teams, under direction of Sgt. L.O. Sutton and Sgt. Carl R. Weast, arrested nine persons, and confiscated a large quantity of marijuana along with paper used for wrapping cigarettes.

Those arrested Saturday were identified as 19-year-old Carolyn J. Hyers of Breary Road, facing charges of narcotic drug possession; Jamie S. McLeod, Glenbrook Court, aged 18, charged with narcotic drug possession, and a 17-year-old girl, who has not been identified, who was also charged with narcotic drug possession.

The raid also resulted in the charging of four men with frequenting a disorderly house. Authorities identified these as James D. Wagner, 21, Rochester, N.Y.; John R. McMillan, 21, Traverse City, Mich.; Joseph W. Barrett, 21, Watertown, N.Y.; and David A. Hale, 20, Suttons Bay, Mich. Similar charges were also filed against an unidentified juvenile boy.

The raid resulted in the charging of 19-year-old Sally Jo Crockett with keeping a disorderly house. Each of those arrested were placed under varying amounts of bond, pending court appearance.

According to police officials the raids, and public school investigations, were the result of approximately three months of intensive investigation.

Cavalier Club to Be Replaced, Enlarged

The charming old Cavalier Golf and Yacht will soon yield to progress. This structure will eventually be replaced by totally new club headquarters and facilities.

A familiar old Virginia Beach landmark, by land or water, is coming down, and will be replaced by a new, larger facility.

The Cavalier Golf and Yacht Club has decided to begin a three-phase building program, which will mean the eventual demolishing of the present building.

Walter Poole says the membership is being notified of the changes which will cost about $500,000 over a period of several years. He noted that at the last meeting of the board of directors, authorization had been given for the start of the first phase of construction.

Poole said he is hopeful that the first phase can be begun in early 1969. He added that architects' designs have already been called for and one should be accepted soon.

One of the major problems in the old building, according to Poole, is the dining room. "If all 350 members ever showed up for dinner at one time, we'd really be in trouble," said Poole. "The dining room only seats 135."

City Leaders Cite Advantages of Liquor-by-Drink

Proponents of liquor-by-the drink in Virginia Beach feel that a major breakthrough has been made by the Virginia General Assembly, but to a man, they say that it must be properly controlled to be effective and worthwhile.

The cocktail before dinner is still a long way off in Virginia Beach, but informed sources say they will make every effort to get the drinks into the restaurants and large hotels and motels as soon as possible. That, however, could be many months.

After the bill is signed by Virginia Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr., the matter will become law on July 1, when most bills passed by the legislature are enacted. At that time, 3,516 qualified voters, based on 15 per cent of the vote in the 1964 Presidential election, must petition for a referendum on the local option question.

How long the gathering of names will take and the checking of those names against voter rolls is unknown, but that is not expected to take very long. Next a referendum will probably be held in September. Then, if passed, the ABC Board which has board control powers in the matter, will have 30 days to set up rules and start issuing licenses to those who granted a license will then have to maintain strict accounting of liquor sold. Fifty per cent or more of the sales in the establishments must be from food. Other severe restrictions have been set by the General Assembly. It is these restrictions that sources believe helped the bill to pass.

The local option law will not permit open bars. Hard spirits will only be served to seated customers in restaurants and dining rooms of hotels and motels. Under provisions of the law only restaurants that seat 50 or more persons may apply for a license and motels, to be eligible, must have a minimum of 40 guest rooms.

Those that are actually granted a license will then have to maintain strict accounting of liquor sold. Fifty per cent or more of the sales in the establishments must be from food. Other severe restrictions have been set by the General Assembly. It is these restrictions that sources believe helped the bill to pass.

Scott Sterling, former president of the Virginia Beach Innkeepers Association and operator of the large Princess Anne Inn, is extremely pleased with the bill's passage. He says he plans to apply for a license if and when the law allows. He cautioned that the establishments must be run by "good moral operators" if much is to be gained.

"I believe we will see a 30 to 40 per cent greater profit in restaurants in motel-hotels that serve drinks," said Sterling. "This won't come all at once in Virginia Beach. We have an image to overcome, and we must educate and inform tourists and potential tourists."

Sterling added that he feels the entire city will benefit, both in revenue and in tourism, by the new law. He said also that he hopes the people of Virginia Beach will vote favorably on the referendum.

City Manager W. Russell Hatchett, said, "I think this is a real "progressive piece of legislation, and it will mean a great deal to Virginia Beach, as well as the entire state."

The City Manager added that he would not be surprised to see a number of large hotels spring up in Virginia Beach if and when liquor may be served.

Hatchett added that he has always been a proponent of local option but said liquor would only bring in revenue that amounts to a "drop in the bucket." On the other hand, he said, paramutual racing in Virginia Beach could "really bring in the tax revenue."

Hatchett, long a proponent of a race track here says this would lengthen the tourist season in the fall and spring. He pointed out that 26 states already have racing, some on local option. He did not say he has any immediate plans to try for racing here, but said it "would be a wonderful thing."

"We can't hope to develop a city this size unless we find some other forms of revenue," added Hatchett. But he admitted liquor-by-the-drink will help.

Al Malihes, executive director of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, said he hopes the Chamber will get behind the move for liquor.

"I hope we can set up a special Chamber committee to help secure votes for the referendum, and to help tell the general public the entire story."

Michael Savvides, operator of the Black Angus Restaurant and president of the Virginia Beach Restaurant Association, said he plans to apply for a license if the referendum passes.

"I think it is a wonderful thing that the people can now finally vote on this matter," said Savvides. "And as a restaurateur I think that serving drinks will help us to accommodate our customers better."

He said he could not speak for the entire association, but that every member he had talked to seemed pleased and felt it would bring more business to Virginia Beach.

"And I really believe this will, promote more moderate drinking," added Savvides.

Mayor Frank A. Dusch said, "I feel that this is important to tourism and to the economy of Virginia Beach. I am glad we have a chance to vote on the matter."

He added that he hopes the people of Virginia Beach will follow it through successfully. He said he feels confident the ABC Board will be able to handle the problems easily.

"No one who has one hot plate and five booths in a hole-in-the-wall will be able to serve drinks," said Dusch. "And that's the way it should be. I wouldn't want it any other way."

Democratic National Committee member Sidney S. Kellam, long an avid supporter of local option, said he has appeared at the last three sessions of the Virginia General Assembly to speak out for the measure and that he is delighted with the results.

"If it passes here, then it will be up to the people to see that it is properly administered," said Kellam.

There seems to be little organized opposition to the local option in Virginia Beach, and little is expected to develop. Informed sources expect the matter to be passed in Virginia Beach, and say that the glass of Christmas cheer may be legal in public dining rooms this year.

One of three units being used by Auxiliary Police in their duties in Virginia Beach. This "patrol car" was used last weekend in the first "funeralsort" duties recently taken over by the Auxiliary Police.

Auxiliary Police

'Invaluable' Job Done

By Les Lehigh

While the majority of us look forward to spending the time away from our job or business with family or friends, there is a group of men in Virginia Beach who unselfishly devote this time to increasing protection for other residents of the city. These men are members of the Auxiliary Police, an active unit of the city's Office of Civil Defense, who work in close cooperation with regular police officers.

Working on a voluntary basis men of the "Auxiliary", serving without pay, assist regular police in working accidents, riding patrol cars at night, assisting in crowd and traffic control during parades, in case of accidents or fires, and special events at the Civic Center or high schools throughout the city. Another important service is the placing of a man in the "dispatchers" office in police headquarters at Princess Anne Courthouse on weekends to assist the complaint clerk and assist in requests of the Chief Dispatcher on duty.

The value of services performed by men of the Auxiliary was exemplified in comments of Police Chief James E. Moore, "I don't think we can praise them too much," Moore said, adding "It's a satisfaction to know you have these men to call on. I think it's a big help in detering trouble."

Worth of the men during high school events was outlined by Capt. W.J. Moore Jr., C.O. of the Bayside Precinct containing two of the schools which usually draw the largest football and basketball crowds, Moore said. "I feel they have nearly doubled our strength, it's amazing what they do for us. It makes me feel mighty good to know I can draw on them for special assignments."

Similar sentiments were expressed by Capt. R.C. Davis, Beach Borough Precinct C.O. where large crowds are prevalent during the summer months, and for surfing contests. Davis told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "They've been a tremendous help to us in special events, as well as all year round. These men seem to be of high calibre, and get along quite well with the regular officers."

The present "Auxiliary" consists of 109 men, with six others being processed. Supervised by Graham R. White, Jr., Civil Defense Coordinator, the men are continually engaged in training programs directed by Ivan D. May, a graduate of the FBI Academy, former Princess Anne Police Chief, and who was originator of the "Auxiliary" in August 1960.

Administration of the group is shared by William McFarland, auxiliary chief, and Donald Fantone, assistant chief, and administrative officer. Near the end of last year, it had been estimated the Auxiliary during the preceding 12 months had volunteered more than 9,000 hours. This amount of time for regular police officers would have cost the city an estimated $22,500.

Other services performed by the Auxiliary would be aiding in guarding against looting of major shopping centers in the event of floods or hurricanes. This provides additional protection to Pembroke Mall, Bayside Shopping Center, Kempsville Shopping Center, Princess Anne Plaza, and many business firms in Virginia Beach Borough.

An active Civil Disturbance Squad fully equipped with helmets, gas masks and night sticks has been trained to work with regular police if required, and a photographic unit is being formed which could document activities in the event of any disturbance.

Several autos, similar in color and lighting to regular police cars, are maintained by the "auxiliary" for use in traffic control, transportation and patrol during any emergency.

Their worth to Virginia Beach could possibly be best summed up in the comment of First Police Precinct C.O. Capt. H. C. Terry who said, "They're worth their weight in gold."

Worker Learns from Seatack

David Pactor, VISTA volunteer, stretched a year into 14 months of work in Virginia Beach, and in one of his final acts before returning home to college, he saved a man from possible death in a fire.

Pactor, 21, came to Virginia Beach to work in Seatack as a VISTA volunteer, under the auspices of the Southeastern Tidewater Opportunity Project (STOP). STOP channels all federal anti-poverty funds into Tidewater. His tenure was only supposed to be a year.

He came here following six weeks of intensive training which he says "prepared" him for the job, but did not "qualify" him for many of the problems he was to face. Before coming here, he had completed two years of college at the University of Missouri. He is going home to University City, Missouri, and will return to school majoring in psychology. He hopes to enter the social service with an emphasis on recreation.

While he was here he was paid a small stipend which was put into escrow and had a small living allowance to live among the people he was working with.

Now that his 14 months are drawing to a close, Pactor says that most of the accomplishments of the program have been intangible, but that he sees a great future for the growing city of Virginia Beach.

"I feel that the presence of VISTA in the community has been important," said Pactor. "Just our presence at meetings has helped create good feelings."

Pactor worked mostly with the children, taking them on field trips, and conducting a storytelling and play program during the summer for slow learners and retarded children at the Seatack Community Center, along with other volunteers.

He quickly adds that he could never have been able to accomplish as much as he did without the help of STOP. Headstart, the workers at the Center, interested citizens and the people of Seatack themselves.

"I think Seatack has great potential," he said. "It's a good community to work in, and I hope we have been able to help prepare the people there to keep pushing ahead for support of the entire city."

Pactor

Pactor added that he would remember the 14 months fondly for the rest of his life. He confided it was often difficult to keep from being personally involved with some of the people and their problems.

"I think the VISTA program must have merit," he added, "when anyone would give up a year of his life to live and work in a poverty-ridden area. But I'd do it again, because I feel I have gained an indescribable amount of knowledge, and I hope I have been of some help."

"Naturally there were failures for us too," he said, but I learned from them, and I hope everyone did, just like we learned from our successes."

They're Lanes, Not Alleys

By Mary Wright

Today, Feb. 1, begins National Bowling Month, and Joe Phelps is at least one bowling lane proprietor who is prouder of his clientele than almost anything else about his business—unless it's the fact that he operates a bowling lane "where a family can come and bring the children."

Phelps, a stocky 49-year-old, walked around his Thunderbird Lanes on Laskin Road one day last week and pointed out the cleanliness and fine condition of the equipment; almost all of it dating from the time Thunderbird opened in 1959.

Talking later, with a cigarette in one hand and a cup of coffee in the other, he drew a strict line between bowling "lanes" and bowling "alleys."

"Bowling used to be done in alleys," he explained, "You'd never see a woman in a place like that. I could never have thought of running an alley. But when bowling moved into recreation centers a few years ago and became a family sport, I thought I'd give it a try."

"The nicest thing I see in this business is family bowling," he said. "When families do something together, anything, it's a sign of closeness."

A teen-aged girl with long blond hair stopped by the table at which Phelps was sitting to say hello and to spend a few minutes laughing and answering questions about herself and her family. When she had gone, Phelps grinned and said, "There are some kids that come in here that I've known since they were nine years old. Seeing them is one of the biggest kicks I get."

He paused, sipped at his coffee, "There were about half a dozen kids that started coming in here years ago. I swear they might have turned out thieves. Their parents would tell you that, too."

Joe Phelps, owner and operator of the Thunderbird Bowling Lanes, stands in his favorite spot, behind the control counter, of his bowling establishment.

"Now I see them and they're in college and working hard. They're going to turn out fine, and this bowling lane is one of things that did it, I know that," he added.

"There's that old thing about a healthy mind in a healthy body. Well, the proof's in the pudding, and I've seen it. Those boys are turning out fine."

Phelps, born and raised in Norfolk, has less time now with his own family than he did eight years ago when he left the service station business for what he thought were the greener pastures of his own bowling lanes.

The name "Thunderbird" goes back to Phelps' Ft. Sill, Okla. days, where he was stationed in 1944 with the U.S. Army. He picked up the name, who had gotten it from mythology.

"Thunderbird is defined in mythology, said Phelps, as a black bird with a yellow breast which creates thunder and lightning.

"I'd always thought it was an exciting name," said Phelps, and I decided back in 1944 that if I ever had a business that could use the name, I would call it Thunderbird."

Of the three bowling lanes at Virginia Beach, Phelps is the only lanes still under original ownership and management.

"There public seems to think we're doing a bang-up business here," he went on, "and that's part of what's hurting me. We're attracting as much business as any of the lanes, but I suppose there are some alleys doing better."

Phelps believes that the business runs in ten-year cycles, hitting a profit-peak when a new generation becomes old enough to be interested in bowling. He got in on the "tail-end" of the first cycle, he said, when he opened the Thunderbird in 1959. The second cycle is just starting.

"It's a hard business," said Phelps, "and I drive as much business out the door as I pull in because I want to keep this a family place, even if I go broke doing it."

Phelps watched two bowlers for awhile, then continued, "As long as I have the major part of this business, it's going to be a bowling lane, not an alley."

"The way things are now, I don't have any trouble getting to sleep nights."

"I'm too far in just to get out now, anyway," said Phelps. "But just give me four more years, and I think I can crack this nut."

The telephone behind his desk rang, and Joe Phelps hurried off to answer it.

Contestants must be at least 17 years old and holders of AAU membership cards.

More information about the meet can be had from Warrington's Gym, Virginia Beach. The entrance form deadline is Feb. 29. Mrs. George Joseph Bernicki is the Virginia Beach registrar for the AAU. Mrs. Bernicki can be contacted for information on AAU membership cards.

Marina Completion Indefinite

The new city marina at Rudee Inlet is still lacking funds and it still doesn't even have a name. Construction of the large marina for pleasure craft and charter boats has been delayed because funds have not been forthcoming through the Virginia Outdoor Recreation Commission. Actually the funds are federal but provided through the state.

Dean Curtis, the City's director of the project, says he "doesn't have the slightest idea when the money will be released." Meanwhile hope of a marina there this summer has faded completely.

Curtis did say, however, that a plan for charter boats on a one-year basis should be forthcoming by next week.

The City's federal funds coordinator, Richard Webbon, says there is just no precedent for issuing funds for a marina, but that he feels confident a final determination will be made soon.

"We just have nothing in writing," said Webbon, "although we have requested money for the marina and the completion of the canal system from Rudee Inlet to Crystal Lake."

Webbon added that the entire canal system designed to link Rudee Inlet, the Atlantic Ocean and the Chesapeake Bay to the Intercoastal Waterway System was also mentioned in the application. He said this would make the entire area ideal for everyone, from boat owners to anyone interested in recreation. If the State approves the application, 75 per cent of the total cost will be borne by the state and federal governments. The City of Virginia Beach will foot the rest of the bill.

Webbon said the Green Run Farm recreational area application is also in review and that all the technicalities have been taken care of, but that he could not say when funds would be released for recreational facilities there.

"I believe it will be in a reasonable time however," said Webbon.

Meanwhile construction of the jetties at Rudee Inlet has been delayed several times by bad weather and the contractors have been granted an additional 28-calendar day to finish the job. Plans now call for completion on Feb. 28.

At the same time dredging of the inlet is going on and is going well and right on schedule, according to Curtis.

The Rudee Inlet Commission sponsored a contest to name the new marina, and some 350 names were submitted to a panel of judges, but no official name has been chosen so far.

Curtis says he believes the name will be chosen soon.

Auxiliary Considers Support for Police

A resolution was adopted Tuesday night by the Virginia Beach Fraternal Order of Police Auxiliary that will set up a committee to support law enforcement.

The resolution calls for the focusing of attention on law enforcement and the giving of strong support to local police and other agencies engaged in enforcement and carrying out of the law.

The organization plans to talk with other civic and fraternal groups about adopting the same or similar resolutions.

one being studied by several other Tidewater FOP Auxiliary clubs.

Dr. Ira Hancock is president of the Virginia Beach club.

The members of the auxiliary say they hope to arouse the sense of responsibility that all citizens have in law enforcement. They hope, in a time when crime is on the increase and many do not wish to "get involved," the resolution will call upon everyone to assist the police in carrying out their tasks.

The resolution is similar to

Patriots Win First Round

Scholars from First Colonial High School will be out to make it two in a row Sunday (Feb. 4) as they face the team from Ferguson High School, Newport News, on "Hi-Q" on WAVY-TV 10 at 4 p.m. First Colonial earned the right to return for this week's match after defeating the "Hi-Q" team from Deep Creek last Sunday by a score of 240-225. The Virginia Beach team is hoping to gain three consecutive victories that will entitle them to enter the Grand Championship Play-offs in June and a chance at the $2,500 in scholarship grants being offered by the Scholarship Grant Foundation of the Giant Open Air Markets and Tine Glants.

First Colonial, coached by Mrs. Thelma V. Houch, of the social studies department, will be represented by Captain Thomas Eagar, Ronald McAl-hane, Chris Wall and Duncan Smith. Howard Richardson III and Stephen Loesche are the alternate team members. "Hi-Q" is moderated by Len Hathaway and is telecast each Sunday, "live," and in color. The program is also heard on WAVY Radio (1350) at the same time.

Too Late Now

If you have not got a 1968 Virginia Beach license decal on your car, TODAY, it's too late now! The cost of the decals was $10 for residents and $1 for non-residents. The police will be stopping cars not sporting the decals.

Beach Tour Is Still Uncertain

A closed Chamber of Commerce committee meeting, headed by B.M. Stanton, was held Tuesday at the Chamber office to discuss the feasibility of a planned Virginia Beach Tour, similar in scope to those now operating in Norfolk, Hampton, Newport News, Rich-

Commission Hears Reports

The Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Commission met Tuesday afternoon, and the discussion centered around parks, new and proposed.

Wolfsbane Park, which had not been completed at the last commission meeting, is now open and functioning successfully. The neighborhood park, off Great Neck Road, is built on land leased from people in the immediate area.

St. Matthew's Church, in the Sherry Park section, has leased the city about six acres, said Director of Parks and Recreation Harold Whitehurst, to be used for a new park and playground.

Marion Wrenn, member of the Commission, will head a group to study the feasibility of developing the Kempsville water-way area into a new city park. The city will also study the idea of dredging the land for a park, said Whitehurst.

A report to the Commission showed that the Public Works Department is still at work on the area land-fill at the city dump. Public Works will probably be at least three more years packing "Trash Mountain" solid, Whitehurst said.

BADGES & BANNER

Men of the Seatek Volunteer Fire Department this week honored Herbert C. Wilson for his outstanding service last year. Wilson was presented the 1967 "Fireman of the Year" award during a dinner held in his honor.

New members of the city's police staff includes W.C. Fox, who has been assigned to the traffic bureau. Fox joins the Police Division with an extensive background in law enforcement obtained through many years of duty with the Virginia State Police.

This past week saw the recruitment of three men as new members of the Oceana Volunteer Fire Department. The "hand of welcome" was extended to Charles Laney, Glen Feedback and Luther Campbell. A former member of the city's Police Division has "returned to the fold." W.W. Taylor has rejoined the division after a short absence and is currently working out of the Bayside Borough Police Precinct.

Tomorrow night will mark the beginning of a six weeks Red Cross first aid course to be held at the Creeds Volunteer Fire Headquarters. The course, open to the public as well as members of the fire department, will deal with basic first aid techniques.

A Red Cross "registration card" will be given everyone who satisfactorily completes the course. Instruction will be under direction of James Tye, a member of the Creeds "Volunteers," who is a qualified instructor under standards prescribed by the Red Cross.

mond and western parts of the state.

The tour would be a self-guided driving tour, when initiated by the Chamber and City officials.

Contrary to a published report in another newspaper, Al Mailhes, executive director of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, said that the tour had not actually been finalized for launching this summer, although plans would call for beginning about April 15.

Mailhes said the tour has been under discussion for some time, but that no final decision has been reached. He said that is what Tuesday's meeting concerned.

The primary reason for initiating the tour would be to give tourists something more to do in Virginia Beach, as well as take them in an orderly manner to the city's historic and cultural points of interest.

Several points have been discussed as part of the tour, including the Norwegian Lady, Cape Henry, Seashore State Park, the Lotus Gardens, the Little Creek Amphibious Base, the old lighthouse, Fort Story and historic buildings, such as the Princess Anne Court House, Old Donation Church and the Adam Thorngood House.

Stanton told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that the setting up of the tour for this summer is "very encouraging," but that many details still have to be worked out. He said the actual points the tour would include have not been fully selected.

To get the Virginia Beach Tour ready by April 15 would require a map and brochure of the points of interest to be printed. The publication of such a brochure takes a considerable amount of time, according to Mailhes.

We've long made it a policy of building the ruggedest, best-performing, most comfortable, and safest automobile possible. (Yes, safety. We were including things like child-proof door locks and padded dashes as standard equipment long before Detroit ever heard about safety.) The truth of the matter is, you can almost call Peugeot the car of a lifetime. Because, for one reason, when we put it together, Peugeot stays together...for 100,000, 150,000 even 200,000 miles. Those 5,174 separate factory inspections pay you big dividends. Yet, for all its longevity, you'll never tire of your Peugeot. The responsive performance, the ease of handling, the grand luxury are as much a part of a Peugeot as its famous 25-mile-to-the-gallon economy. So if you're a little weary of worrying about this and that...things like repair bills (for example)...why not rest assured with a Peugeot? Sold only by your friendly Peugeot assurance dealer, naturally.

Ruritans Had Work and Play in Va. Beach

The convention hall at the Dome was packed to capacity during the sessions of the Ruritan National Convention. For banquet meetings the chairs were rearranged, tables were added and part of the people watched the proceedings from another banquet at The Cavalier Hotel via closed circuit television.

The keynote speech of the Ruritan National Convention was made by U.S. Sen. Howard H. Baker, Jr., of Tennessee on Monday morning.

The Ruritans celebrated their 40th anniversary on Sunday night with this huge cake. But big as it was, it still wasn't big enough for the nearly 1,500 people in attendance.

No, these are not Ruritans. But they are the noncommissioned officers at Fort Story who were waiting for several busloads of Ruritans to arrive at Fort Story for a guided tour.

Frank Kellam, of Virginia Beach, Convention chairman, addresses a closing session of the convention.

They came in record numbers. They jammed the hotels and motels. They kept skeleton forces in restaurants hopping. They crowded the Virginia Beach Civic Center and its parking lot, and they overflowed into the Cavalier Hotel. They had a grand time, just like conventioners are supposed to do.

And the largest Ruritan National convention ever brought about 3,000 people to Virginia Beach during a time which is generally rather dull for the resort business. Oh, yes. They spent lots of money, too, an estimated $350,000.

The convention opened Sunday morning, but the highlight of that day came in the evening with the 40th anniversary celebration of Ruritan, and recognition of the charter members of that first club in Holland, Virginia. The club, now sixth in size of all service clubs, has grown from 35 men to nearly 35,000 and is still growing rapidly.

Virginia's Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr., was the speaker that night. He is a past president of Ruritan National, and his father-in-law, W.E. Beale, is a charter member of that first club.

The Governor told his audience that the values of rural Americans are at the heart of this country's self-searching of today.

Monday at the regular business session the keynote speaker, U.S. Sen. Howard H. Baker, Jr. of Tennessee discussed pressing governmental problems, including Vietnam and the Pueblo incident. In the afternoon sightseeing tours were arranged.

Monday night saw the first full banquet in the Dome and at the Cavalier Hotel. Closed circuit television provided by the Virginia Beach School Board made it possible for the two parts of the convention to be together. Numerous awards were made at that meeting and dignitaries were recognized.

Tuesday was really ladies' day. They took a tour of the Pembroke Mall Shopping Center, then had lunch with Miss America, Debra Barnes.

Election of officers came during the afternoon, and Tuesday night, another two-part banquet saw the installation of Charles H. Allen, Jr. of Sinks Grove, W. Va., as the new Ruritan National president as Robert H. Bailey stepped down. Miss America also entertained.

It was all over Wednesday morning with a breakfast meeting of the national board of directors, but it was a big convention and a pleasant one for both the Ruritans and for Virginia Beach. And it was all a credit to another past Ruritan National president, Frank W. Kellam of Virginia Beach.

Miss America 1968, Debra Barnes addresses a luncheon at the Commodore Club for the Ruritan ladies.

Three of the original members of the first Ruritan Club in America stand on the stage of the Virginia Beach Civic Center

The buses were lined up at Pembroke Mall Shopping Center waiting for the Ruritan ladies to return from a shopping tour.

It wasn't all work at the convention. The Ruritans had a little fun here with members chosen from the convention floor.

Local Option Is Here

In a way, it is anticlimax. All that remains before the local option liquor-by-the-drink bill becomes law is the Governor's signature and a waiting period until July 1.

The bill made it across the tough hurdles of committees, the House of Delegates and the State Senate. The votes were always close, but strong enough to show not only a change of heart of many legislators but also to mark this 1958 session of the Virginia General Assembly as a progressive legislature. That progressive nature must manifest itself manifold before the session is over.

Now the residents of Virginia Beach will have the right to sign a petition calling for a referendum. The question remains... Do the residents of Virginia Beach want liquor-by-the-drink? We think so. We hope so. At least now we really will have the right to find out.

This law does not permit a bar on every corner. It is a well-written law with tight restrictions and numerous controls, to be administered by the ABC Board. It does not force anyone to go out and drink. It merely puts the machinery in motion to allow a drink or two in pleasant atmosphere... and in public.

When possible we now urge the qualified voters of Virginia Beach to petition for the referendum, to pass it overwhelmingly over any opposition, moral, feeble or otherwise, then watch the change in Virginia Beach.

Liquor-by-the-drink is not a panacea for us, but it will bring more mature visitors who will stay longer and spend more money. And it will bring unprecedented growth to our resort industry, thus more revenue for the city. It is a step in the direction of progress. It was a tough step to take and it took a long time and a lot of work by our city's leaders, among others, but it was taken... at last.

We are pleased.

Judges Ackiss and Vakos

The Virginia General Assembly has confirmed the interim appointments of two judges of the Virginia Beach Circuit Court and has named them officially to regular bench terms. Both men, appointed since the last session of the legislature, although chosen by the governor, had to receive the vote of the legislators. Both have now received that vote of confidence.

That vote is not given easily. The men chosen must prove their judicial and legal ability and their fairness. Paul W. Ackiss in his many years as an attorney and now as a judge has proved both. George W. Vakos, as an attorney for the city and in private practice and as a municipal judge before being elevated, has also proved worthy of that vote of confidence.

We are happy the legislature has seen fit to confirm them for several years to come. They deserve the confidence of the General Assembly and of all of us.

Keep Them in School

Some years ago in a futile and perhaps foolish move to stave off integration, Virginia's compulsory school attendance law was wiped from the books. Upon more sober reflection years later individual communities began, one by one, to put the law on their books, no matter what the position of the state might be.

Now a bill has been introduced in the current session of the Virginia General Assembly that would put the state law back in the books for students ranging in age from 6-17. The bill is not necessarily a controversial one, nor is it necessarily a popular one. In fact, it has received little attention, although backed by some of the more astute lawmakers of Virginia.

Sen. William Hodges says it is futile to appropriate millions of dollars for education of our children when it is optional whether they wish to get an education or not. We agree, it would be simpler if the State would adopt this bill than to have a patchwork of community laws.

The age of 17 may be quarreled with by some, but we still believe it is better to have our children in school through that age, especially since they must face the far more complex problems of the world than most of us had to face.

We hope the bill will pass, purely in the interest of the education of our children. The law should never have been removed from the books in the first place.

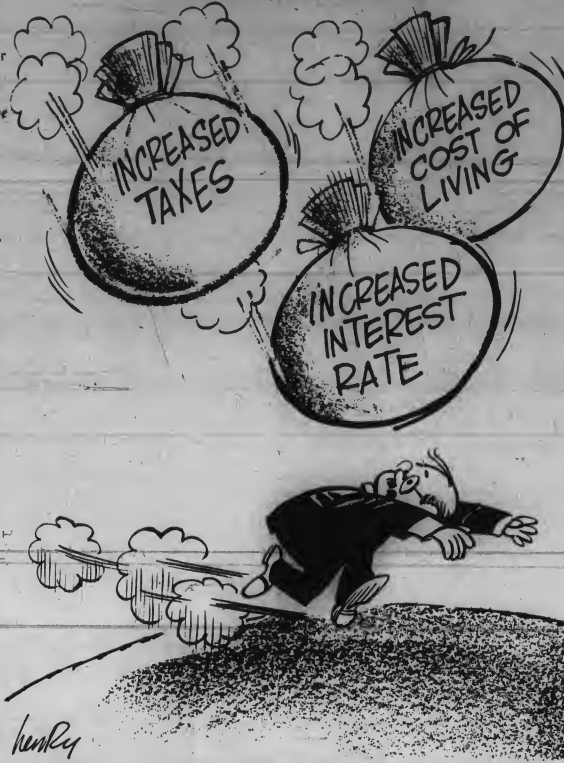

Heart Month

The causes of death that appear too often on death certificates offer persuasive testimony that the challenge of heart and blood vessel diseases are still the number one health problem here in Virginia Beach and all over our country.

These diseases are responsible for 54 per cent of all deaths in the nation, although the death rate has decreased by some 15 per cent in less than 20 years. The advances have come through research programs made possible by the Heart Fund, and the Heart Fund dollars have come from all of us.

The battle is not won. This is Heart Month. You will soon be contacted again by a Heart Fund volunteer. Give more this year, more of your time and more of your money, to a mighty worthy cause.

Direction For Mental Health

The newly opened Northern Virginia Mental Health Institute at Falls Church presents an example of what may be a new direction in the treatment and care of mental patients in the Old Dominion. The maximum stay at the institute will be limited to six months and hopefully the vast majority of the emotionally and mentally disturbed patients may be treated and returned to their respective communities within 60 days.

This new facility is but another forward movement of a carefully planned program uplifting the treatment of the mentally ill in the State. The Virginia Treatment Center for Children in Richmond and Petersburg Training School are other examples of these plans.

Few people have understood that Virginia's system of mental hospitals was established on a charitable and benevolent principle. While the Old Dominion may proudly proclaim to have established the first public mental hospital in the nation, the stark fact remains that the Williamsburg hospital was opened in 1773 because the alms houses of those times, run mostly by churches, became unable to care for the insane entrusted to their care. Therefore, Eastern State Hospital, as it is now known, was the extension of colonial concern for the welfare of their less fortunate citizens.

It was not until 1942 that the

The breath of life that we breathe is the closest and most necessary factor of our being. Therefore we must all be very much concerned about the purity of the air we breathe and we all know, too, that each one of us can help keep the air clean.

At almost any minute of the day, one can see and hear some "Some Air Pollution Antagonist," blasting away at the smokestacks, exhaust pipes and incinerators, while sitting across the table inhaling his self-made fumes, blowing into the faces of his friends and the residents.

Yes, human beings are highly paradoxical. I happen to know because I'm one of them. But we can all learn, as I did, the hard way.

It doesn't pay to feed into our lungs our self-made fumes. The cleanest air is none too good.

Get out into the big open spaces and "Deep Breathe" God's breath of life.

"OK," she said, "You wanted to get away for an entire weekend, and you did it. You got away from me, the kids and the cat. You had your weekend with the boys. So?"

"So, what?" he asked innocently.

"So, tell me about it, and don't you dare leave anything out."

"Well," he began, "the three of us had a ball. Imagine three old married men away from our wives for the first time in years."

"Be specific," she urged.

"Saturday night was the big night," he said, "We all took a nap until about 7:30, then showered and dressed in our best, so we three 'bachelors' could wow'em all. We sprinkled liberally with sweet-smelling foot powders."

"What is foot powder?" she asked, getting slightly irritated.

He was having a good time. "After shave lotion, of course," he said, "Then we went to a great restaurant, ordered a nice steak dinner and thrilled the waitress with our continuing instantaneous patter."

"I'll just bet you did."

"Then we decided the night was made for fun, so we went out and had some."

"What did you do?" she asked suspiciously.

"Do I have to tell you everything," he wanted to know.

"Yes."

"Well, we discussed it at length, and that took about 30 minutes," he said.

"And then?"

"Are you sure you want to know?"

"Yes."

"We figured we could really impress everyone at the—uh—uh—bowling alley, so we went there and had to wait nearly an hour for an alley. Can you imagine that? So we sat at the soda fountain and looked at girls."

She began to laugh. "Do you mean to tell me that three guys, away from their wives in another city, sprinkled themselves liberally with foot powder, took a nap, had a big dinner then went bowling?" By this time she was almost in hysterics and the question failed to impress him.

"What did you expect me to do?" he asked.

"Anything but bowling," she howled with laughter, "I trust you and all that, but bowling is just ridiculous."

"It's very healthy."

"Then what did you do?" she asked.

"We went to a quiet little place near the bowling alley and looked at girls, that is until their dates and husbands gave us dirty looks," he said like a kid admitting stealing one too many cookies. "Then we went home and listened to the record player and talked until we got sleepy."

"What time was that?"

"About 1:30 a.m. We went to bed."

"What a fun weekend you had," she said, still laughing.

"Yeah," he said with a sigh. "And the worst part is that it's all true."

"Now then," she said, "When can the three wives get away for the weekend alone?"

"What for?"

"Well, you can be sure of one thing," she laughed, "It won't be bowling. And when we go, don't forget to hand me the checkbook."

She was still laughing when he decided to go upstairs and watch television.

Have Spring Blooms in Winter

(Editor's note: Here is another in a series on home horticulture by Dr. Wesley Judkins, horticulture department, Virginia Tech.)

Those brown stems on your Forsythia and other spring flowering shrubs would burst into bloom if you bring them into the house. After all, the poor things have been out in the cold all winter. Indoors they will bloom in a relatively short time. The stems of many types of flowering shrubs and trees may be used for beautiful winter arrangements.

Do not be afraid that you will damage your shrubs by the removal of such stems. The cutting of branches from vigorous shrubs is a beneficial part of the pruning operation. This will help to renew the growth, and keep the bush in a low, well-proportioned form.

When cutting stems for indoor use, select those which will spaced side branches. Make a slanting cut at the base and place the stem in a container of cool, fresh water. Remove the buds and leaves from the basal part. Place the dormant branches in a warm, well-lit room until the flowers appear.

You need open, spreading growth to give good cut stems. Therefore, the best branches will be secured from shrubs at the edge of the open lawn area, or in a wide mixed border planting. Shrubs in the foundation planting around the house which are usually quite heavily pruned, will not provide attractive, well-shaped branches.

Many types of flowering shrubs and trees will add interest and beauty to your landscape and supply branches for decorative use. If you don't have them already, plant some of the following kinds this spring:

Forsythia is one of the most popular spring flowering shrubs with gay yellow flowers which appear before the foliage.

Winter Honeysuckle is a medium-size spreading shrub which produces fragrant white flowers in April. The berries are attractive to birds.

Fragrant Viburnum is a tall, erect shrub which has fragrant pink to white flowers in late March.

Japanese Andromeda is a tall compact, bushy evergreen shrub with white, urn-shaped flowers in sprays like Lily-of-the-Valley in late April.

Mountain Andromeda is a medium-size, compact, slow growing shrub which produces white flowers in upright open panicles.

Pussy Willow has large silky gray buds which add unique interest to early spring flower arrangements.

Fruit trees of many types will

Don't Wait; Propose to Him

Some American men may think that most American women think every year is Leap Year.

But the aggressive ladies have at least a vague justification in 1968: Leap Year—when, if he doesn't ask you, then you ask him.

1968: when, during the shortest month of the year, the Virginia Beach Sun will put out five issues, one for each Thursday.

1968: when all those babies with a Feb. 29 birthday suddenly attain the age of one year.

1968: with a presidential 1968: when all those ladies with a Feb. 29 birthday gain one year instead of four.

happy drinking and happy voting, and happy extra-24-hours.

Lady Ruritans Visit Pembroke

By Carolyn Owens

(Editor's Note: We told Miss Owens to go along with the ladies and record her own and their reactions to the day. The following is her account.)

What woman could resist a few hours' shopping when she's visiting a new city in another state? Robert Bundick, the host for about 300 checkbook-laden shoppers, warned them that while their Ruritan husbands were meeting in the Dome, they were completely on their own...

During the bus trip to our destination, Pembroke Mall, Mrs. R. Dale Miller, wife of a member of the Nominating Committee, said she wanted to shop for her 14 grandchildren back home in Lisbon, Ohio. Heads turned with assorted oohs and aahs when we passed Willis Wayside... several women mentioned how successful the closed-circuit television worked the previous evening, and that they were looking forward to Tuesday night when everyone would exchange places.

Waiting to greet us when our eight buses arrived was Mrs. Barbara Lettman, our official hostess who proved to be most thoughtful by providing an oasis of coffee... three huge containers. A merry-go-round of reindeer, both live and child-proof plastic stopped the determined ladies for only a moment because of a warning to return promptly at 12 noon.

Our reward for being on time was a luncheon at the Commodore Country Club on Southern Boulevard in honor of the special guest, Miss America, 1968, Debbie Barnes. Official welcome came from William P. Kellam and Robert Bailey, National President of the Ruritans. We had the pleasure of sitting with Miss America's chaperon who once was Miss Atlantic City.

They had just arrived from Las Vegas the night before, and tomorrow would be in Miami for one day. The schedule is so exhausting that two chap-terones alternate on monthly intervals, while Debbie keeps on being her charming self.

At the moment, they are awaiting approval of a trip to Vietnam in August. Last year's Miss America traveled 17 days there, did a total of 24 shows with one as far north as Da Nang, and found everything very gratifying and warmly received.

The highlight of the luncheon was our 20-year-old guest speaker who discussed how it feels to be Miss America. Debbie said that no matter where she goes, she is always treated with great respect. Her goal to achieve during this year is to show everyone that Miss America is more than a pretty face to be photographed; she wants to talk among all her acquaintances... get to know them personally.

All the women present agreed that the youth of America was well represented by a warm, sincere and beautiful young lady, Miss Debbie Barnes of Kansas.

This, That and So Forth...

It's all Eisenhower's fault. He was the one who made the nation aware of the lack of physical fitness in the United States.

Well, I'm definitely physically unfit after going bicycle riding with the five and six year old over the weekend. Not only am I sore, but I fell off in some gravel and scraped my elbow.

When we got as far as I planned on going and wanted to turn around, both girls protested that they weren't tired, and they wanted to go farther. They suggested the local school.

So, over my better judgement, we peddled off. Just about the time we got to the school, the five-year-old declared she was tired—too tired to ride any farther. At that point I was in no mood to walk home either. (May I add that Sturpees have marvelous recuperative powers on five year olds?)

We have a new staff member—not really new because she's been writing part time for us for several months. Now she's here fulltime.

She's Mary Wright, wife of a Naval officer, lives in Norfolk and educated at the University of Alabama. Also young, enthusiastic and eager. And doing a little bit of everything for the paper.

My husband has a black eye and I can't claim any credit for it, although I will admit there are times I would like to slug him. Unfortunately he's too tall for me to reach unless he's sitting down.

The six year old noticed it first while we were eating supper Sunday night. Sure enough, his right upper lid is black. But neither he nor I know how he did it—at least that's the story he's sticking to.

The kids are waiting in eager anticipation for our dog to have puppies. They're more expert on the subject than me.

Gypsy is really a strange-looking creature. She's half cocker and half poodle and looks like a black dust mop. But we have no idea of who or what the father of the puppies is. Anyhow, they should live up things around the house for awhile. Especially since the garage is too cold for puppies.

Sorority Celebrates 98th

Kappa Alpha Theta alumni celebrated their 98th Founders Day with a luncheon Saturday at Pine Tree Inn. Mrs. Jeanne Preston of Virginia Beach is president of the area-wide group.

A special guest at the meeting was Mrs. Samuel Thornton who wears a special gold pin which is presented to the 50-year members of the sorority. She joined at Purdue University.

Mrs. Jean Buckmaster, district president from Falls Church, spoke to the group about the aims and accomplishments of the sorority. She said that plans are already underway for the 100th birthday celebration to be held in 1970.

She said there are now 93 chapters of the sorority into which 77,000 young women have been initiated. There are 218 living 50-year members.

Alumni and collegiate chapters support a research institute, Foster Parents Plan and scholarships. Four new scholarships will be established in the name of the four sorority founders.

Mrs. Preston listens closely as Mrs. Buckmaster speaks.

An informal planning session at the home of Mrs. Schwartz, chairman to lay the groundwork for the Virginia Beach Council of Garden Clubs spring flower show.

Flower Show Plans Progress

Despite the ice on the ground on the day of the meeting, the Virginia Beach Council of Garden Clubs flower show committee shifted into high gear in preparation for the spring show.

The theme of the show is "A Thing of Beauty Is a Joy Forever." Tentative plans are for the show to be held March 9-11 at the Cavalier Cabana Club. Mrs. M.J. Schwartz is flower show chairman.

Present at the planning session at Mrs. Schwartz' home were Mrs. Joe Davis, Mrs. Norman Perry, Mrs. George Hamilton, Mrs. Richard Dunaj, Mrs. Malcolm Todd, Mrs. David Stormont, Mrs. Theodore Beasley, Mrs. E.A. Hoffmeister and Mrs. C.L. Hershberger, council president.

The council will meet at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 7 at Thalia Methodist Church.

The Ft. Eustis Army Community Service director and members of the ACS volunteer staff visited Ft. Story when ACS was initiated at the post. Left to right are: Maj. A.M. Dodson, Ft. Eustis program director; Mrs. Raymond I. Johnson, supervisor of Ft. Eustis ACS volunteers; Mrs. Thomas D. Emery, Col. Emery, Ft. Story Commander; 1st Lt. Glenn Miller, ACS program director at Ft. Story; Mrs. Richard W. Aronson, from Ft. Eustis; Col. Thomas H. Hoy, Ft. Story Deputy Commanding Officer.

Ft. Story Initiates Program For Help During Emergencies

Ft. Story ended the first month of the new year by initiating a family service project—Army Community Service—that will involve the post's entire 600-family population.

Lt. Glenn Miller, the officer in charge of the project, called an orientation luncheon at the post officers' club, Jan. 22, to familiarize the post's ranking personnel and the project volunteer workers with the project plans. Officers from Ft. Eustis' Army Community Service, which has been functioning for several years, attended the luncheon.

Ft. Story officers attending the luncheon included Col. Thomas Emery, post commanding officer; Lt. Col. Thomas H. Hoy, Deputy Commanding Officer; and battalion commanders Lt. Col. Robert J. Warner and Lt. Col. Everett G. Topham. Volunteer workers for ACS, at least initially, will be the post officers' and non-commissioned officers' wives, whose work will be coordinated by Mrs. Everett Topham wife of Lt. Col. Topham. Lt. Miller hopes that eventually the volunteer work will extend to include retired wives, the wives of civilian employees at the post, the whole Ft. Story community," he said.

The service will provide, among other things, emergency baby-sitting facilities for wives and emergency transportation, explained Lt. Miller.

He stressed the fact that the service will be especially helpful to wives who are at Ft. Story without their "sponsor," their husband. The service will try to make the going easier for the families of Army men who are on unaccompanied tours—to Vietnam, for example.

Ft. Story's ACS will extend beyond Tidewater. When a family leaves the Ft. Story area, Lt. Miller's office will contact the Army Community Service in the area to which the family is moving.

Again, this will be particularly helpful to husbandless, fatherless families, Lt. Miller pointed out. There will be someone at the new post who is expecting them, and ready to help with any problems involved with moving.

Wesleyan Outlines Future of Library

Virginia Wesleyan College expects to increase the volumes in its library to more than 10,000 by June of this year.

This objective was among goals for 1968 outlined by Pres. Lambuth M. Clarke speaking to the education committee of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce last week. The group met for lunch and tour at the college.

Clarke reported that Wesleyan had 7,607 books catalogued in the college's library in September of 1967. That number has now increased to approximately 9,000, and Librarian E. Samuel Clay III, expects to add at least 1,500 more books by the end of this academic session in June. Virginia Wesleyan received a $5,300 grant last spring from the U.S. Office of Education for library resources. Most of this is being spent for new books.

The college has also received $7,500 from the General Board of Education of the Methodist Church for books. An additional grant of $2,500 is to be received for books from the Board of Education in 1968. Virginia Wesleyan continues to receive books and contributions from individuals in the area.

Virginia Wesleyan will begin construction on a new 210,000-volume library in March 1968 for completion in August 1969. "Of course, it will be years before we have that number of volumes," said Clarke, "but this will give us an excellent facility in which to expand as the college continues to grow."

In outlining other plans for 1968, Clarke said the college will expand the curriculum for next fall with majors in at least eight areas within the liberal arts curriculum and will expand the evening program. There are now 12 members of the fulltime faculty at Wesleyan. The president indicated a desire to add six new faculty members to that number for next fall. Wesleyan also has eight part-time faculty members scheduled to teach in the evening program for the spring semester beginning in February.

Clarke anticipates about the same number of part-time faculty members for next fall. Fourteen courses are to be offered in the evening program for spring semester; that number will be increased slightly in the fall. In the total academic program courses are now being offered in 18 areas of study at Wesleyan.

Pres. Clarke also suggested plans to begin a teacher training program for junior level students in September. This will include the required courses in education and practice teaching. The college is now working closely with the State Department of Education in developing plans for this program.

The Wesleyan president told the education committee that the new college is planning to institute a visiting lecturer program in the fall and is exploring the possibility of a community fine arts series.

Clarke offered the use of Virginia Wesleyan's facilities to groups, particularly for summer conferences. He indicated that college officials do not at this time foresee having a summer session in 1968.

Virginia Wesleyan, now in its second year of operation, has a total enrollment of 287 (155 fulltime freshmen and sophomores and 132 part-time students in the evening program.) College officials expect to increase the total enrollment by about 100 students each year toward a projected enrollment of 1,200 in 10 to 15 years.

John McDonald Is Nominated

John R. McDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. McDonald of Wakefield Drive, Virginia Beach, was among six young men nominated by Rep. Thomas N. Downing to compete for appointment to the entering class of 1968 at the U.S. Military Academy at Westpoint, N. Y.

McDonald has also received a nomination to join the Naval ROTC program. He attends The Bullis School, a preparatory school at Silver Spring, Md., from which he will graduate in May.

Newly developed drugs and combinations of drugs can arrest leukemia for a time, but there is no prevention or cure.

Trawler Snags Rare Shark

A bramble shark, or briar shark, was caught recently off the Virginia coast by a scientist aboard the research vessel Sea Breeze, an ocean trawler under charter by the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS) to conduct research on industrial fishing species.

According to scientists, the bramble shark is very rare in the Western Atlantic, though not uncommon in the Eastern Atlantic from West Africa to the North Sea. Its occurrence off Virginia is considered accidental.

Dr. John A. Musick, VIMS ichthyologist and chief scientist aboard the Sea Breeze, indicated that the shark was caught, indicated that only two bramble sharks are recorded as having been caught in the Western Atlantic.

The shark measured 7 1/2 feet long and weighed 250 pounds, according to Dr. Musick. The catch was made some 75 miles ENE of Cape Henry, said Capt. W.E. Mansfield of the Sea Breeze.

VIMS has donated the shark to the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, D.C. for its scientific and educational committee.

Dr. Musick said that the species of shark poses no threat to swimmers.

Dr. John E. Musick examines rare bramble shark caught last Saturday by VIMS scientists during research work off the Virginia Coast.

McGehee Succeeds Gordon

Robert L. Gordon, Jr., president of First & Merchants National Bank, has been named chief executive officer and C. Coleman McGehee, executive vice president, was named to succeed Gordon as chief administrative officer.

At the stockholders meeting preceding the board meeting McGehee was elected director of the bank. The action came following the retirement of J. Phillips Coleman, formerly chairman.

Gordon has been president since Coleman was elevated to chairman in January, 1966. McGehee was named executive vice president at that time. Gordon began with the bank in 1923 and was a vice president and trust officer until his election as executive vice president in 1962.

McGehee joined the bank in 1948 and became a trust officer in 1956. He was elected vice president in 1959, senior vice president in 1962 and executive vice president in 1966.

Seat Belts Needed In Traffic

Traffic accidents are responsible for 50,000 deaths a year. This great toll makes it imperative that everyone be traffic safety-conscious.

The wise motorist knows that the seat belt represents the best available equipment in reducing critical or fatal injuries, according to the American Insurance Association.

All occupants of a vehicle should wear seat belts—at all times. It is a fact that over half of the accidents causing injury or death occur at speeds less than 40 miles per hour, and that three out of four traffic deaths occur within 25 miles of home.

It has been estimated that if all motorists used seat belts, more than 5,000 lives would be saved each year and injuries reduced by one-third, the Association said.

Curry Is Secret of Exotic Cooking

While it takes 24 hours, more or less, to jet to Bombay, India from any airport in this country, the quickest way to create an Indian atmosphere is to open a container of curry powder and breathe in its exotic aroma.

The word "curry" means simply "sauce" in India, a richly spiced sauce. It can be thick, thin or medium. It can cover meat, fowl, seafood, vegetables or almost anything not sweet. Whether very pungent as are the curries of southern India, or milder as preferred in the north, there are as many varieties of curries as there are cooks in India.

There are, for instance, kormas or dry curries in which the sauce clings to the meat or other solid food; vindaloos, which must be marinated for a day in a tart, spiced sauce; koftas, meaning meat balls in a curry sauce. Very popular is a "wide-mouth curry" which is a mixture of meats, vegetables, nuts, lentils in a spiced sauce.

While Indian cooks begin each curry by grinding or crushing the different spices needed, convenience-minded homemakers in the United States prefer to use a carefully blended curry powder. All commercial curry powders are richly aromatic blends of different spices, more or less pungent. Curry powder formulas vary, but all are sure to include cayenne, coriander, cumin, fenugreek and turmeric. They may also contain one or more spices such as allspice, cinnamon, cardamom, cloves, fennel, ginger, mace, yellow mustard and black or white pepper.

Curry powder is the oldest of spice blends. Seafaring men returning from the Far East brought packets of curry powder to this country almost two centuries ago. Curry powder is essential in Indian-type dishes, but it gives teasing aroma to all kinds of familiar dishes: pea soup, chicken gravy, potato salad, dips and sandwich fillings.

These recipes for delicious Indian or Anglo-Indian dishes seasoned with curry powder come to us from the test kitchens of the American Spice Trade Association.

Lamb Korma, one of the world-famous dishes of India, owes its delicious aroma to curry powder.

LAMB KORMA

2 lb. boneless lamb
1/2 c. yogurt
1 teas. ground cumin seed
1 teas. ground turmeric
3 T. salad oil
2/3 c. onion flakes
1/2 teas. instant minced garlic
1 T. curry powder
2 1/2 teas. salt
1 teas. ground ginger
2 T. grated coconut
Hot cooked rice

Trim and discard excess fat from lamb; cut into 1 inch cubes. Blend together yogurt, cumin and turmeric. Add lamb cubes and marinate one or more hours. Remove lamb from marinade and saute in large saucpan in 1 T. of the oil. Meantime mix onion flakes and instant minced garlic in 1/2 c. water; let stand 5 min. to soften. Add to saucpan with the remaining 2 T. oil and saute until golden. Add curry powder and salt. Cook, stirring, 2 min. Cover saucpan tightly and cook slowly 20 min. or until lamb is tender. Add 1 c. water. Stir to form smooth gravy. Cover and continue cooking 25 min. Add lemon juice and coconut just before serving. Serve with rice. Yield: 6 portions.

SHRIMP CURRY

4 T. butter or margarine
4 T. flour
4 teas. curry powder
2 c. milk
1/2 teas. salt
1/4 teas. ground black pepper
1/4 teas. ground ginger
1 lb. shrimp, canned or cooked fresh
5 c. hot cooked rice

Melt butter in saucpan; add flour and curry powder; blend well. Remove from heat. Add milk gradually, stirring until smooth. Return to heat and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add salt, black pepper and ginger. Fold in shrimp and heat thoroughly. Serve with rice. Yield: 4 portions

KEDGEREE

2 lb. halibut
3 T. butter or margarine
1/4 c. onion flakes
1/16 teas. ground black pepper
2 teas. salt
1 c. rice
2 teas. instant minced onion
2 packages (2 oz. each) white sauce mix*
1 c. strained fish stock
1 c. milk
1 T. curry powder
2 hard cooked eggs, diced

Cut fish into large pieces. Add 2 1/2 c. water, 1 T. of the butter, onion flakes, pepper and 1 teas. of the salt. Bring to boiling point; reduce to low heat and cook until fish is tender, about 30 minutes. Meantime, melt remaining 2 T. butter in medium-sized saucpan. Add rice and cook, stirring constantly, until browned. Add 2 1/2 c. boiling water, minced onion and the remaining salt. Simmer, covered, 25 to 30 min. or until liquid is absorbed and rice is tender. Remove fish; set aside. Strain and reserve fish stock. Prepare sauce mix according to package directions, using fish stock, milk and 1 c. water as liquid. Add curry powder and cook as directed. Add eggs. Combine with rice; add fish and heat 5 min. Serve hot. Yield: 6 portions

* 3 cups basic thin white sauce, made with fish stock and milk, may be substituted for packaged sauce mix.

Green Now

Fifty years ago, just after World War I, 16 out of 17 varieties of commercial celery were yellow, only one green. Since that time the green or pascal varieties have been sweetened and crisped to a point where the color scheme has been reversed. Florida celery yellows are a rich green; any yellow or golden celery is intended for European use.

Color Works

Wonders on Rooms

Suddenly...that large bare room is intimate, cozy well-coming—even if some of its furnishings are a year's budget away...

Or, that narrow, cramped hallway now seems to have enough space to walk through without feeling squeezed.

These and other "magic tricks" can be economically achieved through the use of paint!

According to a report issued by the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, color experiments at Johns Hopkins University have shown that certain hues have amazing effects on our eyes and emotions.

Warm colors—red, orange and yellow—attract and stimulate to such a degree that a wall painted with them will seem to advance, or become closer to the viewer.

Cool colors—blue, green or violet—calm and soothe, and walls so painted appear to recede, or give the viewer an illusion that he is surrounded by more space than he actually is.

(Airlines have discovered that color can stimulate or depress the appetite. Green foods like salads make travelers feel serene—yellow ones like squash may help promote sickness.)

But at home, at least the walls stay in one place—and here are some tricks with colors to solve your decorating problems:

1. Need to open up a small room? Use the same light cool shade of paint on all four walls and ceilings—and paint the woodwork the same color.

To go even further, use a matching scheme in the same shade for the room's rug—and key curtains and slip covers to the same color note.

2. Need to shorten a long room? If you own few pieces of furniture yet have a long narrow rectangle of a living room, try painting a dark shade of a warm color on the end walls.

This will help "pull the room together" and provide a striking background for the furniture which is already there.

Putting your sofa or other large piece of furniture on one of these end walls will help "back it up" and lend a feeling of coziness.

3. Need "shadows"? The hardest wear areas of the house, kitchen, bathroom, and all their dust-catching woodwork—may need a low gloss paint (of whatever color) to disguise their shortcomings.

Until recently, paint for such surfaces was old shiny, light-reflecting—and had to be, in order to be washable.

On the market today, however, is a new paint called Satinhide Latex Lo-Lustre Enamel, which combines soap and water clean-up advantages with low sheen. It dries fast and can be applied with brush, roller or spray. (Short nap covers are recommended for synthetic bristle brushes.)

4. Need to "widen" a long, dark passageway? Paint it white all over—and add a white "bubble-type" lighting fixture.

A small, very narrow table—which won't impede progress—will help it look larger by suggesting a smaller "scale" by comparison.

If passage permits, try putting up very narrow (eight-inch) bookshelves, which "lead"—by their horizontal suggestion—into the next room.

5. Need to create more harmony in a room? If furniture really doesn't match too well in scale or period, try painting it all the same color.

Decorators say that more than three colors in a room—like too much jewelry on a woman—distract the eye and even give a feeling of clutter.

To pick your shades, use a color wheel (your neighborhood library) which shows how to pick shades by hue (the color itself) the value (lightness or darkness) and the chroma (brightness or intensity.)

And then put that old color magic to work!

For Tender Eggs

Too much heat makes eggs tough and "rubbery." To enjoy tender cooked eggs, use low cooking temperatures—and the shortest possible cooking time.

Fashion Includes Make-Up

1968 will be the year of The Little Girl Look, but this little girl grows everywhere with a frankly feminine face and she is worldly wise in the ways of make-up. She looks more natural, yet uses more cosmetics than ever before.

Actually, she'll mirror many moods and will reflect the highly individual woman. The face of '68 reminisces of a romantic portrait framed with a frothy, fluffy coiffure. Hemlines stay short but the fashion silhouette bursts into frills of femininity, particularly at the neckline.

Helena Rubinstein, pacesetter in creating the beautiful face, dictates more important lips, softly-accented, sensual eyes, warm skin tones glowing with soft dewy texture and coiffures that are airy and light. Color returns to the lips—at least two tones at a time. Pure, vibrant colors will combine with frosty companions to create innumerable effects, a myriad of moods. Leading contenders for fashion awards will be a warm rosy hue, a brilliant coral, and a hot pink.

Eyes will glimmer with color, too, with sometimes as many as three shades applied on the lids. But this rainbow design is so beautifully blended that the effect is amazingly soft and subtle. Brows will be feathery, stroked slightly upward. Eyelashes will be more important than ever before. They will become an essential ingredient in creating the beautiful face. They range in a variety of textures to suit the face, the mood, and the occasion.

Navy Wives' Club Notes

By Mary Wright

Fl. Story Officers wives held a luncheon—"fashion" show at the post Officers' Club Thursday, Jan. 25.

The clothes, modeled by wives, were donated for the show by the Thrift Shop operated by the Wives' Club.

Mrs. Kenneth Blunt, club president, said that the narration of the show was handled very seriously in sharp contrast to the Thrift Shop clothes being shown.

Mrs. Thomas H. Hoy, chairman of the Thrift Shop, arranged the program around an "Anything Goes" theme.

Mrs. Blunt explained that the Thrift Shop, located across from the commissary in building T-563, was operated for the benefit of both the club and the wives.

The wife-donor decides on a price for the item placed in the Thrift Shop for sale. The shop gets a percentage of all items sold. If the item is not sold within three months, the shop assumes ownership.

LITTLE CREEK

The Amphibious Force Officers' Wives Club will hold a luncheon Wednesday, Feb. 14 at the Little Creek Officers' Club.

The Navy Show Band from the School of Music, located at the Amphibious Base, will entertain the wives after the luncheon.

AT OCEANA

Spring fashions will be on the runway Wednesday, Feb. 14, at the Oceana Officers' Club.

The coffee-fashion show, which begins at 10:30, will be given by the USS Independence (CVA-62) wives. Wives of other area commands have been invited.

Spring clothes, modeled by Independence wives, are on loan from Burkes'; shoes and accessories come from Hoffmeyer's, and Virginia Beach Little Theater actress Angela Walker will commentate.

Mrs. Lewis Kriser is chairman.

DAM NECK GMS

Mrs. Teresa Kane will hostess the Dam Neck Guided Missile School officers' wives at a coffee at her Kirkwood Lane home, Feb. 21, at 10 p.m.

Mrs. Lesley R. Simpson, from the Norfolk Volunteer Workshop, will talk to the wives about Eastern State Hospital at Dunbar. The club is tentatively planning a clothes drive to begin next month for the hospital.

Richard of Helena Rubinstein has designed a coiffure, with fluff on the crown, puffs at the sides, and sleek "sideburns" and bangs. The effect achieved is one of feathery softness delicately framing the face for '68's Little Girl Look.

Color on lips and eyes is complemented by warm glowing skin tones. A new way to apply foundation will leave the complexion looking dewy and silky soft.

The coiffure that will frame fashion's face in 1968 will pour into a puff of fluff in unexpected places—at the nape, at the tip of the crown, or asymmetrically to one side. These light, airy effects will contrast with silky smooth bands of hair elsewhere in the coiffure.

Right now, the all-American apple can be found everywhere. McIntosh, Red and Golden Delicious, York, Winesap—there's no end to the variety from bright or russet red to yellow to green. And apples fit into every course in every meal.

You can pay anywhere from 15¢ a pound to 25¢. Pick them to save pennies. Usually the big beauties will cost more, and should be reserved for the fruit bowl. For turning into sauce, butter or jelly, for fruit or Waldorf salad, for fritters or for frying with ham, pork chops or bacon, the small ones cost less and are ideal. They're also delicious as sautéed apple rings with hamburgers.

And what tastes better this time of year than home-made apple pie. I'm sure you will have your favorite recipe, but don't you agree no pie is better than its crust? Here is my suggestion for a NEVER FAIL PIE CRUST.

Cut 1 1/2 cups solid shortening into 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour and 1 teaspoon salt, using a pastry blender or two knives. Combine 1 egg, well beaten, 5 tablespoons water and 1 tablespoon vinegar. Pour this liquid mixture all at once into the flour mixture. Blend with a fork. Makes two 8 or 9-inch double crust pie shells. And with your favorite apple filling, it should cost less than 90¢. To bake it 40 or 45 minutes, the electricity should cost no more than 2¢. Quite a bargain, electricity. Next time you bake, think about it.

Third of a Series

Tourists 'Overlook' Memorial

By Jack Harris

This is the third in a series of reports dealing with a trip that this reporter recently took as a guest of the Secretary of Navy.

Our tour included a four day ride on the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise and a four day stay on the island of Oahu, Hawaii. In this article we will talk about Pearl Harbor Naval Base, pinpointed by many as our most important naval base in terms of location.

The only thing small about Pearl Harbor is the entrance, which is barely 400 feet wide. It embraces a Naval shipyard, submarine base, naval base, naval air station, fleet training center, Marine barracks and an ammunition depot.

In this reporter's opinion, every American of this and future generations should, if possible, visit Pearl Harbor. The still visible scars of the infamous 1941 Japanese attack present a grim reminder that no history book can match. How many of us, for example, can name the U. S. battleships anchored in the harbor during the attack?

We learned that the first wave of Japanese planes did not bomb Pearl Harbor. Instead, they struck on the opposite side of the island, bombing a marine airfield. The story was told to us that a civilian, on the Marine base, realized what was happening and called Naval officials at Pearl Harbor alerting them of the attack. The call, it is said, was treated as a practical joke.

Once over Pearl Harbor the Jap planes spread their bombs on the huge battleship that lay at anchor, completely ignoring the Pearl Harbor submarine base. This proved to be a costly oversight. Pearl Harbor based submarines later were to send more than 13,000 Japanese ships to the bottom.

One part of our visit to Pearl Harbor Naval Base was a 45 minute tour of the harbor by water. Huge concrete moorings that anchored down such illustrious battleships as the Maryland, West Virginia, Tennessee, Utah, Pennsylvania and Arizona still are visible.

Many of these ships withstood the barrage of Japanese bombs and lived to fight another day. Two did not. The USS Utah and the USS Arizona.

Of the two, the Arizona is best remembered because hers was the greatest loss. Historians say the huge ship, first struck by a torpedo, received a "perfect air hit," estimated to be 1,000 pound bomb. Staffed with a crew of 1,473 men and officers, only 289 survived. Still intombed in the hulk of the Arizona are the remains of 1,102 men.

Many people justifiably wonder why these men were left in the ship. The Arizona was hit hard and she sank fast. Two navy divers lost their lives trying salvage attempts. When navy officials determined it was impossible to raise the ship, permission was asked and received from the next of kin to leave these men on ship. They are there today.

Our water tour included a stop off at the Arizona Memorial. The memorial was built across the Arizona hulk at a cost of some $500,000, most of this money being raised by private donation. As one moves inside the memorial the full impact of the Pearl Harbor attack hits home. A huge plaque is erected at one end of the memorial, proudly bearing the names of every man who died, many of them below the very spot on which you stand.

At low tide it is relatively easy to see what remains of the bow and stern sections of the huge ship. Small spots of oil from the Arizona's engine room still pop to the water's surface from 45 feet down, this after 29 years. . . it is eerie and sobering!

Hawaii's Chamber of Commerce figures indicate that some one million Americans, living on the mainland, visited the islands last year. Of this number only 20 percent, or one of every five, took the time to visit Pearl Harbor. This figure is appalling, particularly when you note that free Navy tours are available, as well as commercial tours.

Perhaps the answer would be a Pearl Harbor Memorial building, housing replicas of the ships that were bombed, displaying ship flags and, of course, a complete listing of those who were lost. The idea is not original. It has been talked up by many but action is nil. Is it not reasonable to say that Pearl Harbor deserves the same reverence and recognition of The Alamo, Gettysburg and Yorktown?

The cost of such a memorial could rightfully be passed on to the American tourist. For while Pearl Harbor should never in any sense be tagged as a tourist attraction, it could indeed become a shrine, standing boldly on the island of Oahu, presenting a constant reminder to friends and foes alike that America remembers.

Some high ranking Navy officials, while understandably not wishing to be quoted, are visibly concerned over the fact the Arizona Memorial stands alone as a reminder of the attack on Pearl Harbor. A Navy captain, assigned to the USS Utah during the attack, told us that a Congressional Medal of Honor winner went down with the ship. This Captain allegedly has written to Utah state officials in an effort to stir up some action. . . so far, nothing!

To this reporter, visible steps should be taken to keep Pearl Harbor, and its history, correctly in focus. Many Americans, in addition to the honored dead of the Arizona, gave their lives. It would seem that they, too, should have their names inscribed in history. In this way their sons, daughters and descendants could more easily carry the burden of loss.

The recent announcement by President Johnson that tourist travel abroad by Americans will be curtailed sharply unquestionably will increase what already can be classified "of a city" tourist trade in the islands.

Next week we report on an exciting day with Uncle Sam's fighting Leathernecks. A visit to the interior jungle of Oahu and a first hand report on how the Viet Cong really "get" to the marines!

Center Report Expected After 'Eye Opening' Trip

Marshall

Bonney

Ferrell

R. Scott

S. Scott

"I don't think we're any closer to a new convention center-coliseum in Virginia Beach than we were before the trip, but we've seen a lot of things that have opened our eyes," said Councilman Lawrence Marshall at the conclusion of a three-day trip to look over several southern convention complexes.

Marshall, Councilmen Albert Bonney and George Ferrell, Assistant City Manager Roger Scott and Civic Center Director Sam Scott left Virginia Beach Sunday to visit convention centers, coliseums and auditoriums similar in nature to what is envisioned for Virginia Beach in the future.

Marshall is chairman of the Mayor's committee appointed late last year to look into the feasibility of building a new complex or expanding the old one. The committee has been doing a great deal of groundwork and is expected to complete its report soon, especially now that the trip has been made.

The five-man delegation traveled to Memphis, Monroe, (Louisiana) Miami, Miami Beach, St. Petersburg and Atlanta before returning to Virginia Beach late yesterday. A scheduled stop in New Orleans was cancelled because of bad weather. No plane connections could be made.

All of the facilities visited were fairly new ones, and before the trip Marshall told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, the committee had "no preconceived notions."

After the tour, Marshall said, "I was particularly impressed with the stadium in Memphis. It's the most outstanding one we saw for the money."

The stadium, with its fiber-glass seats cost about $3.5 million, and officials told the committee it could be completely covered for another $1.5 million, Marshall said this type of stadium was "extremely feasible" in Tidewater, but that he did not think it could be strictly a Virginia Beach stadium. It seats 50,125 and is the home of the annual Liberty Bowl game.

Marshall said the committee saw several beautiful convention-cultural center complexes, but that each member was particularly impressed with the one in Monroe, La., where Bill Lillim, former director of the Dome at Virginia Beach, is now director.

It has a theatre which seats

2,300, an arena for sports or conventions which holds 7,000 and has dining facilities for 1,800 persons. It can accommodate any indoor sports event or ice show, according to Marshall. "The unbelievable thing is that it was built for only $6 million," said Marshall. He added that this figure is exceptionally low for such a facility. Monroe is a small town and serves a total trade area of only 100,000, a far smaller area than Tidewater.

"Without exception, everyone we have talked to has suggested we consider a one-sport stadium only," said Marshall. "They say make it either football or baseball, not both." Football is the sport discussed for a Tidewater stadium.

Marshall said the committee took a number of pictures and soon will make its report to Council.

"Ocean City, Md. is planning to build a new complex," said Marshall. "If they can do it, I know we can."

The committee made the trip at an estimated cost of $1,500 to the city.

Officials Praise Probe No Public Funds For Development

"We feel like we have it pretty well cleaned up now" Those were the words of Police Chief James E. Moore when questioned by the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN on the status of the movement of marijuana through the city of Virginia Beach.

More than 60 persons, the majority of whom are adults, have been charged with various offenses as a result of the investigation which began nine days ago. By Tuesday afternoon, two men had been convicted, but had noted appeals. The investigation involved several public high schools of the city, and resulted in several juveniles being charged under the state's incorrigible statute. It has been pointed out during coverage of the investigation that the number of juveniles involved in the case represent only a minute percentage of the juveniles living in the city.

See Related Story, p. 12

Chief Moore told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN of his satisfaction with the investigation, saying "I certainly have got to say it was a job well done through the concerted cooperation of our men, school officials and the parents of youngsters concerned. The job certainly could not have been done if we hadn't had 100 percent cooperation from the school officials, school faculty, students and parents. As we draw to a close on this investigation we look forward to future cooperation, so the situation can not grow back to where it was."

When questioned to whether or not the investigation led to any sources of marijuana in Virginia Beach, Chief Moore replied, "We think we have rounded up most of the pushers in this area."

Chief Moore also indicated how strongly authorities feel about maintaining control over movement of marijuana when he said, "The investigation is continuing in regards to other areas. I would certainly ask support of the public in general, and parents of school children, to work closely with the Police Department and furnish any information they can regarding narcotics."

No city funds are contemplated for sewer lines for a relatively remote area near Sandbridge, known as Lagomar, according to City Manager W. Russell Hatchett.

"There are too many densely developed areas of Virginia Beach that also need sewer lines," said Hatchett, "for us to use public funds for this one area."

Lagomar is a private development of highly restricted homesites at Sandbridge, where no one can buy without approval of the board of directors. When the area was originally planned a small sewage disposal plant was contemplated, but the land would not meet percolation tests.

Hatchett said he was familiar with the case and that he had talked with the developers, one of whom is John Aragona, after the percolation had failed, but that he had offered them no hope that city funds could install sewer lines.

He added that there are several other developments in the area, and that if the owners joined together and sought approval from City Council, they could possibly get the lines installed at their own expense.

because of the rapid growth there.

When Hatchett was informed that there was speculation the city might pay for the lines, he said, "I don't know anything about that whatsoever. To my knowledge it has never even been discussed."

Cronkite, Hatchett Advocate Same Action

One of the highlights of the 14th Commemorative session of the Virginia General Assembly in Williamsburg last weekend was a speech by CBS commentator, Walter Cronkite, who admonished the legislators to do much the same things that Virginia Beach City Manager W. Russell Hatchett has been advocating for some time.

Cronkite told the joint session of the legislature meeting in the halls of the old House of Burgesses at the restored Colonial Capitol that they "must become radicals and seek bold new solutions" as did their forefathers prior to the American Revolution.

He urged heading dissenters "and leading or at least joining the revolutionists."

Hatchett has on several occasions advocated "fast growth" legislation to be passed by the Assembly and has been a critic of the way the state is meeting problems of this area for the future.

Hatchett says, "The legislature bases what it does on normalcy, and Virginia Beach is not a normal area. We are growing fast and we need new solutions."

Gov. Mills E. Godwin has said he believes the state is moving ahead well, and that he does not see any real problems in the regard.

Godwin was also on the speaker's platform at Williamsburg along with Arkansas Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller. Rockefeller is chairman of the board Virginia Beach Del. B.R. Middleton walks next to Norfolk Del. Bernard Levin (with hat) as members of the Virginia General Assembly enter the old Virginia Capitol at Williamsburg to the musical escort of the Fife and Drum Corps.

City Council Meeting May Be 'Explosive'

Virginia Beach City Council meets again on Feb. 12 and will take up zoning matters, some of which were delayed from the last zoning meeting in early January, and one which could be fairly explosive.

Council is also expected to hear an interim report on a proposed minimum housing code ordinance for the city that has been pending for nearly a year.

Several councilmen called the matter "premature" in early 1967 when the ordinance first came before Council. A committee was appointed to study the plan and to make recommendations to Council.

Councilman Al Bonney is chairman of the committee working with the City Department of Health, Councilman Lawrence Marshall and City Attorney Harry Marshall also serve on the committee.

One of the zoning matters deferred until this meeting concerns a car wash and gas station near Plaza Trail on Virginia Beach Boulevard. The matter has been deferred since December.

Other final action will be on an application of the Virginia Beach Little Theatre to have land at 24th Street and Barborton Drive zoned to build a new theatre there in the future.

A 10-unit motel on Atlantic Avenue near 24th Street will also be reconsidered. An application which received so much opposition at the January meeting of the City Planning Commission may be withdrawn. The application is by a corporation headed by Norfolk realtor, Charles De Journette to build 245 apartment units in the Fair Meadows area. The apartments were to be built in conjunction with the First United Church of Christ for HUD low-rent housing, but church spokesmen indicated earlier that their association with the realtor had ended and that they were looking for other land.

If the application is not withdrawn, there is strong speculation it will not be approved by Council.

Decision Pleases Mgr.

"I think it's the greatest news I've heard since I've been in public office," said W. Russell Hatchett, Virginia Beach City Manager. "Now I only wish we could get the back money due us all these years."

Hatchett was reacting to the three-judge federal court which Tuesday handed down a strongly worded decision striking down the State's formula for distributing federal impact funds to localities.

Under the present setup the state takes all the money given by the federal government for aid to federally-connected students and gives the localities only half of what was originally designated for that locality. The rest is used statewide.

In Virginia Beach alone in the present school year, this means the city has lost over $1 million.

The decision will either cause a revamping of the state budget or an appeal will be made but Hatchett said he did not see on what grounds the state could appeal.

"This will help tremendously with my new budget," said Hatchett, who has long been outspoken on the state's distribution of federal funds.

A Hillside of Garbage, Dirt

This region on Bendix Road in Kempsville Borough, presently being used by the city for unloading trash and garbage collections in the city of Virginia Beach, is the proposed future site of a new amphitheater for Virginia Beach.

Hospitality House -- No Home Again

"Like the 'ol boil weevil, the United Church Hospitality House is lookin' for a home ... again."

The building used by the Hospitality House for servicemen here last summer has been torn down. The year before that it was in the basement of the annex to the General Hospital of Virginia Beach, now reactivated. Several other past places have also been torn down or otherwise been rendered unserviceable.

The Hospitality House is a joint operation of the United Communities Fund and the Virginia Beach Ministerial Association, with help from the Department of Parks and Recreation of the City of Virginia Beach.

But the problem is that there is no place for the Hospitality House to rent or buy this year ... so far.

Anyone having suggestions is asked to contact the president of the ministerial association, the Rev. Thomas H. Britton, minister of Lynnhaven Colony United Church.

NEXT WEEK: THE PROBLEMS OF THE HOSPITALITY HOUSE

Building Prospect Looks Good

The prospect for construction in Virginia Beach in 1968 is excellent. If January is any indication, a report issued by John Gibbs, superintendent of the Inspection Division of the city shows that 236 building permits were issued during the first month of this year for work totaling $4,003,504.

Last year a total of 174 permits issued in January amounted to $2,898,332.

Single residence permits accounted for 103 of the new permits, while 34 permits were issued for 129 multiple family units or apartments.

Planning Commission Faces Short Docket

The next regular meeting of the Virginia Beach Planning Commission will be held in Municipal Court at City Hall on Feb. 13 at 2 p.m. The docket is somewhat shorter than usual, although Council has re-referred several items to the Planning Commission.

One of the items re-referred concerns an application of the Lerak Investment Corporation for rezoning of land at Lynnhaven Road and Holland Road.

Planning Commission recommendations to deny the change brought about a mild furor in the last Council meeting when an attorney for the corporation used the word "deal" in discussing what he said he thought was a "foregone conclusion" of zoning approval.

Some 15 other items are expected to come before the commission, including an application of the Virginia Beach Art Association for a use permit to operate an office building on 38th Street near Atlantic Avenue.

An application for 68 apartment units at 19th Street and Mediterranean Avenue will also be heard. Dave's Drive-In is seeking a use permit to allow dancing and live entertainment. A temporary cabaret license has already been granted.

Additional housing would also be provided if an application by John Aragona Enterprises is approved for the construction of about 100 new townhouses in the Princess Anne Plaza Area.

A unique new Pizsa restaurant with live entertainment would be built at Virginia Beach Boulevard and Groveland Road if another application is approved.

Application has also been made to build a new movie theatre in the Indian River Shopping Center area on Military Highway.

And in addition, the Green Run Corporation will apply for the first phase of its planned development housing on the old Sawyer Farm on Princess Anne Road. This will be the first application for such a development since Council recently added a new zoning category for such a large planned development.

Report Due For Council

City Manager W. Russell Hatchett says he will give City Council a report Monday on a probe of the City Inspection office, which has been going on since early December.

Hatchett has refused to comment on the nature of the investigation of the office of John Gibbs, other than to say that "certain irregularities" were being investigated.

Gibbs has maintained that there is no basis for any charge.

This building, located on First Colonial Road, has served as headquarters of the Oceana Volunteer Fire Department for the past 20 years.

War 'Fathered' Oceana Unit

The formation of Civil Defense units throughout the United States during World War II was the factor behind the beginning of the Oceana Volunteer Fire Department of Virginia Beach.

A small group of civic minded men, in 1942, formed such a unit to offer protection to residents of that region, and mounting a "C.D. pump" on a small trailer they went into operation. In 1948 the department was incorporated, the land on which the "station house" is situated was donated by the Potter family, and men of the department began a fund raising drive for equipment and went to work constructing the headquarters building themselves.

Today a group of 20 men, with 14 of these being "regular" members of the "volunteers", are devoting their attention to protecting approximately 4,000 homes, 9 schools and 8 churches in Lynnhaven Borough, as well as the General Hospital of Virginia Beach. The present stock of equipment consists of three "pumper" trucks and one salvage truck.

As with all volunteer fire fighting units in the city, Oceana operates on money obtained through various public fund drives and elect men who will direct the units' operation. The officers are Jacob Bramer, pres.; Ellis J. Mills, vice pres.; Donald L. Harris, sec.; and Titus Kelsey, treas. Mills also serves as "chief" of the department, with Harris, asst. chief; Bramer, lieut.; Thomas W. Swindle, chief engineer, and David Grainger, engineer.

Bramer told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the department last year was called upon to investigate 144 reports of fire alarms within their district. Bramer also said the department is called upon many times to work in assistance with the London Bridge, Seatack and "Court House" volunteer departments.

Oceana is one of several volunteer units in the city which does not operate a rescue squad, however, a majority of the men have qualified to carry registered First Aid cards, and do render emergency care when necessary.

Members of the Oceana Volunteers are continually devoting their interests to improving the service they offer residents of their district. With this in mind, they are currently attempting to acquire additional land near their present location to construct a new headquarters building.

Realizing also that fires of today will present different problems than those of years ago, the men attend "drill sessions" once a month. When conditions permit, these drills consist of setting fire to a vacant building which has already been earmarked to be torn down, and familiarize members of the department with the various means of containing and extinguishing different types of fires. At other times the drills are held at the headquarters building and are devoted to a review of the use of equipment.

Witnesses To Convene Feb. 2-4

Jehovah's Witnesses of District 26 will assemble at the Virginia Beach Convention Center Feb. 2-4, for their semi-annual convention sponsored by the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of Brooklyn, N.Y.

James A. Thompson, Jr., District Supervisor of the Witnesses, said more than 1,600 people are expected to attend the convention, which convenes at 6:45 p.m., tomorrow.

Thompson arrived at Virginia Beach Monday, Jan. 29, to oversee final plans for the meeting. On Sunday, Feb. 4 at 3 p.m., he will give the main address of the convention, "Why Does God Permit Wickedness?"

The delegates will include families with children, who will attend instruction classes together.

Col. Jones Assumes Command

The 102nd Transportation Battalion became operational with formal reactivation ceremonies at Ft. Story's January Garrison Review.

Col. Thomas D. Emery, Ft. Story Commander presented the battalion color to Lt. Col. Everett G. Topham, Commanding Officer of the 102nd. Col. Topham has recently returned from assignment with the military aid mission in Turkey.

Formerly a World War II truck outfit, the "one-on-deuce" battalion participated in four European campaigns. The battalion will now serve as a terminal unit, training troops for the vital task of supplying overseas forces.

Ceremonies at the Garrison Review also included the retirement of Sgt. Charles K. Stalker after more than 20 years of active Army service, and the presentation of Army Commendation Medals to Maj. Gene W. Fowler and Capt. Thomas L. Adams.

Marines Learn Viet Cong Tricks

By Jack Harris

During our recent Navy tour in the mid-Pacific and Hawaiian Islands, one full day was spent with the First Marine Brigade, garrisoned at Kaneohe Bay, Oahu.

Kaneohe Bay was the first island area to be hit by Japanese bombers in the 1941 Pearl Harbor attack. Geographically, Kaneohe Bay is directly across Oahu Island from Pearl Harbor, separated by the beautiful Koolu Mountains.

Japanese bombers, flying at extremely low altitudes and partially hidden by the glare of a rising sun, scored effective hits on the marine base at Kaneohe Bay. Then, screened by mountain tops, the Jap bombers roared in on Pearl Harbor, unleashing an almost endless stream of bombs on our anchored battleships.

There are no visible war scars at Kaneohe Bay. In fact, to this reporter, it is one of Hawaii's most beautiful spots. Giant waves roll in with almost military precision. Beautiful blue water turns to an exciting amber green as it approaches the shoreline, finally bursting into a spray of white foam on the beach. Needless to say, Kaneohe Bay offers some of the greatest surfing waters in the world.

The first stop for our group was Camp Smith where we attended "briefing" sessions supervised by Adm. U.S. Grant Sharp and Gen. Victor H. Krulak, commanding officer of the Fleet Marine Base, General Krulak devoted most of his remarks to the role our marines are playing in the Viet Nam war. He proved to be a most personable host.

From Camp Smith our group was ferried by three Marine helicopters to the airstrip at Kaneohe Bay. The 15 minute flight took us directly over the Koolu Mountain range.

Departing the 'copters, our group traveled by bus to an area known as the Kansas tower. To reach our destination it was necessary to go around and up an extremely high mountain. The view was worth the trip for in addition to being a key military observation point, Kansas tower affords one not only a look down on the rolling surf but also a view of those enough to back the waves with of surf meeting shore.

At Kansas Tower we were briefed by Col. D.H. Stapp, commanding officer of the First Marine Brigade. From there it was back down the mountain, thence to the interior of Oahu where we were to visit the marine jungle warfare school. This was to prove the most interesting part of the day.

The jungle warfare training school is well named. It is, indeed, carved out of the jungle. No sooner had we entered the dense underbrush than a very authentic looking Viet Cong guerrilla appeared from nowhere. Letting loose a blood chilling yell, he tossed what appeared to be a grenade directly in front of the group. Havoc set in. You talk about civilians scrambling. That is one picture I would have dearly loved to have brought back. The object of our "separation" was, of course, a Marine disguised as the enemy. We got the idea in a hurry!

Following that little indoctrination, our group was escorted down a very lonely looking jungle path. At approximately 100 foot separation points, Marines were stationed to give visual demonstrations on "warfare weapons" used by the Viet Cong.

A Marine is probably one of our most inquisitive fighting men," we were told. "This natural curiosity, along with the desire to pick up souvenirs for home, has cost us dearly." It is estimated that better than 80 per cent of our Marine casualties during the first year of the Vietnam war resulted, not from gunfire, but rather from cleverly placed Viet Cong "booby" traps. Not only was this an awesome percentage but it illustrates the clever, ruthless type of foe we are fighting.

Point of illustration. A marine walking down a jungle path spots a bullet-riddled helmet. By habit, he either picks it up or gives it a kick. Either way is fatal for the helmet has been rigged to explode on contact. Another leatherneck, perhaps on patrol, can't resist the temptation to pat down a little mound of dirt that confronts his passage. Seconds later he is withering on the ground, his leg from the knee down, pinned in a shallow hole by wooden spikes. These spikes are pointed downward, making escape impossible. Actually, there is no escape since most of the wooden spikes used in ground traps are coated with a deadly poison.

The enemy that confronts our fighting men in Vietnam is clever, he is diabolic. He uses to full advantage the normal curiosity of man, placing his death dealing explosives in such things as empty K-ration cans, a spent cartridge shell, a canteen, even the body of a dead comrade.

"As fast as we learn their jungle tricks," said one Marine, "they come up with a new batch. It's tough. A great deal of the time we are fighting an enemy we can't see and in some instances we are fighting an enemy that is not there. During a big push, he leaves the booby traps and waits from a safe distance for the sound that will tell we have taken the bait."

Thanks to the Oahu jungle warfare school and others like it, the Marines are not now taking the bait as often. For every three Marines getting their initial training in a jungle warfare school there is at least one Marine on hand with actual Vietnam experience to teach them the ropes.

This type of schooling has paid off. Marine casualties by "accident" are currently at an all time low. Today's modern marine is skillfully trained to fight on land, on sea and by jungle "fright." We salute these fuzzy-cheeked young leathernecks who's task is, perhaps, the toughest yet.

(Next week our group boards the nuclear powered "Swordfish" for a first hand look at today's modern submarine and its role as "guardian of the Pacific.")

Bayside Dance Tops Off Senior Week

By Michael Moore

Bayside High School Most recent of the activities being undertaken at Bayside High School was the National Honor Society taping last week.

The National Honor Society is an organization comprised of outstanding students from throughout the nation. All the 24 new members fulfill the basic requirements of service, leadership, a minimum grade average of "B" and good citizenship.

Seventeen of the new members are juniors. They are: Kent Bally, James Carmack, Ted Clemons, Patricia Early, Diane Fincher, Jenny Frazier, Charles Greer, Jerry Jones, Anne Hill, Charlene Jones, Maureen McHenry, Sheila McWaters, May Now, Wendy Overbay, Peggy Partridge, Lynn Pierce and Charles Wiss.

Seniors tapped were: Bert Chase, Frank Davis, Yvonne Freve, Tom Lepay, Gali Nelson, Shelly Pancoast and Bernie Greer.

Senior Appreciation Week began Monday, Feb. 5. The seniors decided that they should be honored for their outstanding contributions to the student body. Plans were made and a date was set.

The week opened with a sale of senior boys to senior girls Monday morning. Tuesday morning a breakfast was held in the high school cafeteria.

Thursday and Friday are devoted to "senior teachers day" and a senior dress-up day.

The week will be topped-off with a dance sponsored by the seniors Saturday night.

Maury Holds District First Place

Tuesday's basketball schedule saw Granby slip by First Colonial, 53-51. Princess Anne took Norview, 55-46 and Kellam won over Bayside 75-70. Maury trounced Cox with the biggest lead in points of Tuesday's games, 33-53.

Maury has been putting in a fine showing, holding defending Eastern champion Granby to 42 points in their game last week. Granby's least successful offensive game in four years. Maury went on to crush First Colonial, 91-43, and retain its first place in the district standings, with a record of 10-0. Cox, Princess Anne, and First Colonial hold third, fourth and fifth place in the district, with respective records of 6-4, 6-4 and 1-5.

Bayside and Kellam stand seventh and ninth, with records of 1-9, and 0-12. Union Kempville is seventh in the VIA Eastern District with a record of 6-10.

Yesterday saw Berkeley at Union Kempville for basketball. Cox met Wilson and Maury was at Kellam for wrestling.

Today's schedule finds Craddock at First Colonial and Princess Anne at Bayside for wrestling.

Tomorrow, in basketball, there will be Princess Anne at Bayside, Cox at First Colonial, Maury at Kellam, and Union Kempville at Crestwood.

The state Group 1-A track meet will be at Lexington, Saturday.

Broad Changes Ahead For Va. Beach Court System

A study made public recently by City Manager W. Russell Hatchett commended the Youth Bureau of the Virginia Beach Police Department as "one of the best we have ever found."

The survey was completed last September at the City's request by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency. A complete study of the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court and related services was made.

Although it was known that high praise had been paid the city and the report had helped in securing federal and state money to set up a new pilot program for habitual juvenile offenders, other contents of the report had not been made public.

Most of the recommendations involved increasing personnel to be involved with juveniles and domestic relations. A new court, on the level with the Circuit Court, was recommended, as a "family court," and the hiring of a new full-time judge was recommended.

Juvenile Judge Phillip Russo says additional personnel will be added, but set no specific date.

Another recommendation was that an "intake department" be set up to screen all juvenile cases before they go to court. Plans have been made to put this plan into effect shortly. This system will use probation officers to determine if the case can be handled by someone other than the juvenile judge.

City Manager Russell Hatchett possibly summed up the feelings of many when he told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "I am sorry we're finding what we are, but I'm very pleased with the way it is being handled by our Police Department."

Most of the juvenile hearings are scheduled for Feb. 14.

City officials agree that the report has been quite helpful and when the programs are implemented will add greatly to the efficiency of this operation of this city.

Pat Scores

In Contest

Pat Daily, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack P. Daily of Hood Drive, was named a co-runner in the state Junior Miss pageant in Roanoke last weekend.

Miss Daily, Virginia Beach's Junior Miss, placed first in two pre-pageant contests judging for youth fitness and poise and appearance.

A senior at Cox, Pat is a native of Bethesda, Md. She was sponsored by Bayside-Princess Anne Jaycees and R.K. Chevrolet.

About 1,600 delegates to the District Jehovah's Witnesses convention attended several sessions at the Virginia Beach Civic Center last weekend.

1,600 Witnesses Meet Here

More than 1,600 people from 17 southeastern Virginia cities attended the semi-annual convention of Jehovah's Witnesses from Circuit 26, at Virginia Beach's Convention Center Friday through Sunday.

The convention was sponsored by the Watchtower and Tract Society of Brooklyn, N.Y. Its theme was "To Improve Our Ministry so that We Can Continue to Calm the Minds of the People."

James A. Thompson, district supervisor of the Witnesses, gave the main address Sunday at the final session of the convention. His topic was "How Can God Permit Sin?"

Valentine Is Midpoint

St. Valentine's Day, falling as always on Feb. 14, is traditionally associated with affairs of the heart.

It so happens that this same festive occasion is the midpoint of American Heart Month and of the now-current 1968 Heart Fund Campaign.

Wedgewood Play Asks Audience Much

The current bill of fare at Wedgewood Dinner Theatre in Toano is Edward Albee's "A Delicate Balance," and the Wedgewood players do an acceptable job with it.

But the play is one of those extremely witty and long treatises on life that forces the audience to listen to every word very carefully in order to grasp partially the playwright's elusive moral. Although Wedgewood, in contrast to some others, is to be commended for doing something other than a sex farce, it is somewhat debatable whether this play should be performed at all. Perhaps it would better serve to be read, digested and used as the subject of a graduate seminar in colleges.

The little action revolves around one drinking family and the delicate balance of their lives. As soon as something out of the ordinary happens, the balance is gone. And when it goes, reality partly develops in place of the unreal "security" of balance.

Ron Reid, as Tobias, head of the family, does probably the best job of his career at Wedgewood. His voice is cultured and studied, as are his actions, his gestures and his walk. But even all of this does not help make this young man old enough to play the 60-plus Tobias. Reid is at his best in the emotional scenes, but comes out of the depths of despair into a calm too easily.

Agnes Costello plays his wife, Agnes, nicely, but again simply does not look old enough. It's either Albee or Miss Costello, but the characterization of the sometimes sweet and loving, sometimes angry and biting wife is just not consistent. We are inclined to believe it's Albee.

Fran Derks plays their daughter, a four-time loser in marriage. She starts out on such a high plane emotionally that she has some difficulty developing into the highest plane of all. But her hoarse voice, coupled with excellent facial expressions and gestures make this a well-thought out role.

Carolee Silcox and Roby Brown play the best friends, Edna and Harry. It is these two who really disrupt the delicate balance, but their roles are not clearly enough drawn. Basically Miss Silcox and Mr. Brown play the frightened couple tightly, and they handle the roles well.

Albee obviously wants the play to belong to Agnes' sister, Claire, who drinks entirely too much and has a very sarcastic and cynical tongue. But even if Albee did not plan it this way, Wedgewood veteran Claudine Kiddings makes it her play. Her every movement and inflection is beautifully done. It is one of her best performances.

The production also reflects the fine direction of Paul Iddings.

As a theatrical work of art, this is a good play and a good production, but it is most demanding upon the audience. HJL

First Stores Sign Leases For Haygood Shopping Center

Another new shopping center will be built in Virginia Beach, beginning in the late spring of this year, with a target date of completion by Easter 1969.

The Haygood Place Shopping Center at the intersection of Haygood Road and Independence Boulevard in Bayside Borough has been planned for sometime but is now ready for development by Lee A. Gifford of Norfolk and Virginia Beach. The managing agent for the project is Goodman-Segar-Hogan Inc. of Norfolk.

The center, which will have more than 200,000 square feet of rental area when completed, is designed with a colonial influence to complement the homes in the surrounding communities.

Robert M. Stanton, who is handling the leasing of the center, said that A & P Supermarket and Peoples Drug Stores are the first tenants to lease space, and that negotiations are in progress with a major department store and several smaller stores.

"Several are right on the verge of signing," said Stanton. "We are waiting for our key department store."

The Peoples Drug Store will be the largest operated by that firm in Tidewater. The $2.9 million complex will be built on a 30-acre tract. An additional 15 acres, owned by Gifford may be used for medical and professional offices in the future, according to Stanton. The center is directly across Haygood Road from Gifford's 250-unit luxury townhouse and garden apartment development, already approved by City Council. Gifford also developed the Lake Smith Terrace homes in the same area.

The architect for the new "neighborhood" shopping center is the Norfolk firm of Carter, Speigle, Zinkle and Herman.

Rep. Downing to Break Ground For Rent Supplement Units

Rep. Thomas N. Downing of Virginia's First Congressional District will turn the first spadeful of earth for construction of the new Bayside Arms Apartments, "rent supplement" project on North Witteck Road. (See related story p. 6)

The ground breaking ceremonies, to be at the site on Friday, Feb. 16 at 2 p.m., will have Sidney S. Kellam of bedroom apartment, two bedrooms for $120 and three bedrooms for $140. Bayside Arms will have 25 two-bedroom, 75 two-bedroom and 25 three-bedroom units.

HUD has allocated $85,000 a year for rent supplements to tenants in Bayside Arms, according to Hickman. A tenant may receive a rent supplement in an amount which could be the difference between the weekly income of the tenant and the monthly rental of the apartment, he pointed out. As an example, a tenant earning $50 per week, renting a two-bedroom apartment, would pay $50 a month rent and have the remaining $70 supplemented by the federal government.

Tenants whose income increases after they move into the apartments, thereby eliminating their rent supplement entitlement, do not, however, have to move out of the project, it is emphasized.

Virginia Beach, Democratic national committeeman, as master-of-ceremonies. The public is invited to witness the event.

Also taking part in the ceremonies will be Federal Housing Administration and other local and area officials. Being built under the National Housing Act, the apartments are the first in Virginia, and only the third such project in the nation, to qualify for rent supplements after approval by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). They are intended to provide better housing for lower income families and senior citizens retired on social security.

Apartment in Bayside Arms will be available only to persons already residents of Virginia Beach, according to C. W. Hickman, vice president of Hickman & Associates, the developers, to be ready for occupancy by August of this year, they already are over 80 per cent rented, he asserted with 75 per cent of the applicants Negro.

Applicants must have an income of less than $5,000, and be approved by HUD, which also sets the rent. Rentals are $105 per month for a one-

Hospital Future Depends on State

The Virginia Beach General Hospital Board approved the hospital's making application for a federal Hill-Burton grant to help finance a $5.5 million expansion at the annual board meeting, Jan. 26.

W. Earl Willis, hospital administrator, said that the application will not be submitted until June of this year, and that a final decision on the acceptance of the application cannot be expected before October.

The application will be sent to the state Health Department, which processes the application and then to the Governor's Advisory Council on Hospitals. At Richmond, the state agency responsible for distributing federal Hill-Burton funds. The requested grant, amounting to almost $3 million, would cover 59 per cent of the proposed expansion.

The grant would go towards an additional 124 acute medical and surgical beds and the facilities necessary to service these beds. The 45 per cent of expansion costs not covered by the grant would have to come from the community and through the hospital's borrowing power, Willis said.

Board approval of the application followed an extensive study by Dr. Anthony J. J. Rourke, a hospital consultant from New Rochelle, N.Y., of the General Hospital's present facilities and future needs. Dr. Rourke presented his findings to the board Nov. 31. A committee of board members, and architects Baskerville and Sons, Richmond, was then appointed to study Dr. Rourke's report, and the advisability of making the application for a Hill-Burton grant. The committee reported back to the board Friday.

Projecting from Virginia Beach's present growth rate, Dr. Rourke suggested that by 1975, the hospital would need a minimum of 370 beds, 220 more beds than will be available with the hoped-for late summer completion of the extended-care unit now under construction.

Willis described Dr. Rourke's report as "exhaustive and fully supported by statistical information."

A projection as far into the future as 1985 is difficult, because such a projection must assume that the population influx remain fairly constant. But Dr. Rourke has established that, if conditions do hold steady, Virginia Beach will require a minimum 750 hospital beds by 1985.

Willis pointed out that if the application is accepted at Richmond, and funds are made available, the new addition would probably not be in use for almost four years, allowing one year (from the approval date in October) for plans and bids to be accepted, and another two years for construction.

For the past year, the General Hospital has been operating under a patient-load of 95 per cent of capacity. The ideal situation is less than 85 per cent according to the American Hospital Association, Willis said.

Willis explained that the 95 per cent is not reflective of the individual departments of the hospital. For example: only 50 per cent of the beds in wards limited to pediatric or obstetric patients might be in use, while at the same time, other wards might be faced with more patients than they have room for. During 1967, the medical-surgical department experienced an average of 110 per cent said Willis.

The new extended-care unit of the General Hospital is expected to be completed by late summer. It is being built with the help of federal funds.

The overflow was met, he added, by converting all private rooms into semi-private rooms and by hospitalizing some patients at the old 45-bed hospital at 27th Street.

The new extended-care unit, with 50 beds, now going up beside the hospital will relieve, for the present, that overflow.

There are obstacles that will have to be overcome, said Willis, in having Virginia Beach's application for a grant accepted. The State of Virginia is allocated a sum of money, varying each year, from the federal government for hospital aid. The money is distributed as the state's Advisory Council sees fit.

The state is divided into areas from which a list is compiled, with the areas possessing the fewest hospital beds per capita leading the list for application acceptance. Virginia Beach is 15 on the 1968 list, along with Norfolk and 52 per cent of Chesapeake.

But the council does not get an application from every area first on the list, Willis added. It is possible that there will be a part of the federal allocation left for the Tidewater area. If so, Virginia Beach will then be in competition with the other area cities to have its application accepted.

What must be done, Willis added, is to justify Virginia Beach's needs, to show that they are as great as any in the state. Willis hopes that the 1968 census planned for the city will lift the recognized population of Virginia Beach several thousand over the number currently given by the University of Virginia census-takers. The higher the city's established population in relation to its existing 105 hospital beds, the more chance Willis sees for the application to be accepted at Richmond.

Institute Scheduled For June

A Junior Foresters' Institute will be held at Virginia Tech June 16-22, said Dr. John F. Hosner, head of the forestry department.

Sponsored by Scientists of Tomorrow, a non-profit corporation from Portland, Ore., the institute will be a general survey of the field of forestry and related renewable natural resources.

Maximum enrollment will be 100 and minimum 40. While applicants will be accepted from anywhere in the nation, the orientation of this institute is to the South and South Atlantic area. Interested students should write to: Stanley H. Shirk, Executive Director, Scientists of Tomorrow, 309 New Fliedner Bldg., Portland, Ore., 97205.

Staff members of the forestry and wildlife department will teach the classes and laboratories involved.

"Scientists of Tomorrow attempts to enlist support from the wood-using industries for these summer institutes. If they cannot raise funds enough to award scholarships for all desiring to attend, some students will be required to pay a portion of their expenses. Scholarships will be awarded on the basis of scholastic average and industry support," said Hosner.

Unique Unit Has Own Symbol

Persons entering the Beach Borough Police Precinct, at 19th Street and Arctic Avenue, will be pleasantly impressed by the atmosphere of welcome which men of the station have created through their decoration of the precinct lobby.

The casual observer, however, may not realize the full significance of a plaque on the wall behind the "desk" sign, which denotes that the station also serves as "headquarters" of the Virginia Beach Detachment of the Tidewater Area Shore Patrol. The detachment is normally comprised of approximately 40 men, and of which Senior CPO George C. Queen is in charge.

While men of the "Beach Detachment" work in close liaison with Virginia Beach Police, their duties are different from other U.S. Navy Shore Patrol units. These men are concerned with the protection of military personnel from all branches of the Armed Forces which may be stationed in or near the city of Virginia Beach.

Chief Queen approached Capt. R.C. Davis, Precinct C.O., with the thought of illustrating this "uniqueness" of the detachment in an emblem which would be equally unique to the unit.

Capt. Davis, using his artistic talents, designed the plaque to represent all branches of the Armed Forces. Davis felt this could best be accomplished by placing the traditional symbol of justice, a blindfolded woman weighing evidence of pleas, on a ship's anchor, and flanking her with the abbreviations "M.P.", "A.P." and "S.P.". The final "touch" was enclosing the symbol of justice with the title "U.S. NAVY SHORE PATROL".

Upon completion the emblem was mounted on the plaque which was placed opposite the precinct plaque bearing the seal of the City of Virginia Beach to illustrate the close cooperation of the men of the Shore Patrol Detachment with those of the city's Police Division.

Clover mites have begun to be a problem in some areas of Tidewater. These insects are very small, about the size of the point of a pin. When mashed, they leave a red spot or streak.

These begin stirring in warm periods, and as cool periods come along, they seek protection.

They can generally be controlled by spraying a band of the ground around the house about 3 feet wide with a good insecticide or a miticide. Either Malathion, Carbaryl or kelthane is effective.

Narcotics in Perspective

How sad it is that young high school students in Virginia Beach have been involved in the recent narcotics crackdown. But let us put the matter in proper perspective.

It would be wrong to condemn all the students of Virginia Beach high schools or even to wonder what the entire "younger generation is coming to", when such a minute fraction of our teenage population is involved in the current crisis. When only about 30 of our city's school age population have been arrested or questioned concerning the use of marijuana, the accusing finger is hardly being pointed at youth in general.

The sale of or use of marijuana is against the law. Those charged with either, should they be proved guilty, will be wrong. They should not have been involved. But serious as the problem is, the seriousness of the circumstances should also be kept in proper perspective.

We cannot condone the sale of any drugs in Virginia Beach or elsewhere, and we will continue to raise a strong voice against it. We cannot condone the use of any narcotic by anyone, particularly youths, and we will continue to raise a strong voice in opposition. But we will not damn all because of a few.

Virginia Beach school officials and police have worked together closely in this matter in an effort to stamp out the problem before something much worse happens. This is as it should be, and we hope the present unpleasant situation can be cleared up quickly and with a minimum amount of additional undue publicity for a generally fine lot of high school students.

We believe in the younger generation, and we are always sorry when even a small element gets tied up in a mess like this, usually just for "kicks".

Time Out for the Tour

For some years Norfolk has had a most successful self-guided motor tour of its attractions and points of interest. It has been heavily promoted and advertised, and has proved to be entirely worthwhile. Other cities have followed suit, including Lynchburg, Richmond, Hampton and Newport News. Now Virginia Beach wishes to add its own tour.

We are glad to see it, and we hope it will grow into a highly entertaining and profitable table venture. But it must be promoted strongly, and it must be interesting.

The old lighthouse at Cape Henry is certainly one of our landmarks and a candidate for the Virginia Beach Tour. But it is still a disgrace, because of its filthy state. Before any tour is initiated, we hope all efforts are made to plan it well in order to show off our fine city to best advantage. Otherwise, a tour can only call attention to shortcomings.

The New Police Academy

In these trying times when crime is obviously on the increase everywhere, we are particularly pleased that another wise move has been made by Tidewater police departments and officials. The opening of the Tidewater police academy, long a pet project of several Virginia Beach police officials, is now a reality.

Through the new academy, policemen will receive their basic training and in time to come will return there for advanced courses and seminars. The idea is a good one and deserves great praise. On this matter, officialdom of all the Tidewater cities, as well as other law enforcement agencies, have gotten together and pooled their resources.

The cost of training will be cheaper because there will be no duplication of effort by the separate departments. The classes will also have the benefit of the very best from all the areas as instructors. The first class has begun after several years of planning and hard work by many dedicated persons.

We wish the new academy well and take this opportunity to thank all those who had a hand in forming it. We believe the academy will be the beginning ing of the best-trained policemen anywhere and that it will form the nucleus of a new era in area-wide cooperation.

If the police can get together like this, maybe there is real hope that less bickering between cities can be accomplished in the near future.

FOPA Resolution

The Fraternal Order of Police Auxiliary. Its membership comprised of those interested in helping the police force and promoting the best interests of policemen, can be extremely proud of its Virginia Beach chapter.

The organization has passed a two-pronged resolution that sets up a committee to support law enforcement and law enforcement agencies, as well as seeking cooperation of other civic and fraternal organizations to do the same.

Too often we do not wish to "get involved" and too often do not give our policemen our total support. It is time to "get involved" and give active support to all law enforcement agencies and to help in any way we can as good citizens. We congratulate the FOPA for making us see the need of doing so.

MAKING THE WORLD GO 'ROUND

He Has Suggestion
Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

The past few weeks have proven that an asset to motorists is the newly opened Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway. It is going to be. The relatively few number of accidents which have taken place on the Expressway thus far would indicate the roadway will be safer than most of us realized.

However, we would like to make a suggestion to increase the safety of those who make use of the roadway. It should be possible to install public telephones, spaced at reasonable intervals, along the Expressway for use of motorists who may become stranded or have an accident. The phones could be installed on a system which would not require the deposit of a coin, but automatically go into operation when the receiver is lifted from its hook. The telephone could be installed to connect automatically the user with Virginia Beach police headquarters to report any accident or need for emergency assistance.

Perhaps each telephone could bear an information card with some "coded" designation as to its location on the Expressway, thus enabling the motorist in need of assistance to report his location. The operator at police headquarters could be supplied with a "master listing" of these locations to assure immediate location of the call.

This system would assure the immediate dispatching of police, fire, or rescue units to the scene for whatever assistance might be needed.

Bryan H. Glover
Ed. Note: We think you have an excellent suggestion here, and will turn your letter over to the proper State authorities in the hope they agree with both of us. This would be a fine safety feature of the new road.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN welcomes letters. They will be published when possible. Each letter must be signed and include address of the writer. Letters are invited on any question.

What About Violence?

(Reprinted with permission from THE AMERICAN RIFLEMAN)

In a syndicated year-end article at the happy holiday season, the leader of one of the many marches on "much-marched-upon Washington blamed the "violence of the American spirit" for African slavery, Indian repression, extermination of the buffalo, gangsterism, the KKK and making "the gunman a hero."

Two newspapers old and large enough to be grown up, in New York and Washington, prate editorially that we Americans are a violent people, brutishly addicted to mauling and murdering our fellow men. One quotes the New York City police commissioner as deploring our national violence.

Anyone battling through life in 6 of our largest cities, including Chicago and New York, may well be stunned by the crashing impact of crime. These 6 cities, with a tenth of the U.S. population all told, produced a fifth of all U.S. homicides and crime in 1966, whereas over a third of sizeable American cities reported no homicides at all. The same report indicates that if one of its statistical classifications is excluded, the homicide rate for most of the U.S. population decreases by about one half.

Therefore we object, on behalf of nearly 200,000,000 Americans who have had no part in homefront violence, to sensational assertions that Americans on the whole are a violent people. Many of those who say so would brand the mark of Cain upon the nation's brow to further highly restrictive nationwide firearms legislation. In the cold light of fact, we question that such legislation is necessary.

The upswing in violence in recent years coincides with 2 developments that the U.S. Government ought to be able to curb administratively, without firearms legislation by Congress or anyone else. One is:

Television's growing inclination to murder and mayhem by abnormal, exaggerated emphasis on misuse of firearms and all manner of diabolical attacks.

Ironically, come of the same networks that have smeared legitimate firearms ownership under guise of protecting the American public from guns have televised gunplay, gore and horror galore.

This bombardment, if we may use the word, approaches a 7-day, 24-hour saturation of the American mind with the notion that gunplay is good clean fun. Does it really stir up violence? Hear this:

"It has been found that normal persons who see a violent (televized) film subsequently exhibit nearly twice as much violence as persons who have not seen such a film."

Ironically indeed, this statement was made by Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (Conn.), author of several firearms control bills including the pending S.J., on July 30, 1964, after years of hearings before his Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Juvenile Delinquency. Dodd deplored the lack of "any serious effort" to calm down television—but no bill has yet been advanced to do so.

Not everyone, it should be noted, agrees that Congressional action is necessary. Some feel the FCC could reduce TV violence by administrative order.

A second definite factor in the crime increase, in the opinion of many police chiefs, is the out-rate sale of cheap imported handguns. Shoddily manufactured by a few foreign makers, hundreds of thousands of these have been peddled in recent years by a handful of U.S. dealers. Prices as low as $8 or $10 have placed considerable handguns within reach of multitudes who never before could afford them. Most figure in "crime of passion" or amateurish holdups, which form the bulk of the increase in violence.

Again, administrative action appears to be all that is necessary.

Here then, without the fireworks and forensics of a major issue in Congress, are 2 practical steps toward reducing violence. Both have been recognized, discussed, and—for some reason—quietly shelved.

Will the Administration act now? It can, without waiting for Congress or transferring any burden of woes to that august body.

The Administration possesses sufficient authority to bar by Executive direction these miserably-made, potentially defective arms that contribute so much to rising violence. If a few foreign manufacturers become offended, State Department diplomacy should be equal to that crisis.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"But I've just finished paying for all those Christmas cards," he said. "How come we have to go through all this again for Valentine's Day?"

"Don't be an old Scrooge," she said. "Just lick the stamps,"

"Throode had to do with Crithmath."

"What did you say?"

He moistened his tongue and swallowed hard, making a peculiar face at the taste. "I said, Scrooge had to do with Christmas. I just couldn't talk too well after licking all those stamps. And besides, they taste terrible," he shot out venomously.

"I'll take it up with the Post Office Department," she said sweetly.

"Who's Maude Frinkishot?" he asked.

"Oh, you remember her? She's that nice little old lady we met at camp Armywartywoc last summer," she said.

"Yeah. How could I forget old Maude? She was the one who contemplated her navel while eating yogurt, sunflower seeds and french fries and drinking a chocolate milk shake. But why do we need her a Valentine?"

"Because she was so sweet to the children," she answered logically enough.

"Fine, but these new six cents stamps cost money, you know. They don't give this kind away as premiums at the grocery store," he said as he raised himself high enough to stare her in the eye over the pile of Valentines.

"Just lick the stamps," she said.

"What about all these little Valentines over here?" he asked about the pile on the coffee table.

"Just don't worry about those," she said triumphantly. "Those are the ones the children will take around to all their neighborhood friends."

"They'll be out half the night delivering all those. There's enough there for all their friends in Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Chesapeake and outer Mongolia...and their enemies too." He was obviously irritated.

"They have a lot of friends," she countered simply enough. "Now, hurry up, I'm addressing them faster than you're putting the stamps on."

"What are you trying to do? Pay off the Post Office debt singlehanded?" he asked dryly. His tongue was particularly dry.

"Just lick the stamps."

"Isn't this sickening?" he asked. "Listen to this... This Valentine message comes your way, With every wish that this card finds you happy in this joyous season, Remembering that love knows no reason." That doesn't even make sense.

"It's the thought that counts," she smiled.

"Okay, if the thought counts, how about this one... 'Roses are red, Violets are blue, Maude's an old bat, And how about them onions?'"

"It doesn't rhyme."

"It's the thought that counts."

"Just lick the stamps, Scrooge."

"Throode had to do with Crithmath."

"Never mind. Just pass some more Valentines."

Missionary Will Speak At World Day of Prayer

Clifford Robinson, missionary at large for the Friends church, will present the World Day of Prayer program which will begin at 11 a.m. March 1 at Star of the Sea Catholic Church.

Robinson, now here on leave, will return to Indonesia with his wife later in March.

World Day of Prayer is sponsored by Church Women United throughout the world and locally by the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women United, Mrs. Rathle Selvertum of Ceylon, chairman of the Asia Church Women's Conference, has prepared the order of service for this year's program. The theme is taken from Galatians 6:2 and is titled "Bear One Another's Burdens." Church women everywhere will use the same program on the same day.

During the 80 years since its beginning, the World Day of Prayer has had as its main purpose prayer and giving for the worldwide mission of the church.

The very first service opens at dawn on the tropical South Sea Island of Tonga near the International Date Line. Hour by hour petition succeeds petition forming a global prayer chain as the sun appears in other lands, until it finally sinks at the end of the day behind an ice-bound island in the far northern Bering Sea.

Offerings on this World Day of Prayer will go to many worthy projects in America, as well as in other lands. Included will be scholarships for training women for Christian broadcasting in Africa, support for 13 colleges in Camaroun, India, Pakistan, Japan, Korea, Hong Kong, Taiwan and Guatemala. The International Student Service also will be aided, as will the literacy work in 18 countries carried out by the Committee on World Literacy and Christian Literature of the National Council of Churches.

In America, agricultural migrants will be helped, as well as Indian-Americans, rural pastors, vacation church schools and other Christian programs under the National Council of Churches, of which Church Women United is a part.

Mrs. Charles M. Earley Jr. is in charge of the local service, and Mrs. Robert N. Owens is in charge of arrangements at the church. A luncheon will be served following the service. A nursery will be provided.

Club to Hear Mrs. Turnbull

Mrs. Robert Turnbull will speak on "Horticulture" at the Tidewater Chapter Club meeting on Monday, Feb. 12 at 2:30 p.m. in the home of Mrs. A. Brooke Taylor Jr.

Co-hostesses will be Mrs. L. Crawford Syer and Mrs. Charles A. Terry.

Teach Your Child to Handle Money

While most child psychologists agree that youngsters should receive an allowance, it often takes a financial credit expert to advise you on how to administer it.

There's plenty you can do to teach a child to handle money, say National Consumer Finance Association researchers, who have compiled this list of suggestions for getting your youngster off to a solvent start in life.

1. Give him a regular allowance. Even a modest amount, received at regular intervals, helps a child learn the ABC's of money management and gives him the sense of independence that comes with being able to buy some small items on his own. This fixed amount should be something he can depend on; if you withhold his allowance as punishment, you defeat your purpose of teaching him to handle a regular "income."

For the same reason, be firm about not giving extra allowance once the initial sum is spent. In the long run, you'll be doing your child a favor by showing him that it's important to budget his money over a certain period.

2. Teach him the importance of credit. There are times, however, when a child may urgently need extra money in addition to his regular allowance. Just as you may make purchases on the installment plan or borrow from a reliable state-regulated consumer finance company, such as those which are members of the NCF, he can learn to use credit as a tool.

You'll be helping him if you show him that he can have what he wants now, paying for it as he uses it. One way to do this is to let him borrow money from you for something he needs right away and pay it back—with a token charge for use of the money—over a period of time out of his allowance.

3. Encourage him to save. A bank account of his own can teach even a young child the wisdom of putting money away for a rainy day. Open a savings account in his name, and encourage him to deposit a little each week; as he gets older, he'll enjoy watching it grow. If he's at a game when he's asking for bikes and baseball gear, you can use these desires to teach him to save now for things he'll want and need later.

A longer-range goal you may want him to adopt is saving money for his college education. New income tax laws help you to help him toward this goal; under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act, as defined in your own state's Personal Property Laws, parents can deduct certain deposits in a savings account under the child's own name.

A word of warning from the financial experts: don't insist that a youngster of any age save all his money. He needs practice in spending as well as saving.

4. Help him to spend his money wisely. It's a good idea to give a child some guidelines for disposing of his allowance. He shouldn't be allowed unlimited foolish expenditures just because he has earned or been given some money. On the other hand, don't dictate everything he buys. A child may profit as much from his financial mistakes as from his successful spending.

5. Set a good example. Children are as imitative as monkeys. They may try to do as they're told, but usually they do as they see their parents do. Spend your paycheck the day you get it. . . don't put anything in the bank . . . fail to meet your financial obligations on time—and you'll probably raise a youngster who is unable to handle money wisely.

However, if you have the right attitudes about money, the chances are great that he'll grow into good financial habits with a bit of intelligent help from you.

Keep Smiling If You Dare

"Grow up Smiling" the American Dental Association (ADA) commands children in connection with Children's Health Week now underway. But if adults are any indication, they're more likely to grow up toothless. An estimated 20 million Americans have lost all their teeth, with women beating out men for toothlessness.

Other dismal dental statistics: One-half of all children have decayed teeth by age two; at school age the average child has three decayed teeth; by age 15, he has 11 of them.

The ADA points out that 50 percent of the children in the U.S. up to the age of 15 have never been to a dentist. Dental care was found to be the most needed health service among pre-school children, according to Project Head Start.

Regular dental care not only safeguards the teeth, but it safeguards general health as well. The dental group points out that many serious diseases, including leukemia, tuberculosis, diabetes, anemia and others show early oral symptoms. A recent study in Illinois showed that dentists can detect streptococcus infections at an early stage before the patient even knows he is ill.

Grow Up Smiling. See your dentist regularly.

Queens Entertain Their Kings

Husbands were Kings of Hearts Friday when the Linkhorn Park Garden Club held its Husbands Night Valentine Party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Parramore on Windy Ridge Point.

Each member contributed to the buffet dinner. Mrs. Samuel Meredith made the centerpiece of red carnations, and Mrs. Thomas Follary arranged a hall display.

Judging the flower arrangements were P.C. Hartman, Bill Parramore, Jimmy Kontopoulos, Tom Follary, Bill Phillips, Elmer Terrall, Major Pardue, Sam Meredith, Bob Mallory and G.R. Blosser who were either cowards or so kind that they presented all the ladies with blue ribbons—in shape of hearts.

A bridge game followed.

Mrs. Pardue was in charge of the buffet. The March meeting will be held at the Capes Beach and Cabana Club.

Cadet 1st Lt. William K. Gainer, son of Mrs. Henrietta Howard of Hilltop Road, was one of 22 cadets recently promoted in rank in the Air Force ROTC detachment at East Carolina University at Greenville, N.C.

Lupercalia Became Valentine

Roses are red
Violets are blue
On Valentine's Day
Cards come to you.

People have been celebrating this festival of love and affection since long before there were Valentine cards—in fact, before it took its present name.

Back in ancient Rome, people celebrated a festival called Lupercalia every Feb. 15. It honored Juno and Pan, and was celebrated with feasting, dancing and revelry. After the spread of Christianity the festival was changed to Feb. 14, the feast day of two Christian martyrs, both named Valentine; but the sentimental meaning of the old festival has remained to the present time.

People have been giving gifts at Valentine's Day for centuries, but the custom of sending sentimental messages developed gradually with the mail service. The oldest Valentine cards in America, according to World Book Encyclopedia, are some small cards with German script, probably made by nuns and monks in the early 1700's.

The custom became very popular in North America during the 1800's. Esther Howland is credited with being the first person in the United States to publish Valentines, in 1840. Many Valentines of that period were hand painted. They usually showed a fat cupid whose arrows pierced a heart. Some had satin, mother-of-pearl, tassels, imitation gems, sea shells and even dried flowers and seaweed.

Magazines of the 1850's gave glowing accounts of the celebration of St. Valentine's Day. In one, an editor remarked: "A blessing on St. Valentine, the patron of the Day fraught with many heart flutterings and heart enjoyments!"

Many of these old Valentine cards have been saved and are quite valuable today in cash. You may wish to save the cards you get this Valentine's Day. They too may be very valuable, if only in sentiment.

Dr. Raymond Recommends Sex Education at Early Age

Some very important groundwork is coming to fruition due to the interest and active participation of the members of the Bayside Junior Women's Club. Tuesday night, Dr. Bernard H. Raymond, surgeon and gynecologist from Norfolk, was the speaker whose topic Sex Education in Our Schools prompted pertinent questions from members of the Virginia Beach School Administration, Elmer Tarral and William Garrison.

Mrs. Catherine Wallace, president of the club, and Mrs. Kay Burton, Home-Life Committee Chairman, presented several school board and local high school representatives before introducing Dr. Raymond.

The Family Life Education Program in Virginia has brought about an end to the "silent era" in sex education in public schools. As recent as five years ago, specific changes in the attitude of the State Board of Education have resulted due to the responsiveness of interested and concerned persons, parents, physicians, clergy. To clear the way and open doors for our children, citizens must inform school officials of their need, Dr. Raymond said. "The way is open, the need is here and the time is now."

Since the physicians see the end results of the lack of sex education in homes and schools, Dr. Raymond recommended that informed presentations begin in the first grade and continue throughout the twelve years. This past year, fourteen junior high schools in the Norfolk area have been shown the films, "Boy to Man" and "Girl to Woman." Beneficial, but still inadequate.

At present there is an ad hoc steering committee headed by Dr. George Harkins in Norfolk which has volunteer members from the school board, clergy, welfare, physicians, whose aid in obtaining the best curriculum, the teachers with top qualifications and great interest, visual aids, a speakers bureau, is available. It is their hope to be staffed in the next 30 to 60 days. However, for information needed now, anyone may contact Mrs. Margery Krome of the Health, Welfare and Recreation Department located in the Royster Building in Norfolk.

During the question-and-answer period, Dr. Raymond mentioned that some classes will definitely be mixed, specifically those classes concerned with dating, alcoholism, dope addition, choosing a mate, sexuality and interrelationships. At present, most classes have been held in the separate Physical Education periods. As far as conducting a special course apart from the required subjects, Dr. Raymond stated that sex education should be a part of a total program to be included in any class, for example, science or history.

Dr. Raymond said emphatically that schools and churches still should not be relied upon as the only sources of information. Responsibility must be assumed at home. He told about one of his patients bringing her son to him with the instructions "to talk to the boy." If the mother had had the necessary facts, she would have had no difficulty or embarrassment discussing them with her son. Even though attempts have been made at PTA meetings, the members that should be informed simply do not attend.

G.C. Council Meets

Plans are progressing on schedule for the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach, Inc., flower show in March. Mrs. M.J. Schwartz, chairman, told members of the Council at their meeting Wednesday at Thalia Methodist Church.

The show, titled "A Thing of Beauty is a Joy Forever," will be held Saturday March 9 and Sunday March 10 at the Cavalier Cabana Club. Mrs. Joseph Davis and Mrs. Richard C. Dunaj are co-chairmen.

Representatives of member garden clubs were given flower show schedules and tickets at the meeting. Tickets may be purchased from garden club members for 75 cents or for 90 cents at the door. The show will be open from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. on March 9 and from 1 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. on March 10. The council agreed to support a project suggested at the Beautification Commission Monday (see page 8)—that is to plant portulaca throughout the city for more color during the summer.

Garden clubs will be in charge of "babysitting" with the seeds which the Beautification Commission will furnish—10,000 of them. Members will be expected to plant them in peat planters, also furnished, then the planters will be set in metal trays. It will take about eight weeks before the plants will be ready to put outside. "Storing them is the only problem," said Mrs. E.A. Hoffmeister, beautification chairman.

The plants will be put in public areas, such as entrances to subdivisions.

The council adopted a resolution which will be sent to Pat Standing, director of the planting commission, asking "extreme caution" in placing billboards along new roads in the city.

Mrs. Arthur Gallagher, reporting for Mrs. Gilmore Tibbott, said that pine trees were planted in front of the south parking lot of the General Hospital of Virginia Beach Tuesday to form a screen as was done on the north side last year. She also reported that Birdneck Garden Club has donated $300 for beautification of the hospital.

The council voted to send a letter to City Manager Russell Hatchett protesting the orange color trash receptacles in the city have been painted and suggested a soft green.

"Hatchett said once before that the orange is a more effective color," said Mrs. August Culpepper. "He's right—it's easier to see the eyesore."

Lakeville Estates Garden Club was voted into membership in the council. Mrs. Jack Lane is president.

"And did you hear about . . ." Girls will be girls no matter what their ages, as here proved by the very young ladies who chatted during a competition at Plaza Roller Rink last weekend.

Liz Sills Is Woman of Many Varied Talents

Elizabeth Stephenson Sills—or "Liz"—as she is better known to her friends—is a person of many talents. She studied piano for many years—also dancing, painting and sculpture—but she will vigorously deny that she pursues any of them these days, except incidentally in connection with her lifelong hobby of the theatre, or "to pick out a tune with one finger for Emily, my granddaughter."

Liz is one of the few founder members of the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach who remains active with the group. Currently she is engaged upon another directing stint for them—"The Late Christopher Bean"—a comedy of life in rural America by Sidney Howard, originally seen on Broadway in 1932 with Walter Connolly and Pauline Lord in the lead roles. The Virginia Beach production opens Feb. 9 and plays 10, 16, 17 and 18 followed by two performances in the new theatre at the Norfolk Museum.

This will be the first time that the Beach Little Theatre has had a showcase in Norfolk, and Liz Sills expressed her feelings about it as a mixture of pride that it was her show which had been chosen, and terror lest all her Norfolk friends come to see it and not approve of her efforts. "We are so proud of the standards we have set down here at the Virginia Beach Little Theatre—I'd just hate to feel I had let them down!"

Discussing the show Liz commented: "When I read the play—which of course I had seen performed some 25 years ago but had forgotten completely—I was immediately struck by the subtlety and humor of the dialog. It is a play which acts better than it reads, and in rehearsal the actors find themselves laughing so much at the lines, and even more at the situations, that they can't go on. This is a good sign—I feel the audience will have the same reaction."

She continued by saying that the more she studied the play the more she realized what a masterly playwright Sidney Howard was. "His dialog is two-edged and double-headed—he has the characters say things capable of interpretation several ways and the more you study each character the deeper you find it is. My main challenge as director is to be sure that I have the cast all headed in the same direction."

Apart from her long-time connection with the Virginia Beach group, Liz Sills is also a board member of the Norfolk Little Theatre and directs two plays performed on behalf of the Child and Family Service. Although she has done more in the directorial field in recent years, with such plays as "The Heiress," "My Three Angels" and "Silent Night, Lonely Night," she has also accumulated considerable acting experience over the years.

Her earliest appearance was as a German maid in the 1936 production of "Biography" at the Norfolk Little Theatre. She performed in many plays during all seven years of "Theatre-Go-Round" at Virginia Beach, and her most recent role was that of the redoubtable female Magistrate in "The Mousetrap" last season for the L.T. of V.B.

Visiting her hilltop home on the edge of the State Park which she shares with husband Bill, daughter Lisa and granddaughter Emily, not to mention three dogs, a Siamese cat and a Japanese Temple bird, one is at once aware of her other major life interest—deep love and concern—active concern—over animals. Liz is a founder member of another local organization, the Virginia Beach S.P.C.A., and she belongs to almost every Wildlife Protection association on State, National and International level. She even contributes to the fund supporting Gerald Durrell's zoo on the island of Jersey, which he started to preserve many world species facing extinction. This zoo now belongs to the island.

VIRGINIA BEACH SUN

Mrs. Deal, right, installs the new officers, left to right, Mrs. Babcock, Mrs. Hubert, Mrs. Tankersley and Mrs. Waller.

Church Council Installs Officers

Mrs. Wynn Haynes, a STOP volunteer, told members of the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women United Friday that although new rent-supplement apartments (HUD) will provide low-cost housing for low-income families, there is still the problem of furnishings.

"Some of the families who will be moving in don't even have dishes," said Mrs. Haynes in asking the church women to help in any way they can. Mrs. Haynes said all types of furniture, household articles and clothing will be needed.

She was speaking specifically of Bayside Arms at Chinese Corner, the first 125 units of which are expected to be completed in September. "Contact Jasper Davis, the manager," she said. "He knows the situation well."

Representatives of various churches at the meeting were instructed to tell their churches about the apartments. But the problem of where to store contributions was not solved.

Two representatives of HEPP (Home Education Planned Parenthood) in Portsmouth told the council about plans to open a local office in Virginia Beach. They operate under a grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity to furnish information on birth control.

Mrs. Betty Deal, first president of the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women and state president for three years, installed the new council officers. They are Mrs. Jane Waller, president; Mrs. Martha Tankersley, vice president; Mrs. Ann Hubert, secretary, and Mrs. Kay Babcock, treasurer.

True Romance Wrapped in Yarn

Valentine is the time for romantic thoughts, to look fondly at our mates, maybe plan a special meal or present. Or so I've been led to believe.

Frankly, I believe the only reason my husband proposed to me is because I can knit, and he wanted a sweater. Now that takes some explaining. My husband is six foot six. Ever try to find a sweater with 38 inch sleeves? Anyhow he won me over with his sad tale of woe, so I volunteered to knit him a sweater.

I started it nearly 10 years ago in Knoxville, Tenn. The yarn went with me to El Paso, Texas; Columbia, Mo.; Houston, Texas; Columbia, Mo. again, then Texarkana, Texas. It now rests in peace in the drawer of my sewing machine. (My husband hasn't filed for divorce yet.)

The whole trouble was the pattern I picked. It wasn't difficult, but I lost it. I couldn't find another one like it. So we still weren't married. I found another pattern, ripped out what I had done, and started all over. I had it almost done by the time of the wedding. Ever carry a wool sweater along on a honeymoon in July? A waitress in a one restaurant asked me if I was knitting it for a giraffe.

It was about this time I learned about men's measurements—that 38-inch sleeves did not mean 38-inch arms. So—I ripped the sleeves out again.

Not yet discouraged, I got the thing finished except for putting on the collar—I lost the pattern again. By now I can't even stand the sight of it. Thank goodness I have sewing and knitting for the brain to use as an excuse for not finishing it, although he does mention it wistfully now and then.

But please don't feel sorry for my husband. One of the neighbors came to the rescue with a sweater that just fits. I don't know where the neighbor got it, but I am eternally grateful. It probably saved my marriage.

Recess Has Been Replaced in Schools

By Carolyn McAllen

The cafeteria was transformed into a gymnasium in only 15 minutes, but the scent of sauerkraut still hung heavily over the room.

That didn't discourage the 150 fifth and sixth graders who marched in and took their places, literally, on the floor. Small triangles are painted all over the floor, and each student is assigned to one.

This is the scene at W.T. Cooke School for a physical education class. This same scene would not have been possible a year ago because of lack of equipment.

The scene is being repeated in several other Virginia Beach elementary schools this year in a new effort to utilize the public schools to the fullest. The three elementary new schools, to be built with money from the recent bond referendum, will include separate gymnasiums, according to Steve Chipok, coordinator of physical education.

"I hate the word cafeteria," said George Chandler, principal at Cooke. "That's what it was built for, but it was never used for a gym until this fall. The furniture could not be moved in less than two hours."

So, the cafeteria was renamed "Virginia Hall," and it was refurnished, after a time and cost study, with movable furniture and pull-out bleachers. A basketball court was painted on the floor.

Lunch hours were reorganized. The physical education classes meet from 9 to 10:45 a.m. Then the custodial staff takes over and sets up the tables (seats are attached) which move on rollers, for the first lunch group at 11. Instead of large groups coming in all at once for lunch, they are "phased out" in Chandler's words so that half of the lunchroom is free by the time the last group comes in to eat.

While they're eating, the custodial staff folds up the tables in the other half of the room and cleans the floor. At 12:50 Virginia Hall is ready for its next group.

"It's an inexpensive answer to having some physical education in the elementary schools," said Chandler. "The whole thing costs about $10,000. Building a gymnasium would have cost about $75,000."

And the children don't develop their physical skills in the early grades it's too late," Chandler said that last year Virginia Hall was used about 350 hours "primarily for lunch." He now estimates it will be used about 1,400 a year, including neighborhood league games.

Work at Cooke began in August and was completed in November. Chandler has a detailed diagram of the different seating arrangements which can be set up and the time it takes for each. Special bleachers pull out from the wall for athletic events.

Stage and floor are used at the same time. On the stage are parallel bars, pommel horses and pull up bars. On the floor are tumbling mats, jump ropes, two basketball goals (basket height is adjustable), a rope to climb, high jump and a space for practicing the broad jump. Boys practice weight lifting with weights made from plastic bleach containers filled with sand or water. Equipment is stored behind the stage.

Children in all city schools are given standardized physical fitness tests. It seems safe to say that those attending schools with such programs as Cooke has will outshine those in other schools.

In fact, that's one thing that brought about the stage and cafeteria utilization program in the first place. Several years ago, Thoroughgood seventh graders were defeating students from all other schools in the annual spring track and field competition. Later it was discovered that the Thoroughgood students had been practicing on the stage all winter while other students were cooped up in classrooms.

The idea spread to other schools without gyms. This fall brought about the first fullscale program on stages.

According to Chipok, Pembroke is completely equipped, Linkhorn Park and Kingston have tumbling mats and Kings Grant has parallel bars. He said the stage at Aragona is used at times, but that the school is used by a church on Sunday, which causes some problems with equipment. Alanton, Brookwood and Holland elementaries have gyms.

"With the proper space and supplies there's no limit to what these kids can do," Chipok said.

"It's a tremendous improvement over recess where the classroom teacher marched her students outside in good weather and kept them in the classroom in bad weather," commented R.B. Dyer, administrative assistant at Pembroke.

Pembroke physical education teachers J.D. White and L. Griffin (both teach other subjects too) point with pride to their school's equipment room. All game equipment is neatly stored there, and teachers may check out what they need. Something else new at Pembroke last fall was the introduction of field hockey.

One problem at some schools, Chipok mentioned, is that the stages are used by art and music classes.

Physical education in the elementary schools is handled in three different ways. At some schools, such as Cooke, a physical education "specialist" visits and oversees the program and instructs both students and teachers. "The specialist teaches the basics, the teacher takes care of the details," Chipok explained.

Some schools, like Pembroke, have departmentalized physical education where the physical education teachers also teach other subjects. "A lot of the departmentalized teachers are not physical education specialists," Chipok commented.

At other schools classroom teachers are in charge of the physical education program. Chipok has separate in-service training sessions once a month with all the specialists, with the departmentalized teachers and with the classroom teachers to go over the physical education program.

"I wish we could interest the principals at all the schools to utilize their stages as gyms during bad weather," said Chipok with a smile of pride as he spoke of the schools that had.

Before--the last first grade finishes lunch.

And after--ten minutes later classes are doing warm up exercises.

At the top of the pommel horse on stage at Pembroke a boy reaches a tough goal. The students climb to the top by putting the pegs in the holes and pulling themselves up.

Up, up and away goes a girl at Pembroke. Her gym costume is an old T-shirt labeled Virginia Beach High School.

Releases Suggested For Selling

Veterans who sell their homes and permit the buyer to assume their GI loan should get a release of liability from the Veterans Administration. Those who do not get such a release remain liable in case of subsequent foreclosure.

The Veterans Administration will issue a release provided the new buyer is approved as a good credit risk. However, a release from liability does not restore the veteran's eligibility for another GI loan. Eligibility is restored only when the Veterans Administration is no longer liable to the lender on the guaranty and if the veteran:

1. Is forced to sell his home through no fault of his own, for reasons of health, employment, etc.
 2. Has his property taken by a government agency for public use.
 3. Suffers property destruction by a natural hazard.
 4. Or if while still in service must dispose of his home because of a military transfer.
- Maurice J. Hunger, claims agent, visits the Alan B. Shepard Convention Center, 19th Street and Pacific Avenue, on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month, between the hours of 12:30 and 4 p.m.

Rev. Wagner Explains Values

The Rev. Roland Wagner, well known Baptist minister, now retired, spoke on "The Psychology of Values" at the February meeting of The Delta Rho chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma national education society.

Rev. Wagner is president of the advisory board to juvenile court in Norfolk and is chaplain to Alcoholics Anonymous. He is also a former teacher.

"In choosing values, we have to know what we're after," said Rev. Wagner. "It's so easy to miss the important things."

"We always want to speed up. We've exchanged happiness for excitement." He said people today, tend to see mistakes in others but not in themselves.

In advising the educators at the meeting, Rev. Wagner said, "I don't remember what the teachers taught me, but I do remember the teachers. It isn't what is taught; it's what is caught."

He said teachers must find out how they can affect children. "Find out who the children are and where they're from and then what you can do to change them."

Hostesses for the meeting were Miss Mary Ann Gansel and Miss Pat King.

Red Velvet Cake seems to make its appearance every year at Valentine. I've tried it and it's great.

Recipes have been printed locally, however, I got mine from my mother, and it differs slightly from others I have seen. The amount of food coloring is not a misprint, and the color of the cake is rich and rosy. (Besides, my husband loves the recipe too.)

RED VELVET CAKE

- 1/2 c. shortening
- 1 1/2 c. sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 c. flour
- pinch of salt
- 4 small bottles of red food coloring or 2 large bottles
- 2 T. cocoa
- 1 c. buttermilk
- 1 teas. soda
- 1 T. vinegar
- 1 teas. vanilla

Cream shortening and sugar. Add eggs. Mix cocoa and food coloring and stir into creamed mixture. Sift flour and salt. With electric mixer on medium, add alternately with buttermilk to mixture. Mix well and add vanilla.

Combine vinegar and soda and while still foaming, add to batter. Stir gently.

Bake in two greased nine-inch layer pans at 300 degrees about 30 minutes or until cake tests done.

frosting

- 2 T. cornstarch
- 1 c. water
- Cook until thick and let it get cold.
- 1 c. butter
- 1 c. granulated sugar

1 teas. vanilla

Add to the above and beat well until thick enough to spread. Allow plenty of time because the frosting takes awhile to set. It is very soft.

For a romantic Valentine breakfast treat we offer this recipe for Valentine Bread.

VALENTINE BREAD

- 2 c. dairy sour cream
- 2 pkgs. active dry yeast
- 1/2 c. warm water (105 to 115 degrees)
- 1/4 c. soft margarine
- 1/3 c. sugar
- 2 teas. salt
- 2 eggs
- About 6 c. flour

Heat sour cream over low heat just until lukewarm. Dissolve yeast in water in large mixing bowl. Add warm sour cream, margarine, sugar, salt, eggs and 2 c. of the flour; beat until smooth. Stir in remaining flour until dough cleans side of bowl. Knead dough on well-floured board until smooth, about 10 min. Place in greased bowl, turning once to bring greased side up. Cover; let rise in warm place (85 degrees) about 1 hr., or until dough is double. Punch down dough.

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Divide dough in half. Roll each half into a rectangle 25 x 6 inches. Make cuts, 2 inches deep on 25 inch sides at 1/2 inch intervals with scissors. Combine 1 1/2 c. peanut butter and 1 1/2 c. strawberry preserves. Spread 1/2 of mixture down center of each rectangle. Crisscross strips over filling. Place on greased baking sheet and bring ends together to form a heart shape. Pinch ends to seal. Bake 25 min. Brush with margarine. Makes 2 hearts.

To show that their hearts are in the right place, members of the Dam Neck Navy Wives Club of America, Number 207 will hold a give-away bakesale Feb. 14 at Dam Neck Fleet Anti-Air Warfare Training Center. Valentine Cakes and pastries will be given to the men at the Center in appreciation for their support of the club's regular sales.

On Feb. 15, club members will honor their husbands with a potluck dinner at their clubroom at Dam Neck. Hostesses will be Mrs. Douglas Peyton and Mrs. Pat Hood.

Princess Anne's NWCA at Oceana #143 will give a Valentine's party on Sat., Feb. 10, 8 p.m., at the home of Mrs. C. Freer of Virginia Beach. Club members and their husbands are invited.

The Princess Anne chapter operates a thrift shop, open 9 a.m. through 12 noon, every Tuesday and Thursday. The proceeds from the shop are going toward the purchase of a 20-inch fan for the Shore Drive Convalescent Home of Virginia Beach and donations to the NWCA scholarship fund. Donations of clothes, shoes, coats, toys and miscellaneous articles are welcomed. All children's books donated to the thrift shop are being given to the Seateak Community center.

Beautification Group Proposes Strong Action

Friday, at its first meeting since last May, the Virginia Beach Beautification Commission set a date for Arbor Day, discussed legislation to inhibit litterers and made plans for spring planting throughout the city.

The Commission has designated February as Arbor Month, and Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, as Arbor Day. City Manager Russell Hatchett will be asked to make the official proclamation.

Commission executive vice president, Col. Joseph W. Viner, proposed that the commission allocate $360 of its present (unencumbered) $1,800 in funds to purchase crepe myrtles to be planted at the city's 42 schools on Arbor Day. The commission accepted the proposal, and expressed the hope that the city will meet the commission's purchase of plantings for the schools. President of the group, Mrs. E. S. Ruffin, Jr., suggested that the commission support anti-litter legislation to be presented to the state General Assembly this spring. According to Ruffin, the state law which now makes littering a misdemeanor and punishable by up to $500 in fines is not being enforced—largely because the policemen attempting to prosecute the punishment cannot fix the blame on any one person in the automobile from which the litter was thrown.

A remedy for this, Ruffin said, is to pass legislation making the driver/owner and all passengers of a car from which litter is thrown guilty of aiding and abetting in the misdemeanor.

The commission will now move to find the best anti-litter law in use in other states, with the help of lawyers and researchers, to be modified for use in Virginia and presented to the General Assembly.

Sims Read, vice president of the commission, proposed that the Commission allocate $300 to purchase 10,000 plants for the city of Virginia Beach.

The proposal was accepted and the flower decided on was portulaca, an annual that is variegated in color and which re-seeds itself, assuring a continuing growth of plants. Read, and other members of the commission, described portulaca as a hardy plant that will grow almost anywhere.

It was pointed out by one of the commission members that the new Virginia Beach-Norfolk toll road is not out of bounds to commercial advertising, not yet being a part of any inter-state highway system. The commission took a preventative step in unanimously agreeing to advise both the city Planning Commission and City Council (who must approve signs to go up along the road) that they are strongly opposed to any such signs being placed on the toll road.

Garden Clubbers Set Program

Play Is in Rehearsal At 1st Colonial H.S.

By Erik Klingenberg
First Colonial High School

The Drama Club at First Colonial High School is in rehearsal for the upcoming production of "Around the World in Eighty Days." The play to be presented Feb. 22 and 23, is a musical comedy by Peter Gurey.

Based on the novel written by Jules Verne, the plot of "Around the World in Eighty Days" is a redundancy of its title. The action is centered around a man, Phileas Fogg, played by Chris Wade, who wagers that he can traverse the world in 80 days.

The production is under the supervision of three directors. Mrs. Betty Rogers, sponsor of the Drama Club, is the stage director. J. William Miller, choral director at First Colonial, is the musical arranger and Mrs. Susan Blackburn is technical supervisor. The coordinating student director is Vicki Hansen.

Other members of the cast include Teresa Seaman, Efron Osoorio, Gail Gordon, John Wolfe, Joyce Griffin, Ned Williams, Debbie Bailey, Jay Shelly, Jerry Allard, Debbie Schwartz, Joe Fairchild, Brooke Moore, Hank Folles, Linda Hansen, Mike Moss, Deah Enteminger, Larry Van Nostrand, Bobby Hansen, Susan Washburn, Judy Haubrick, Sandy Long and Mary Sydney Baker.

On Friday morning, Feb. 2, class meetings were held for the selection of attendant candidates to represent each class at the Colonial Ball. The Ball, to be held on Apr. 6 in First Colonial's gym, will see the selection of the Colonial Ball Queen.

The candidates for queen and two attendants in the Senior Class are Hedi Scharitz, Patti Jensen, Jane Danforth, Debbie Murden, Pam Garret, and Jane

The Freshmen selected Priscilla McNary, Cecilia Dowdy, Linda Bizant and Jenny Landas their representatives.

Finally, the Eighth grade class nominated Mary Carls, Michelle du Pree, Sandy Garrett and Sandy Kirkland. First Colonial swept channel 10's "Hit-G" for the second time Sunday, Feb. 4, by narrowly defeating Ferguson 200-185. Last week the team topped Deep Creek with a score of 240-125. The members include Tom Eagar, Ron McAlhany, Duncan Smith and Chris Wall, the team and its sponsor, Mrs. Thelma Houck, return Sunday to battle Cradock.

Maur's Commodores defeated the Patriots in basketball last Friday night 91-43. The Patriots, led by coach Pat Keefe, still hold a 4 win loss record and hope to turn the rest of the season into the win column.

Cox Sets Mock U.N. To Discuss Crises

By Doug Schroeder
Frank W. Cox High School

The Frank W. Cox High School SCA will sponsor a Mock United Nations day on Saturday, Feb. 17. The purpose of this project is to teach students the function of the U.N. and to gain insight on how today's young people would handle world situations. The assembly will begin at 10 a.m. in the Cox High Gym.

The idea came to the SCA via Ron Davis, SCA projects committee chairman. Ron will act as secretary general of the U.N. Members of the U.N. day committee include Sue Sewell, vice-chairman and Ray Rogers, organizations advisor. Also are Vicki Allen, Pat Daily, Ed Richardson and Doug Schroeder, U.N. council co-chairman.

Approximately 60 countries will be represented with over 120 students serving as ambassadors. Smaller branches of the U.N. such as NATO, SEATO, OAS, and the Common Market will also be represented. The participation of the entire student body is encouraged and all visitors are welcome.

The participating students will act as ambassadors to most of the countries represented in the U.N. Each ambassador will receive a packet in the morning with the instructions of the day enclosed. The entire building will be open with class rooms being used as council rooms and embassies. Each embassy will be identified by their nations flag on the embassy door.

Doug Schroeder

Ambassadors will be kept busy throughout the day long project with activities such as the General Assembly, important telegrams and phone calls, and a surprise meeting of the General Assembly.

At the General Assembly the actual world situation will be discussed. The Egyptian crisis, Vietnam and the Cyprus incidents will be the main topics of discussion.

The ambassadors will vote in the same manner their respective countries would. Each ambassador has researched his country's policies on an international level in order to make this possible.

Jerry Devine, student activities director, predicted that this will prove to be a very interesting assembly. "It will be a situation where the problems of the world will be on the shoulders of these students and they will have to think for themselves on the appropriate actions to take, knowing that if they take the wrong steps in solving situations it will be up to them to correct themselves."

CCO Told Conflicting Groups May Confuse Stadium-Center Plans

The Mayor's special committee looking into the feasibility of a new stadium and convention-cultural center in Virginia Beach met with the Council of Civic Organizations, members of other interested organizations, and representatives from neighboring cities at Bayside Elementary School last night.

The chairman of the special committee, Bayside Councilman Lawrence Marshall presented a report of his committee to date, including a synopsis of facilities seen on a recent southern trip to study the matter. Besides Marshall, Councilman Al Boatney and Assistant City Manager Roger Scott serve on the committee. On the trip to Memphis, Monroe, (La.) Miami, Miami Beach, St. Petersburg and Atlanta, they were accompanied by Councilman George Ferrell and Civic Center Director, Sam Scott.

Marshall added that he supports the idea of a multi-city stadium as being most feasible in the area, and that Virginia Beach could not go it alone. He also pointed out that few, if any, stadiums in the country make money, and that few convention centers operate in the black.

On the idea of public bonds being sold to finance the facility, Marshall said, "I think it's going to be pretty hard to sell bonds for a facility which probably won't make money."

Although Marshall said his committee welcomed any help, he felt that efforts now being planned by other groups would certainly cause a tremendous overlap and duplication of effort.

"But if someone has a better idea than we do, I'll gladly do my part and back them," said Marshall.

The day after the committee returned from the trip, a bill was introduced in the Virginia House of Delegates by Chesapeake Del. Robert Gibson, that would create a Tidewater Recreational and Cultural Authority for Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Norfolk and Portsmouth. Marshall said he did not know of the bill before it was introduced.

The next day a private committee, now drawing up a non-profit corporation, was revealed in the four cities with the same aim. The two Virginia Beach men on the committee are Reid Ervin and Dr. John Mapp. Ervin, who was invited to the CCO meeting by Dugro, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, that he too felt a centrally located multi-city stadium should be built, that he was in favor of a multi-sport stadium, that it should be built where most accessible, that he too had seen the Memphis stadium and was most impressed, and that if the Gibson bill becomes law and an Authority is set up, his committee will pass along anything it has done.

He added that the group hopes to raise money for a "consensus study" of the matter that will hopefully be reviewed by interested city councils.

"I think we have to build public interest, said Ervin, "so the voters will go to City Council and force the issue."

Ervin added that he did not see any real duplication of effort with so many groups working on the matter, "I hope there'll be cooperation," he said.

As a site for a new convention center, the city-owned land off Laskin and Holly Roads once used for sewage disposal was again discussed. Part of the land would have to be filled in, but it was felt the cost would be less than at some other places near the oceanfront.

Controversial zoning matters caused this "Standing Room Only" situation in City Council chambers Monday.

Zoning Matters Fill Council Room

When City Council convened five minutes early Monday there wasn't even standing room available.

The Circuit Court Chamber was packed to capacity and interested spectators lined the steps on both sides. Zoning matters concerning several areas concerned these citizens, and after only three items were taken up, the chamber was almost emptied. But those items alone took well over an hour.

Five cases were re-referred to the Planning Commission, including one of the controversial ones. The Fairfield project, residential and commercial development of a 30-acre tract in Kempville, was approved with Planning Commission revisions accepted and with the acceptance of the Bellamy Manor Civic League. Residents of Acredale, however, went on record as opposing the project.

Council also allowed Norfolk developer Charles DeJournette to withdraw his petition for rezoning a tract of land off Newtown Road in the Fair Meadows Area for 245 apartments. The matter had received stiff criticism in a hearing before the Planning Commission. At the time DeJournette was associated with the United Church of Christ in a project designed to build low rent apartments with federal supplements. The church officials ended the association after the hearing.

Rezoning of the Conrad farm near Great Neck estates for smaller homesites than others in the area received a great deal of opposition by residents and an attorney for the civic leagues in the area. The original plan had already been revised once by the developer and the Planning Commission, but was again sent back to the Commission for further study.

Other matters sent back to the Commission included rezoning applications for a small shop on Birdneck Road near Laskin Road, an application for a zoning change on 22nd street at the entrance to the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway for a gas station, an application for zoning for construction of a duplex on Pleasure House Road and an application to use land on Lake Smith on Shore Drive for a temporary commercial camping grounds. Confusion over the latter caused its re-referral.

Council turned down an application to erect a billboard in the area of the new Expressway.

Applications approved also included a change of zoning for the Little Island project in Virginia Beach property on 14th Street, the city's application to modify the requirements for live entertainment, zoning for 36 apartment units on 20th Street, zoning for another 12 apartments on 14th Street, and zoning for a 10-unit motel on Atlantic.

Lerak Corp., which caused such a furor a month ago over the word "deal" used by an attorney in discussing rezoning for property at Lynnhaven and Holland Roads, was allowed to withdraw its application.

Glue Law Postponed

A proposed ordinance which was scheduled to go before City Council Monday making it a misdemeanor to inhale fumes of glue or to conspire with others to do so was not introduced pending statewide action. A similar measure, however, with lesser penalties, has been introduced in the State Senate by Edward T. Catton III, City Attorney Harry Marshall noted that state action could supersede council action. City police officials and other interested citizens had been urging council to adopt such an ordinance.

Glue Adds to Police Investigations Here

Court appearances are pending for a number of adults and juveniles facing various charges growing out of the investigation of the movement of marijuana through the city of Virginia Beach.

Nearly 70 persons are facing charges to date, and police officials tell the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN their investigation is continuing.

Most of the juveniles involved have been charged with "being incorrigible," while the adult charges vary from possession of marijuana to frequenting a disorderly house.

Another activity receiving much attention by members of the Virginia Beach Police Youth Bureau is that of "glue-sniffing." Three areas of the city have been identified by police as gathering places for sniffing glue. Police found large numbers of paper bags, along with large quantities of glue containers, in wooded regions around the Pembroke Mall, Princess Anne Plaza, and the Arrowhead region. Police are still investigating these activities.

The matter of narcotic traffic, and the use of drugs will be the topic of an address tonight by Lt. Henry Capps, director of the Virginia Beach Police Youth Bureau, before the Men's Class of the Galilee Episcopal Church of Virginia Beach.

While the city of Virginia Beach appears to have been spotlighted during the current investigation of movement of marijuana, officials are quick to point out other regions outside the city are also involved and are also involved in the investigation.

Report Clears Gibbs

Virginia Beach's superintendent of building inspections, John E. Gibbs, had to wait along with others until the end of City Council's marathon three hour and ten-minute session before finding out just what the city manager was going to say about him.

City Manager W. Russell Hatchett had said earlier he would report on his probe of Gibbs' office, by the police, which had been conducted since December. Hatchett had assigned Det. Sgt. Charles Harris to the case to investigate rumors of "disorderly conduct" in the office.

Hatchett informed Council in a letter which he read that the rumors are still nothing but rumors and there was no basis for dismissal or disciplinary action against Gibbs.

Hatchett added that the report pointed out occasions where there were differences of opinion and certain deviations from policy, and that he was turning the report over to the city attorney for any discussion he would like to have with the Commonwealth's Attorney.

The contents of the actual report were not made public, although Gibbs had said he would do so when he received his copy. Gibbs maintained throughout the investigation that there was no basis for any charges.

In other action council appointed Patrick Standing planning director, taking the "acting out" of his title he has held since November. Hatchett praised Standing and his work.

He told Council, "The only criticism I have heard of Mr. Standing is that he looks too young. I wish someone would say the same about me."

Standing countered with, "This job will probably remedy that." He is 27.

In other matters, Council took the following action. "Deferred for two weeks an application for 12-passenger fitness, to operate as a charter service in the city.

"Okayed water service for Boulevard Manor.

"Authorized Hatchett to re-submit an application for half of the $522,000 purchase price of the Little Island recreational facilities at Green Run Farms.

"Authorized Hatchett to re-submit an application for half of the $522,000 purchase price of the Little Island recreational facility at Sandbridge with priority over a pending application for recreational facilities at Green Run Farms.

"Allowed the City Manager to apply for admission into the "food stamp" plan from the State Department of Welfare and Public Aid.

"Civic Assistant Fire Chief Garland Axtell for heroism in saving two small children from a fire on January 17 in which two other children were killed.

"Provided the mechanics for a feasibility study to be made of the area from Kemp's Land-

The meeting was originally set two weeks ago, but was cancelled by snow and icy conditions. CCO president Herb Dugro said the purpose of the meeting was to get all the facts on the situation to date and to begin to push for locations for both a stadium and a convention-cultural center easily accessible to the best traffic routes and to those who will be using the facilities.

Dugro said it was his thinking that the two facilities would have to be separate, and that a stadium should be built on a share-basis with as many other Tidewater cities as wished to join.

"But right now we have to get the people interested in all this," he said. "That's our biggest problem now."

Marshall specifically spoke of the Memphis stadium, which seats about 70,000 people and where the Liberty Bowl is played. He said this one-sport stadium is most feasible to the Tidewater area. He added that the stadium should be built where traffic may be reached easily. He also praised the Monroe, La. convention center, and said it was close to our needs at Virginia Beach.

Marshall suggested that the next logical step would be to make a study for possible sites for both a stadium and a convention-cultural center or both in the same place.

"I'm not recommending a study by professionals at this time," said Marshall. "I feel certain that our own Planning Department can handle the job."

The Virginia Beach Jaycees today announced their selection of Mrs. Wallace T. Clark as the recipient of the Virginia Beach First Citizen Award for 1967.

The announcement was made by Robert L. Warren, Chairman of the Virginia Beach First Citizens' Committee. Mrs. Clark, who is widely known as Lucile Clark, is the Virginia Beach Jaycees' 18th recipient, and only the third woman to receive the honor.

Mrs. Clark moved to Virginia Beach in 1937. She immediately began her untiring efforts in service to her community. In her first year as a resident of Virginia Beach, she was elected president of the Ocean High School PTA. During her term of office, Mrs. Clark was instrumental in improving the playgrounds, library, and lunchroom facilities, as well as helping provide for the addition of a first-aid room with a practical nurse. At the end of her term of office, Mrs. Clark was elected president of the Parent Teachers Association of Princess Anne County.

From 1942 until 1946, Mrs. Clark served as president of the Princess Anne Woman's Club. During the same period she served as Legislative Chairman of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Clark was very active during the war years in the Red Cross and Civilian Defense. She was awarded a citation for her unselfish efforts. Mrs. Clark also received a citation for her work on the Rent Stabilization Board.

In 1953, Mrs. Clark became the only woman in Virginia to be awarded the Zenith Television Award for her television show "Let's Cook." This award was for "excellence in local television programming."

Mrs. Clark has been a guiding light in the fight against polio. For 14 years she was chairman of the March of Dimes for Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County. Mrs. Clark served as chairman of the Advisory Board, National Polio Foundation for the State of Virginia. She led in the acquisition of the Salk Vaccine for the Virginia Beach school children. For her dedication to the eradication of polio, Mrs. Clark received a citation from the National Polio Foundation.

By Request for Advice

Last week, Virginia Beach State Senator Edward T. Catton III refused to seek an opinion of the State Attorney General on a fair housing proposal after a request by Tidewater Fair Housing Inc.

Robert O. Clapp, of the organization, wrote Catton noting that a fair housing resolution had been presented for action in November to the Virginia Beach City Council. He said he was later advised by Assistant City Attorney Stanley Phillips that Council had no authority to act on such a resolution.

While Clapp called the Virginia Beach action "evasive" and noted that several other Virginia cities had adopted similar resolutions, he asked Catton to get the legal opinion of Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Button. Catton replied that he believed the request would be an insult to the City Council. He said

Mrs. Clark Council Disburses Money

Money matters also consumed much of the time of City Council Monday.

Council approved on first reading a $1 million non-referendum bond issue and gave final approval to a $2 million water and sewer issue voted on at the last meeting.

About $250,000 of the new issue will be used to pay back the general fund of the city the money borrowed for purchase of the Little Island property at Sandbridge, pending federal fund approval which did not come.

Another $250,000 will be used for building a municipal golf course on acreage expected to be acquired soon from Camp Pendleton adjoining Redwing Park. Additional Pendleton property has been approved as a sand borrow pit.

An additional $200,000 will be used for completion of work at Rudee Inlet, where federal and state funds may be later used.

The rest of the new issue will go toward streets and highways.

In other money action, the city decided to make a $1.5 million dollar payment the end of this month on a $3 million loan from First and Merchants Bank. The rest will be paid on May 1.

After some lively discussion concerning reasons bids were nearly $25,000 higher than the architect's estimate for the City Communications Center, council finally approved the low bid of $84,498 for the building at Princess Anne Plaza. The federal government also may pay half of the cost of this building, since it will be built to withstand fallout conditions of a nuclear attack.

Other funds appropriated included $1,000 for operation of the City dredge, $3,000 for a fence and gates around the land fill-amphitheater project off Bonney Road, $2,357 for a Avonville Court finished some time ago but never paid for, $2,540 for sewer services in new buildings at City Hall, $10,000 for first phase of a complete study of the city's zoning laws, $3,534 for site work at the new fire station at Princess Anne and $1,900 for revisions in the Welfare Building under construction.

Long Hoped-for Academy Is Reality for Tidewater

The Tidewater Police Academy, long a pet project of Virginia Beach police and safety officials, held an inaugural luncheon at Old Dominion College in the Lewis Webb College Center Monday, Feb. 5, to mark the initiation of the first day of classes and to introduce the Academy's first director-elect, USAF Capt. James A. Austin, who is presently attached to the U.S. Air Force Base at Langley Field.

Twenty-five police recruits from the police forces of Norfolk, Hampton, Chesapeake, Virginia Beach and the Norfolk Municipal Airport have registered for the first six weeks' session.

Capt. Austin, a native of Vermont, graduated with high honors from Michigan State University in 1964 with a degree in police administration. He was awarded the USAF commendation medal for outstanding security accomplishment while on temporary duty in Vietnam and Thailand in 1965. He served he developed and supervised the security and law enforcement program for approximately 8,000 military and civilian personnel.

His varied training has included field training work with a county sheriff's office, both city and state police in Michigan, as well as training in such specialized areas as the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division of the U.S. Department of Treasury, Northwestern University's Traffic Institute and the U.S. Army Intelligence School at Ft. Holabird.

Since March 1966 he has served as Officer in Charge with the Law Enforcement Branch at Langley where he has developed and supervised law enforcement functions for 25,000 military and civilian personnel.

Capt. Austin will be one of the instructors for the first session of the Police Academy and will begin his duties as academy director May 1. Professor Ronald G. Spector, ODC chairman of law enforcement, will serve as director pro-tem.

Development of the Police Academy has been sparked through the efforts of members of the Hampton Roads Committee on Area-Wide Cooperation and a special study group of the committee headed by Mayor Ann H. Kilgore of Hampton. The study group created the Police Academy advisory committee of which Chief C.J. Staylor, Jr. of Norfolk is chairman.

In addition to Chief Staylor and Mayor Kilgore, the advisory committee includes: Lt. L. L. Crutchfield, Suffolk Department of Police; Hon. H.V. Hooper, Newport News City Councilman; Chief John J. Lucey, Hampton Police Department; Capt. Henry C. Mapes, Newport News Division of Police and Public Safety; Capt. A. B. Roane, Chesapeake Police Department; Capt. Harry Terry, Virginia Beach Police Department; and Deputy Chief C. L. Warren, Portsmouth Police Department.

In keeping with plans of the advisory committee, the Academy will afford a uniform basic training program for all of the jurisdictions in Tidewater Virginia who would like to participate. Members of any recognized law enforcement agency in the area, as well as members of police departments and sheriff's offices, are eligible for assignment to the Academy.

Two chief advantages the committee sees in the establishment of the Academy, Spector says, are the economies of a coordinated program and the frequency with which training sessions may be scheduled. Present plans call for regularly scheduled sessions once every two months during the academic year.

Each training session will run for a total of 210 hours, five days a week, for a period of six weeks and will comprise classroom lectures and field exercises. Some 63 persons will participate as instructors.

Few persons today would recognize the Seatack Fire Dept. "Station House" on South Birdneck Road as the previous location of the former Seatack Elementary School.

Seatack Volunteers Claim Old School as Their Headquarters

Many residents of Virginia Beach probably have a closer relationship with the Seatack Volunteer Fire Dept. than they realize.

For the building which serves as headquarters of the department, located on South Birdneck Road, was once used as the Seatack Elementary School. Of course the building as it stands today is the result of several renovations and additions over a number of years. Shortly after organization of the Seatack "Volunteers" in July of 1948, the building and land was donated for use as headquarters of the unit through a grant from the trustees of the school.

Actually the beginning of the Seatack "Volunteers" began in 1943 as a Civil Defense Unit during the World War II. This operation continued until 1948 when 21 men completed required courses of instructions to qualify as fire fighters, and banded together. Sylvester Shaw was elected as the unit's first chief, with Aaron A. Parsons assistant chief, and Rev. David T. White as president.

By use of a public fund drive the group raised $1,000 in contributions and borrowed another $1,500 to purchase a "pumper" engine from the Oceana Volunteer Fire Department.

Today the operation of the unit involves four pieces of equipment, two "pumpers", one of which was purchased in 1966, one salvage truck and a "tanker".

The present officers are Joseph V. Grimstead, president; L.C. Northern, vice president; Preston H. Watkins, secretary; and Rev. David T. White, treasurer. Aaron A. Parsons has held the position of "Chief" since 1950. He is assisted by Irving Gray, 1st assistant chief; Erving Hoggan, Sr., 2nd assistant chief, and Silas Hyman, captain.

The present strength of the unit is 35 men but there are more men wanting to join the department whose names have been placed on waiting lists awaiting future openings.

When questioned by the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN about the progress of the unit over the years, Parsons said "I think we've done remarkably well in spite of the difficulty we have in soliciting funds. The fellows in the department from time to time chip in to help in meeting notes due on money borrowed from banks".

One of the main projects at the department now is the completion of renovating the second floor of the station house which will contain office space, a meeting room, recreation room, and space for several bunk beds. Men of the department are doing the work on a voluntary basis.

Seatack "Volunteers" are proud of their Ladies Auxiliary and the assistance given by them in various projects such as fund raising drives. The Auxiliary officers are Mary E. Parsons, president and Aggie Cary, vice president; who direct the group in many successful charity drives conducted in the community.

While the Seatack unit, like several other volunteer fire departments in the city does not operate a rescue squad, Chief Parsons said, "We recognize the need for it", and that such an operation is in the planning stage.

Recognizing the need for continued improvement of their operation, members of the department attend weekly drill and training sessions involving the changes in fire fighting methods and equipment.

Chief Parsons spoke with pride about the members of the department when he said, "I'm very happy to have a close relationship with the people of the community and unity in the department".

Civic Center Discussion Is Topic for CCO Meeting

Snow, ice and hazardous driving conditions forced the postponement of a Council of Civic Organizations meeting several weeks ago, but the meeting has now been rescheduled for Feb. 14.

Earlier several city officials and CCO members were to meet at the old Nike site off Salem Road to examine what progress has been made toward improving the present civic center or building a new one.

The newly scheduled meeting, however will expand the original scope. Delegates from Virginia Beach, as well as from Chesapeake and Portsmouth sports clubs have also been invited to the meeting, as has Jim Dunn, general manager of the Neptunes.

In addition, Sam Scott, director of the present Civic Center at the Dome, and representatives of the mayor's special committee on a stadium and convention-cultural buildings will be present.

The Mayor's special committee is headed by Bayside Councilman Lawrence Marshall. Although a report is expected from that committee soon, details have not been made public so far.

There is growing sentiment to build a new complex instead of expanding the present facility, partly because of the parking problems that would be created. Without the new building attached, the Ruritan National convention proved that the parking lot is too small, and that the facility itself is not big enough for a large convention. Part of the activities were scheduled simultaneously in the Cavalier Hotel and viewed on closed circuit television.

There is also speculation that many city officials are hopeful a new site can be found in the Beach Borough near the majority of large hotels and motels.

Herbert E. Dugroo, CCO president, however, is reported to have said that the CCO feels the new center should be in the northern end of the city near the Interstate system.

Although there is hope that a new convention-cultural center could begin in Virginia Beach next year, Marshall says there is nothing definite so far.

Two other proposals have been voiced. A Virginia Beach developer has offered to give the city land on Shore Drive near Great Neck Road, and that matter has been taken under advisement. Also a plan to fill in the swampy area around the old sewage disposal plant off Holly Road and Larkin Road, and building the facility on the city-owned property is reportedly gaining steady support.

Pilot Averts Disaster

Quick thinking and fast action by a Naval aviator recently averted what could have been a major disaster at an Army airfield in South Vietnam's Mekong Delta.

Lt. Cdr. Allen Wesleskey of Thunderbird Drive, a pilot with Navy Helicopter Attack (Light) Squadron Three, the "Seawolves," had just landed at the Vinh Long Army airfield where his detachment is stationed.

As he was leaving his aircraft, he heard a muffled explosion and saw flames shoot across the runway where an army helicopter was being refueled. Grabbing the emergency fire extinguisher from his own craft, Lt. Cdr. Wesleskey darted across the landing strip to assist two soldiers who were already battling the blaze.

When he got to the scene, he first pulled at the fuel hose to get it out of the flames so the truck could be driven to safety. However, the open nozzle kept feeding fuel to the fire which was fast getting out of control.

Calling for the driver to remount his truck, Lt. Cdr. Wesleskey began spraying the fire with his extinguisher while shielding the driver. The truck made it only a few truck-lengths away when it stalled, still dragging the burning, fuel spouting hose. The base fire trucks arrived then and Lt. Cdr. Wesleskey manned one of the hoses which he applied to the burning truck.

The fuel pouring from the still burning nozzle began flowing dangerously near another parked helo. Seeing this, the Councilman George R. Ferrell has also said that several Councilmen will probably travel to other areas of the country similar to Virginia Beach to study what has been done there. He noted that he would be happy to make a trip, and several other councilmen have indicated they would be ready to travel also in the hope of getting all the necessary facts before making any concrete move that could cost upward of $12 million.

Col. Ware Promoted

Navy pilot and an Army pilot at the scene, Warrant Officer Charles H. Hardin, got the aircraft started and airborne before the flames could reach it.

After setting down safely on the runway, Lt. Cdr. Wesleskey raced back to the burning helo to assist the fire fighters. The truck fire was under control, but the chopper was still burning freely.

Seeing the ordnance had not yet been removed, he called for assistance to jettison the rocket pods and remove the machine gun ammunition. This done, he and a fireman scrambled to the top of the burning helicopter with a hose to flood the engine and transmission compartments.

Fighting the fire from the top and at its base finally brought it under control. And though there was little of the burned helo left, there were no personnel casualties, and a major disaster had been averted.

Col. Ware Promoted

Lt. Col. Arthur F. Ware, Superintendent of the State Military Reservation at Camp Pendleton, Virginia Beach, has been promoted to the rank of colonel by Special Order No. 1, issued Jan. 1, 1968 by order of the Governor of Virginia.

The eagle was presented to Col. Ware on Jan. 4, by the Adjutant General of Virginia, Maj. Gen. Paul M. Booth.

Narcotics Agent Answers Queries

The current investigation into the movement of marijuana through the city of Virginia Beach roused the curiosity of many of us as what marijuana will do, the problems raised by it, and the extent of it's use.

To obtain answers to some of these questions, the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN spoke with Andrew J. Heneghen, agent in charge of the Norfolk office of the Narcotics Bureau of the U.S. Treasury Department, who is highly respected for his knowledge of marijuana.

The text of the questions and answers of that interview are being published in the public interest, and in hopes it may be of benefit in curbing such activity.

Question: Is the use of marijuana on the increase?

Answer: There is an increase in the use of marijuana nationally, but in most areas it's a greater increase than in Virginia.

Question: Apparently users of marijuana in schools have been known for some time, why was no action taken before?

Answer: No comment.

Question: Is marijuana habit forming, and is it dangerous?

Answer: It is habit forming, yes, but not addicting. As for the danger of it, we have long been concerned about the association of marijuana and violence. Historically we see a parallel between the two things, violence and marijuana. In some parts of the world, particularly North Africa and the Near East, marijuana is known as "hashish". This word means the assassin. The reason it got this name is a particular tribe which specialized in assassinations frequently used marijuana before committing their crimes, and the people in that part of the world associated the tribe with the drug itself.

Question: Will the use of marijuana possibly lead to the use of other, and stronger, drugs?

Answer: Possibly, but I wouldn't make the "flat out" statement that the use of marijuana will lead to adding drugs.

Question: What sort of person uses marijuana, and why?

Answer: In most situations where we find a person who has been abusing drugs, whether habit forming or addicting drugs, we rarely encounter an individual who doesn't seem to have some inadequacies. They use this drug seemingly to give them a feeling of adequacy. That appears to be the personality factor we encounter with a good many of these people.

Question: What can be done about the problem?

Answer: I would say these situations, just like any other criminal activity, should be reported to the proper authorities; that's the only way anything can be done to eliminate them. With respect to narcotics drugs and marijuana, we have adequate state and federal laws at presented. I cannot comment about drugs such as "LSD 25", "amphetamine", and "barbiturate" drugs as the Federal Bureau of Narcotics does not have jurisdiction there.

Question: Do enforcement agencies do enough on this matter?

Answer: I feel certain that if they weren't doing work we would see a lot more of the potent varieties of marijuana.

Question: Do enforcement agencies work together?

Answer: Oh yes, we have very good close cooperation on narcotic enforcement matters.

Question: What good does a "crackdown" do? Do the users and pushers simply go underground for a while?

Answer: I don't like the word "crackdown", but we would like to think we are in a position to maintain steady pressure on those who traffic in marijuana.

Question: Where does marijuana come from? Is organized crime a source?

Answer: As you know marijuana can be grown almost anywhere in the United States, including Virginia. As for organized crime, I don't think we have that situation here, in terms of the syndicate operation. Perhaps some of the marijuana in this area now may have been brought into the region from another location in the midwestern United States, where it had been grown for some time.

Question: How about other narcotic traffic, is it here, is it prevalent, and what can be done?

Answer: We have a small group of "heroin" addicts in the Tidewater area, none of which are known to reside in or frequent the Virginia Beach region. One of the factors which has motivated some of the young people to experiment with marijuana has been the false information that marijuana is harmless. At the present time there are about three scientific studies underway to evaluate the dangerous characteristics of marijuana. We expect that some of these findings will be made public shortly and that young persons will then be better informed on the dangerous aspects of marijuana and similar drugs.

Question: What can those of us connected with newspapers and radio do about it?

Answer: I think the newspapers could help by helping to maintain the adequate laws that we have to govern these dangerous drugs. Should some highly articulate and vocal groups undertake a mission to remove such laws, this information should be given to the people, so they might be aware of what is being attempted, and if they oppose such a change they're in a position to be informed about it. There is an organization known as "LEMAR" which is aimed at abolishing the laws.

Question: Are known sources being watched?

Answer: No comment.

Virginia Beach High School seniors participated in experiments with the exhibits at Veeco's Nuclear Reactor Information Center in Surry County on a field trip Tuesday.

Seniors See Surry Nuclear Site

Sixty Virginia Beach High School seniors took a bus trip north Tuesday, to VEPCO's nuclear reactor information center in Surry County, just across the James River from Yorktown.

The trip, sponsored by VEPCO, included a tour of the information center, built at the site of the now-under-construction reactor, which should be completed by March, 1967. As a part of VEPCO's annual recognition of Thomas A. Edison's birthday, the tour ended with a question and answer session between the seniors—all of them outstanding science students—and engineers at work on the reactor.

The reactor is an innovation over the coal-fire type of power station and will provide some 1,600,000 kilowatts of electricity, or enough power to service about 400,000 homes in the Surry area.

Being built at a cost of about $265 million, the reactor is one of 16 commercially operated reactors in the country. It is expected to be in use for 40 years, and is built on a fail-safe basis, according to the VEPCO engineers. If anything goes wrong, the reactor automatically shuts itself off.

Schools Move Cautiously On Sex Education Program

Now that the schools of the City of Norfolk have adopted a program of sex education from the early grades through high schools, Virginia Beach is still investigating the possibility of instituting a similar program.

E.E. Brickell, incoming school superintendent said, "We have to move slowly on this matter. We have to be right in what we do."

Sex education programs in public schools are on the increase across America, and a special committee has been looking into all facets of the course in Virginia Beach for some time. A program is expected to be instituted.

Brickell added that their report and recommendations are expected soon before the School Board.

Congratulations to Beach Borough Asst. Fire Chief Garland M. Atwater who has been commended by City Council. Atwater was cited for his heroism in a fire Jan. 17 when he rushed into the burning Felton Spelman home on Jefferson Avenue, and carried two young children from the dwelling. Atwater humbly accepted the award by praising his fellow fire fighters, saying the act could not have been accomplished without the assistance of all who were on scene of the fire. Two other young children perished in the fire.

Officer Charles E. Stinson of the Bayside Police Precinct is attending classes in Law Enforcement at Old Dominion College. Stinson says the course will involve three years of night classes and lead to an Associate B.A. degree in Law Enforcement. At the present time Stinson has been assigned to Virginia Beach Assistant City Attorney J. Dale Bimston.

Chesapeake Beach Fire Chief Fred Quist says he and Beach Borough Fire Chief "Bubba" Bayne are planning on entering the "Firemen's Parade" of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, May 2nd at Winchester. Quist plans on entering a 1924 "MAC-Quad" ladder truck while Bayne's entry will be a miniature fire truck. Quistsays all he and Bayne need now is an invitation from the parade officials to take part in the event.

Senior CPO George C. Queen says plans are underway to place a duplicate of the "Beach Shore Patrol Detachment" plaque, on display in the lobby of the Beach Borough Police Precinct, in the Shore Patrol office in the Bayside Borough Police Precinct. Indications are the plaque should be ready within the next week or so.

Capt. W.J. Moore, Jr., Bayside Borough Police Precinct C.O., says officer A.R. (Butch) Benke is on the road to recovery from a recent illness. Moore says Benke is recuperating at home after being hospitalized for several days.

The topic of conversation around the Beach Borough Police Precinct is a duck-which Capt. R.C. Davis killed during the past season. The duck has been stuffed, mounted on a stand, and placed in Davis' office. However, Davis says the duck keeps glaring at him with a "glassy stare" and he's beginning to develop a "guilt complex" for having "done him in".

Young Teacher Is Object Of V.B. Jaycee Contest

Plans for the second annual selection of the Outstanding Young Educator of Virginia Beach have been announced by the Virginia Beach Jaycees.

Anyone may nominate by sending name and school address of the educator you desire to the Virginia Beach Jaycees, Box 1044, Virginia Beach, Va. The deadline for nominations is March 1.

Nominations will be judged by a panel of Virginia Beach civic and educational leaders. The selection of the Outstanding Young Educator will be based on his or her educational career, contributions to education and to the community, state, and nation. The local winner will receive a special award and will be eligible for the state competition.

Brotherhood Breakfast Set

National Brotherhood Week will be observed by the Clergy of Virginia Beach at a breakfast at 7 a.m. Feb. 20, at which Rear Ddm. Reynold D. Hogle, Commandant of the Fifth Ward District, will be the principal speaker.

The meeting is one of a series of special programs being sponsored by the Virginia Beach Jaycees in co-operation with the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

The week of February 18th is observed nationwide as National Brotherhood Week. In Virginia Beach a committee of the Jaycees working with Earl V. Slattum, Brotherhood Week Chairman for Virginia Beach, is carrying out the project of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Invitations to the breakfast at the Cavalier Hotel have been extended to the clergymen in the community.

Admiral Hogle, who is a past chairman for Brotherhood Week, has been closely identified with many military and community programs supporting the objectives of the Brotherhood Week observance.

Mayor Frank A. Dusch hands Brotherhood Week proclamation to Slattum.

Planning Commission Gets Green Run Plan

No one opposed the application of Green Run Corp. of Virginia Beach for rezoning when it was submitted to the Planning Commission at its meeting Tuesday afternoon.

The corporation plans to build the first of four "planned unit development" villages on the Sawyer Farm, which stretches from Holland to Princess Anne roads from what would be an extension of Rosemont Road southeast towards Princess Anne.

Each village is planned to contain a church, school, wide landscaped walkways, a "village center", recreation areas and a variety of residential housing. One of the most unusual features of the proposed development is the lack of "through" streets. Every point in the village can be reached without crossing a street.

An earlier rezoning application for a use permit to construct 58 two-story apartments at 15th Street and Mediterranean Avenue.

An application of John E. Marr for a Retail Business District zoning for his home at Pacific Avenue and 35th Street so his wife can open a florist business there.

Two applications of John Aragona Enterprises Inc. to construct 92 three-bedroom townhouses on either side of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway at Daytona Drive and Plaza Trail.

An application for a billiards center on Plaza Trail to be managed by Dan Arris.

An application by Bill Ken, Inc., represented by Kenneth Andrews, to construct a movie theatre near the Indian River Shopping Center on Indian River Road near Military Highway.

the minimum land per house required for developments. Planning Commission members praised Oscar Ferebee Jr., president of the corporation, for "his excellent presentation" which included slides and a film strip.

The overall development, if approved by City Council, is expected to contain about 4,000 families and more $100 million. Ferebee said the first six model homes could be ready by August if construction began soon.

There was no opposition to any applications which came before the commission. They included:

An application of Cecil Williams and Wade Jones for a change of zoning to construct a Shell service station at the end of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway at 21st Street and Lee Street.

An application of James A. Monaco for a use permit to construct 58 two-story apartments at 15th Street and Mediterranean Avenue.

Harris Takes Undersea Voyage

By Jack Harris

When I was a little boy the youngsters in our neighborhood had some pretty firm ideas on what they wanted to be when they grew up.

You can pretty well date my age when I mention such glowing aspirations as becoming a cowboy, Indian chief, policeman and locomotive engineer.

In this fast moving and changing world, youngsters and their ambitions also are changing. The "in" thing for the neighborhood kid is to become a jet pilot, an astronaut or a deep sea diver. The more danger, the greater appeal!

One of the more popular heroes of the day is the man who goes to sea in a cigar shaped thing called "submarine". Without question, TV's "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea" has added glamor to this particular way of life. And while some of the scenes portrayed on the Seaview are pretty well "way out" I recently found firsthand that submarine life, 1968 style can be pretty exciting and dangerous.

It all happened during a recent trip to Pearl Harbor as a guest of the navy department.

The submarine base in Pearl Harbor is probably the most important of all such type bases. It is easily spotted as you approach the island by a 136 foot escape training tank. The word "escape" tells all, for in this tank the men of our submarine force are taught the dangers of underwater life and how best to combat them. No man can qualify for submarine duty without first undergoing rigid training in the escape tank.

Almost unbelievable techniques and equipment have been developed to give underwater sailors better odds pursuing a career that never quite has the percentages going with them.

Try holding your breath for 30 seconds. Kinda rough! At the Pearl Harbor escape training tank men are taught to hold their breath for as long as 2 1/2 minutes. "It is a physiological approach," explained one of the instructors. "We tell them they can do it, show them, and they do it. It's that simple." It didn't appear simple. Picture it—you can, entering the bottom of the tank through an escape door and then holding your breath long enough to rise 100 feet to the surface. You can't rush it or the "bends" get you. It is quite a challenge and one that every enlisted man and officer must pass if he is to pursue a submarine career. Any takers?

Following this most enjoyable experience, our group headed for the docks and a ride on the USS Swordfish. On the way we learned some interesting facts about Pearl Harbor submarine base. Adm. Chester Nimitz, then Cmdr. Nimitz, established the base in 1912. What was once a swampy parcel of land is now a deep water basin, housing the most modern and devastating submarines in the world.

Diesel-operated submarines are becoming a thing of the past. Polaris and nuclear powered submarines prove the Pacific from this home base. Shared with the awesome responsibility of keeping our lifeline to Vietnam intact. Although there are those who consider submarines as "outdated" in modern warfare, this feeling obviously is not shared by Navy and defense officials. The building of nuclear powered submarines has top priority in this country. Russia is well ahead of us in the race, by almost 4-to-1.

Russian submarines patrol the Pearl Harbor waters "close enough to get a Walkie talker," was the way one observer described it. We had that little thought in mind as our group boarded the submarine Swordfish for a trip "down under."

This is a great ship. Built in 1958, it is still magnificent in operation. The Swordfish was designed as an "attack" submarine whose primary function is to seek out and destroy enemy ships of any type including enemy submarines.

As we boarded the Swordfish each man in the group was given a small radiation detector, since the ship is powered by a nuclear reactor. "Anything to make us nervous," I was thinking. Seaside pills also were handed out. Being an old salt from the Atlantic, I palmed mine off to one of the group that possibly could put it to better use.

The captain of the Swordfish allowed our groups of 15 to ride "top" deck as she sailed out of the harbor. It must have been quite a sight to those on shore. I can hear them now "if that's the crew, we have got problems!"

Speaking of the crew, the Swordfish carries 85 men and officers. Duty on any submarine is strictly on a volunteer basis. Interestingly enough, the submarine division has a higher percentage of reenlistment than any other branch of the Navy. Still submarines are being built bigger than ever before, space remains as a major problem. The Swordfish is some four stories high and 267 feet long, but still there's just "room to breathe."

Most of the crew work a 12 hour shift with two men assigned to one bunk. Wherever there's space to stretch out you will find a bed, usually a collapsible type. In the aft section where there are four firing tubes, we found an off duty crewman grabbing 40 winks in his bunk. His arm was partially wrapped around a giant, awesome-looking torpedo. Brother, that's some sleeping companion!

Before making a dive, the skipper "tuned" periscope and allowed each of us to "eyeball" Diamondhead Mountain and other points of interest along Walkie Beach. Although many miles away, the powerful lens made you feel as though it was right on you.

As we took our turn on the "scope", I couldn't help but reflect back to the early days of World War II when German U boats were prowling off the Virginia Beach coastline. How really simple it was for the German subs to stalk our convoys departing Hampton Roads and, with periscope precision, pick their kill. Today's modern submarine has the advantage of updated radar, sonic and computer devices to locate its victim. However, the submarine skipper still relies a great deal on what he sees through the periscope when it comes time to "unload."

After everyone had a peek, our skipper lowered periscope and ordered a dive. This was the only time we had a sensation of movement. It reminded me of an express elevator moving upward or downward in an extremely tall building.

A submarine is handled much like a modern aircraft. For lack of a better description there is a pilot and co-pilot sitting side by side. Each works a steering wheel similar to those in an automobile. On a dive the wheel is pushed forward. When surfacing the wheel is pulled back in the direction of the navigator. Of course there is much more to the navigation of a sub, but in simple terms, that's the way they do it.

The skipper let this reporter sit at the controls during one dive in which the sub covered 500 feet in exactly 90 seconds. Felt like Buck Rodgers for awhile!

The Swordfish, although 10 years old, is one of our faster submarines. Her top speed, depth capabilities, along with pertinent facts on the electronic and radar aboard is highly classified.

Regardless, when we returned to dockside and departed the Swordfish it was with the firm conviction that the submarines we build and the men who are trained to sail them are second to none.

The role of the submarine increases as rapidly as new war clouds on the horizon. It can be no other way on a planet that is 80 percent water.

And so perhaps it is quite proper that the little boys of this generation have replaced as hero worshippers "cops'n robbers" with jet fighter in the air and submarine men of the sea. For it seems a certainty that the destiny, the future and the hopes of this country rides in the cockpit of a plane flying too high to see and in the bulk of a submarine too deep to detect. The 20th century moves on at an accelerated pace. To survive we must keep step, at any price!

(Next week in a concluding article we will review our experiences and impressions of nine days with the Navy on patrol in the Pacific. We will attempt to bring into perspective the most serious problem facing our Navy today, the lack of reenlistments!)

Ruritan Show To Be Feb. 22-24

Vaudeville '68, directed by Hugh Copeland with Don Profit as musical director, is in rehearsal now and aimed for a target date of Feb. 22 as opening night.

The annual stage production has become more lavish over the years, and now involves a 60-member cast, of Ruritans as well as women and children. Dick Cockrell, co-director with Wilson, pointed out that the goal of the Vaudeville night is still to raise money for worthy projects. Rehearsals for the production began Jan. 15, and the performance will run for a three night stand at Kellam High School, Feb. 22-24. Opening night has been designated as family night, when all children accompanied by their parents will be admitted free of charge.

'PEP' Program Seeks to Protect Eyes

The Guild of Prescription Opticians of America today announced the launching of a year-round educational campaign known as the "Protective Eyewear Program" (PEP) to encourage the wearing of protective eyewear.

According to D. Kingsley Traylor of the Traylor Optical Co., 1369 Laskin Road, and a member of the local unit of the Guild of Prescription Opticians of America, the National Safety Council has endorsed the drive, which will attempt to wipe out accidental eye injuries.

Other local Guild opticians participating in the program include: E. Ray Howell Opticians; E. Ray Howell, 974 Laskin Road and Smith-Dunfield Optical Co.; Roy S. Dunfield, 19 Plaza Mall, Princess Anne Plaza.

"Over 500,000 children and adults suffer eye injuries at home, at school and industry each year," said Traylor. He explained that the Guild Opticians estimate that close to 90 percent of these injuries could be avoided if these children and adults were wearing protective lenses.

Contest Launches Library

Frere Jacques School at Great Neck Manor officially opened its new library last month and is now in the process of building up its collection of books.

A poster contest held recently among all the children at the school (grades one through seven) used the new library as subject matter for the contest posters.

The posters, hung now along the school corridors, range from super-serious admonitions to "Be Quiet in the Library So Other People Can Read," to a whimsical dialogue between two round-headed characters who look suspiciously like Charlie Brown and Linus, to the effect that Linus should look in the new library's encyclopedia if he wants to find information about the great Pumpkin.

For the purpose of judging, the posters were divided into two groups—grades one through three and grades four through seven. The posters were voted on by the children themselves.

The contest was part of an effort to promote use of the library among the children. The selection of books, donated primarily by parents, now includes both reference books and fiction.

Mrs. Claudette Wagner, librarian at Frere Jacques, explained that 10 to 15 children at a time use the library, in staggered shifts. The school is also building up a record library, which will be available to individual teachers for classroom use.

Mrs. Wagner has hung reproductions of works by Matisse, Picasso, Renoir, Miro, Chagall and Rounault in the library, in the belief that "a library is to stimulate children's minds, and art does that as well as books."

Schools Will Get Shrubs

Mayor Frank Dusch has signed a proclamation designating February as Arbor Month, and Feb. 22, Washington's birthday, as Arbor Day. The proclamation came after a recommendation from the city's Beautification Commission, and called for all Virginia Beach residents and property owners and occupiers "in a position to do so" to plant a tree during Arbor Month.

In a letter from Beautification Commission vice president, J.B. Withers, Jr., thanking Mayor Dusch for making the proclamation, it was pointed out that the commission will plant crepe myrtle trees at all Virginia Beach schools this year, as they did on Arbor Day, 1967.

The crepe myrtle has been adopted by the City Council as the official city tree. The trees planted at the schools by the commission will be watermelon pink in color.

It's Magic Time in Richmond

As soon as the District Court brought an end to one of the greatest injustices ever done to localities, the State's new budget was thrown into a panic. As soon as the court said that ALL of the federal impact funds not half should be given to the localities they were meant to serve, the new budget for the 1968-70 biennium was in grave danger of not balancing, even with an $81 million bond issue.

Virginia Beach officials applauded the verdict, and although the State noted that an appeal was possible, they feel the localities can win on appeal too. Finally Virginia Beach will get the proper amount of federal money due us, and no doubt the funds will be a big equalizer in the city's new budget. Hopefully taxes will not have to rise, or at least, perhaps not as much.

But do not pity the State which almost immediately said taxes might have to be raised. For within a few days, almost as if by magic, enough money was found from new looks at sales tax revenue and other sources not only to match the amount to be lost by the impact funds but also to leave an additional $1.8 million left over for distribution, possibly to the colleges and universities which need it so desperately. Amazing.

So what would have happened had the court not made this decision? The windfall would still have been there in the State coffers, and we in Virginia Beach would have gone right on paying for the State's problems, while our own locality continues to be strangled for the need of additional revenue. The time has come for the localities to reap the harvest of windfalls.

And the State of Virginia should be ashamed of itself for noting an appeal in the impact funds case. All we want is what is coming to us, and the court has awarded us that. If the State can't pull another magical windfall out of the hat next time, then maybe something concrete like paramutual racing could help. Taxes are high enough.

Talk Is Not Enough

There's a lot of talk going on about a new convention-cultural center and possible stadium for Virginia Beach. Fine. But talk is not enough. We need both facilities badly, and we need them now. We hope that so much talk by too many people will not muddy the waters of progress. We want to see a new spirit of cooperation by all those interested in the future of Virginia Beach.

We prefer that a stadium be built as a joint effort of as many Tidewater cities as possible, in order to fill a real gap. Foreman Field in Norfolk is antique and obsolete, and not nearly large enough. We would like to see this stadium be placed conveniently for all traffic, hopefully in Virginia Beach, where land is abundant, and we would like to see it be a moneymaker.

But even if it does not make a profit, we still feel it should be built.

We prefer also that a large convention-cultural center be built as near the oceanfront and the tourist-oriented facilities as is feasible. It should be large enough to accommodate large conventions in one place, and should be a moneymaker. But even if it is not profitable, it still should be built to increase the money it will bring into Virginia Beach. And it should be built immediately, no matter what our neighboring cities do.

Hopefully politics and too much talk can be kept out of these matters so that both facilities can be built to the satisfaction of all of us. Now let's all get in there, talk a little, then do a lot.

A Mighty Important Week

In a single week which already has Lincoln's birthday and Valentine's Day in it, several other significant events are being celebrated which deserve not only mention but also great praise.

This is Boy Scout Week, dedicated to those young men of the future who learn together as they work and play together. No matter how tough the going may be, these young men are learning the qualities of leadership, understanding and equality. The Boy Scouts of America, through the direction of untiring leaders, are striving for the emergence of its ranks into manhood, better qualified to deal with the problems of the world. We salute the Boy Scouts and the fine work they do.

This is also Brotherhood Week, a week so important all of us should stop, reflect, and vow to do more toward brotherhood the rest of the year. Sponsored annually by the National Council of Christians and Jews, Brotherhood Week can only call attention to man's inhumanity to man. The rest is up to us.

Nationally the Elks are celebrating their 100th anniversary this week. This fraternal organization has engaged in so many charitable works in its century, it would be impossible to list them all. Our own Virginia Beach Lodge is a shining example, and we wish all Elks continued success on their birthday.

Freedom's Roll Call also begins this week its annual educational campaign to stimulate all citizens to think, speak and act more in support of the American way of life. The slogan this year is "Freedom—Ignore It and maybe it'll go away." Think about that.

There is nothing so costly as unwise conservatism. Such a tour is a must, combining our beautiful homes, waterfront including the many old relics that abound in this area. "The birthplace of the nation."

For the Tour

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:
I recently read the editorial "Time Out for a Tour (Feb. 1, 1968) and the reference to the old historical lighthouse has been the bane of my existence. A community to be so fortunate as to have this interesting relic and to let it crumble into dust would annoy me, for I have been a resident of Virginia Beach for 40 years.

A further annoyance as a property owner and full well realizing the future of Virginia Beach and its attractions for tourists, it was always the complaint from those who visited us and hotel guests we would meet on the beach. "Why don't you folks wake up and give us visitors something to do, other than sand and water which are of course well enough loved to spend our money to come for?"

Long ago I wrote an editorial criticizing our "Pay as You Go Byrd Citizens", and pointing out that some group should advocate and even advance the money to save the lighthouse as a great attraction. A tour could have been in vogue years ago, and it would have paid for itself a thousandfold.

No Trespassing

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:
One of mankind's most gnawing cravings is to constantly try for the forbidden, the hidden and often, the most hazardous of all ventures.
In Genesis, Chapter 3, Verse 3, we find the beginning of this human urge. It has continued with the human family ever since. The male segment of the race seems to have cultivated this craving to the "Nth" degree.
A no trespassing sign out in the big open spaces seems to say to the hunter, "The game must be there." He must try for it. The traffic sign reads 60 M.P.H. He must try to double it. He watches the air travelers set new speed records every day. He sets his sights on being the "biggest daredevil of them all."
He views the beautiful damsel gorgeously but modestly attired. He says, "She's for me!" You ask him "Why?" He will tell you, "I like the glories of all the cherished, hidden treasures."

Delightful Virginia Beach

We were more than pleased to find the following editorial in the Feb. 8, 1968, issue of the Alexandria, Virginia, JOURNAL-STANDARD. It is reprinted here so that citizens of "Delightful Virginia Beach" can see what others think of it.
It is especially pleasing that this editorial comes from a city so abounding in early American history itself.

America's first travel writer hailed Virginia Beach as "no fitter place for man's habitation." And ever since Sir George Percy waded ashore with Captain John Smith 360 years ago, multitudes from pioneers and pirates to Presidents have cooled their feet on the sands of this Virginia seashore.

By recently incorporating adjacent Princess Anne County, Virginia Beach can now call itself "the world's largest resort." The city officially measures 25 miles by 15 miles, and claim to be the ninth largest city—in area—in the United States, the National Geographic Society says.

Sunny weather and miles of glittering sand beaches have made Virginia Beach a popular resort for nearly a hundred years. The old Princess Anne Hotel was renowned throughout the East; it entertained such illustrious guests as President William Howard Taft and the Barrymore family. The ultramodern Princess Anne Inn of today carries on the same tradition.
Many vacationists forget that Virginia Beach is one of the Nation's most historic areas. The bustling downtown area is only 60 years old, but Princess Anne County has existed officially for 272 years. The oldest brick dwelling in the United States, the Adam Thoroughgood House, stands there.

Pioneer visitors to Virginia Beach met with an unforgettable reception—a volley of arrows from hostile Chesapeake Indians. After four stormy months crossing the Atlantic, the first permanent English settlers in America stepped ashore at Virginia Beach's Cape Henry on April 26, 1607.

Wrote English journalist Sir George Percy: "At night when we were going aboard then came the savages creeping on all fours from the hills like bears with their jaws in their mouth, charged us very desperately in the face and hurt Captain Gabriel Archer in both hands and a sailor in two places of the body, very dangerous."

"After they had spent their arrows and felt the sharpness of our shot they rushed into the woods with a great deal of noise and so left us."

The early pioneers soon discovered local pleasures, Sir George reported:
"We came to a place where (the Indians) had a great fire and had been very roasting oysters. We ate some which were very large and delicate in taste. . . . Going a little further we came onto a plot of ground full of fine and beautiful strawberries, four times bigger and better than ours in England."

Though the English were delighted with Virginia Beach and surroundings, they sallied up the James River and settled Jamestown for greater safety against Spanish attack.

Many years later, the notorious Blackbeard rounded the shores of Virginia Beach, and allegedly buried gold there.

Blackbeard's horde has yet to be found, but more enduring treasures—succulent Lynnhaven oysters and plump strawberries—still please visitors.

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

"Where is he?" he snapped.
"Where is who?" she asked.
"Your son."
"Our son."
"OK, our son. Where is he?" he snapped a little louder.
"What's he done this time?" she asked, preparing herself for a full account.
"He chopped down the crepe myrtle tree in the back yard with his Boy Scout knife."
"Oh," she said. "Maybe he wants to be President."
"What?"
"George Washington chopped down a cherry tree, and he became President."

Wooden False Teeth Are Cheaper

"George Washington didn't use a Boy Scout knife," he said.
"Besides the Beautification Commission has declared this Arbor Day. You're supposed to plant trees today, not chop them down with a Boy Scout knife," as "Maybe he wasn't a member of the Boy Scouts."
"Who?"
"George Washington," she answered simply. "Furthermore, our dear little son has already admitted to me that he chopped down the crepe myrtle tree. He wouldn't be like George's father. He was scared you'd wait the daylight out of him."

"He was right."
"How do you ever expect him to become President?" she asked a little too sweetly. "Besides, I already spanked him."
"OK, you win," he relaxed and smiled a little too. "But what made him do it?"
"That's an easy one," she said. "He's been studying about George Washington in school."
"Oh! Well, that explains everything. . . . You know, I've never believed all those stories about good old George anyway. Nobody could really throw a silver dollar across the Potomac," he mused.

"A dollar went a lot farther in those days," she answered. "The first time I heard that I split the slats out of my cradle," he said loudly. "But what about those signs on all those inns and hotels. . . . 'GEORGE WASHINGTON SLEPT HERE.' If he slept in all those places, he would have spent most of his time in bed."
"How else did you think he became Father of our Country?"
"Very funny," he snapped back sourly. "To hear you tell it, he would never have had time to fight the Revolutionary War. . . . And I can't believe he was all that brave either. Standing in the bow of the boat at Valley Forge. Besides he would have gotten frostbite," he added, pleased at his little joke.

"He did," she said. "And he had to have all his teeth pulled, and false teeth put in."
"Now that's another thing," he said, warming up to his subject. "Who ever heard of wooden false teeth?"
"Wooden false teeth are cheaper," she said. "It was a bad year for the crops at Mount Vernon."
"You're just hilarious today," he said sarcastically. "There he is."

"Who? George Washington?"
"No, our son. . . . Hey, you, out there. . . . Come in here. . . . Now, did you or did you not chop down the crepe myrtle tree?"
"I cannot tell a lie," he said dramatically. "I did it with my own Boy Scout knife."
"Why?" she asked.
"Because I want to be president," he said.
"See!" she said. "I told you he was a little bit of a liar."
"You keep out of this. . . . Never mind, son. Say, why don't you get one of the larger branches and carve some wooden false teeth out of it?" He left the room.

"Mom, is Daddy all right?"
"Of course, dear. It's just that wooden false teeth are cheaper."
"Oh."

The court had hearings on 35 juvenile petitions which concerned persons 17 years of age or under accused of violating state laws, or city ordinances. None of these cases involved felonies. Heart Sunday to Be Feb. 25

Heart Fund Sunday is Feb. 25.

Last year Virginia Beach contributed $12,340.84 on Heart Sunday alone. This year 1,500 volunteers will march at Virginia Beach.

According to A. G. Alexander, chairman of the 1968 Heart Fund Campaign in Virginia Beach, diseases of the heart and blood vessels were responsible for 54 percent of all deaths nationally.

"Nationally," said Alexander, "the overall economic cost of heart disease has been placed at $4 billion yearly, or about $21 per person."

The Heart Fund Campaign will reach its high point during the 10 day period beginning today when local Heart Sunday volunteers will join 1,750,000 others throughout the nation to visit their neighbors, distrib-ing literature on how to reduce every family's risk of heart attack, and also to receive Heart Fund contributions.

Area chairmen for Heart Sunday are: Mrs. J. Richard Gormly, Mrs. Glenn Dill, Mrs. Mabel Owen, Mrs. B. F. Steketee, Mrs. C. W. Beard Jr., Mrs. E. C. Miller, Mrs. William H. Gaylord Sr., Mrs. H. J. Tietjen, Mrs. Michael Hillegass, Mrs. G. P. Domme and Mrs. W. A. Oliver.

How to Entertain Pre-Schoolers

Winter brings long play-in-side days for pre-school youngsters, who alternately envy older brothers and sisters going off to school and pester mother with "what is there to do?" questions.

It is at these times that pre-schoolers are seeking adult guidance for their world of play. According to Playskool Research, it is at these times, too, that mother can offer the guidance-by-indirection to point the way for her little playmate to use his own imagination, intelligence, and skills in finding answers.

With just a minimum of suggestion, the pre-schooler finds new uses for his playtoys and gains an amazing knowledge of the world around him.

If he has a ride-inside wheel toy, mother can build a path for him in the family room, play room, or hallway. Traffic signs--or mother as traffic policeman--can help the youngster learn the safety rules so necessary when he starts to school.

The pre-schooler might plan a trip to the drop-box postal station or make a call from the pay-and-play telephone (bungee on a doorknob to serve as an out-of-doors phone booth). As long as he still wants mother's attention and play participation, she has an excellent opportunity to talk about the roles of the mailman, of the telephone operator, and of the policeman in the world of her pre-schooler.

The youngster who likes to play with puzzle plaques and who demands mother's time can learn to identify colors, fruits, animals, even the United States and continents. With mother's encouragement, the pre-schooler will use his imagination to "make up stories" about the "birds I see," the balloon man, the flea circus, or other of his favorite puzzle subjects, at the same time that he is developing manual dexterity and gaining a sense of achievement in problem solving.

"Going to school at home" gives the pre-schooler his conversation piece at the dinner table along with older children. With a play desk--complete with blackboard and magnetic spelling board--mother can hold "classes" in numbers, drawing, and writing. The pre-schooler's "school" can be complete, even to milk and cookies at recess.

Celery Vases

Glass celery vases of one design or another were popular wedding gifts in the 19th century. Today some of the rarer vases are worth several hundred dollars. It's obvious, from the size of these vases that celery plants a hundred years ago weren't nearly as de luxe as those being grown today during cooler months in the black soil of Florida.

Coffee-Chocolate Souffle is the perfect dessert to serve with coffee.

Souffle Is Easy with Directions

Would you believe that this heavenly Mocha Souffle is a down-to-earth dessert? Well, it is. The ingredients--rich full-flavored coffee, chocolate, milk, eggs, and such--are basics in the cupboard. And with these explicit instructions you're assured of success--provided you follow every word.

For example, "fold" means a gentle cutting motion from top to bottom of bowl, and "spoon" means just that, not pour. You'll turn out a superb souffle, deserving of fragrant, freshly-brewed coffee.

MOCHA SOUFFLE

1/2 c. strong coffee
2 squares (1 oz. each) unsweetened chocolate
1/2 c. milk
1/3 c. flour
1/4 teas. salt
4 eggs, separated
1/3 c. sugar
1 teas. vanilla
1/4 teas. almond extract
Butter 1 1/2 qt. souffle dish liberally. Coat bottom and sides with a little granulated sugar.
Heat coffee and chocolate in double boiler until chocolate is melted. Stir until smooth. Stir milk into flour and salt; stir into chocolate mixture. Cook, stirring, until very thick. Remove from heat; beat until smooth. Add egg yolks, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Cover; let stand. Beat egg whites until soft peaks form; add 1/3 c. sugar gradually, continue beating until stiff. Fold in chocolate mixture and flavorings. Spoon into prepared souffle dish. Bake uncovered at 425 degrees for 22 minutes. Serve at once with plain or whipped cream, if desired.

The National Association sponsors free beauty service to 7,000 women in homes and institutions throughout the United States all year long, and this week the local affiliate has added free service for the Norfolk Municipal Hospital and several girls' clubs.

Norfolk hairdressers will climax the week with a dinner-dance and show, the proceeds from which will go to Camp Civilian, a camp for mentally retarded and physically handicapped Tidewater children.

Mrs. Jernigan, Mrs. DuVal and Mrs. Aldridge hold the heart before it was stuffed.

Huge Heart to Dominate Fashion Show Decorations

Can you imagine stitching white fringe on a huge red heart more than six feet in diameter?

Mrs. C. W. Jernigan did. She and Mrs. P. C. Hartman are in charge of decorations for the third annual Heart Fund Fashion Show, sponsored for the second time by the Princess Anne Womens Club. It will be held at 8 p.m. Feb. 23 at the Civic Center.

The heart, which will be stuffed with shredded foam, will hang from the ceiling. More than 3,000 feet of red and white crepe paper streamers will stretch from it, Mrs. Jernigan said.

"Right now I'm making 100 candle holders out of two by fours," she said. Then noting the surprised looks of Mrs. Earl DuVal, co-chairman of publicity, and Mrs. George L. Aldridge, general chairman, she added "I make all sorts of things in my garage."

The candle holders will be painted red and white and placed on the tables, which will be covered with red and white table cloths.

Jean Lanning of Willis Wayside is in charge of decorating the stage.

Husbands of club members will serve as ushers for the event, while some of the club members will be waitresses in short red costumes decorated with a large heart in front.

Fashions this year will be from the Florence Wilson Shoppe and Topper's Mens Wear. Mildred Sullivan from the New York Couture Group will also bring fashions. Some of the models will be professional and some will be local personalities. Mildred Alexander of WTAR Radio and TV will be fashion co-ordinator.

Entertainment will be provided by 55 members of the Norfolk Chapter Commodore Chorus for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, Inc.

Proceeds from the show will go to the Tidewater Heart Association. Last year $1,214.42 was turned in by the show, including a $100 donation from the Princess Anne Womens Club.

Tickets are now on sale at the Florence Wilson Shoppe on Laskin Road, the Civic Center, Alexander-Beegle Shop on Laskin Road, the Tidewater Heart Association on Boush Street in Norfolk and from club members. For further information, contact Mrs. B. W. Wroten.

Mrs. William Slovic tries on a hat as Mrs. D.G. Primeau and Mrs. Robert Owens admire it at the Spring Hat Show and Sale which the Star of the Sea Womens Council had Tuesday, with lunch, at the Capes Beach and Cabana Club. Hats were from My Hat Shop in Portsmouth. Several hundred women attended the event.

Mrs. Dinsmore, one of the first women vestrymen at the church, serves tea.

Reception Honors Rev. and Mrs. Jordan

The twice-postponed reception for the Rev. and Mrs. John H. Jordan at Gallilee Episcopal Church was held last Thursday night. Rev. Jordan is the new rector of the church.

In the receiving line with the Jordans were L.B. Wales Jr., senior warden, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Cruser Jr., junior warden and his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hubbard, immediate past senior warden.

Serving spiced tea and coffee were the two women vestrymen in the church, Mrs. Landon Hiffard and Mrs. John Dinsmore. By the end of the reception, Mrs. Dinsmore, who was pouring tea was drinking water, and Mrs. Hiffard, serving coffee, was drinking the tea.

Among the guests was George Brooke, the oldest member of the church. Ministers of several churches in Virginia Beach also attended.

After the opening of "The Late Christopher Bean" at the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach, Mrs. Maxine Ballentine, Mrs. Terri Jones, Mrs. Anne Henry and Mrs. Penny Martin enjoy a little socializing and recapping of the play.

Activity Center Is Center of Activity

The ladies arrived in the morning with bushel baskets, boxes and even a metal grocery cart.

The same scene is repeated several times a week, day and night. Ceramics enthusiasts travel to classes offered by the Virginia Beach Recreation Department at the Recreation Center located on the old NIKE missile site on Salem Road near Kempsville. One woman drives in from Knotts Island.

There are presently six ceramics classes going on each week at the center--each with 20 or more students. Mrs. Ethel Nichols is the instructor. But beginning in March, due to the demands of the ceramics fans, there will be ceramics workshops five days a week.

On Monday and Thursday the workshop hours will be 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Hours on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday will be 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will also be evening hours scheduled. There is a registration fee of $3 per person for six weeks to cover expenses.

"We don't try to make any money on these classes," commented Jack Dowdy, recreation supervisor. "We buy and sell all the greenware (basic pottery) and materials at wholesale prices."

"These classes really got off the ground in September," he said. There were three kilns for firing the ceramic pieces then. Two more were added in December. "We started out to have three classes in January and finished with six."

"We have the biggest bunch of eager beavers in town," said Mrs. Nichols with a smile. "After the first hour you feel like you've worked eight." Classes now meet for two hours once a week.

Mrs. Nichols said most of the students were beginners in September, and most have continued their weekly visits to the center. The first ceramics classes began last March when the first kiln was installed.

The largest room in the center is full of work tables. In one of the smaller rooms are shelves full of greenware (1,000 different items) from which the students may choose, and the third room houses the kilns.

First a student selects a piece of greenware, included in the many pieces are ash trays, figurines, lamp bases, vases, bowls, tea sets, lavabos, chess sets, plaques and fruit. The piece selected is cleaned and rough edges smoothed.

Then it is fired for the first time. The result is called bisque ware. This is then glazed (shiny finish) or stained (dull finish). It is fired again. "Usually that's all you want to fire it," said Dowdy. The result is a finished product.

Firing time (anywhere from three to eight hours) depends on the number and size of the pieces placed in the kilns. Mrs. Nichols said. Temperatures in the kilns may reach 1,850 degrees.

While ladies in the larger side of the building were busy with ceramics, students from a cake decorating class across the hall, taught by Mrs. Sue Lewis, came in and out to admire the pieces and get coffee from the community pot.

An air of busy activity prevailed throughout the center.

Mrs. Helen Harper busily applies glaze in the work room.

Mrs. W.O. Stakes puts the finishing touches on a cornucopia in a cake decorating class.

Puppies, Puppies Everywhere...

I got home the other night to find the kitchen table sitting in the living room for supper.

In the middle of the kitchen floor was our cocker-poo with one puppy. She couldn't have picked a better time of day. Gypsy didn't think much of the box we had prepared for her.

Anyhow, she had a total of five--all black except one dark brown one.

The next morning--after the six-year-old got up at 2 a.m. to see the puppies--the five-year-old came into the kitchen looking for egg shells. I don't think I ever did really convince her that chickens lay eggs, not dogs.

Naturally, the next day my husband was too sick to go to work, so he stayed home to "puppy-sit." He worried more about Gypsy than he ever did about me.

That was the day of the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach meeting. While I was there, someone who read my earlier column about Gypsy asked if the puppies had been born yet. I told her they had been the night before. She asked if she could have one, and of course, I said yes.

Standing right beside her was another woman, who after inquiring about the breed (breeds?) asked if she could have one. Again I said yes. It was a very interesting day to say the least.

Now the only problem is that the brats have already decided we can't give the puppies away. Just what we need--seven dogs. I think my husband will be just as bad.

P.A. Art Club to Leave Lasting Impression Seaboard To Build New Branch

Art Club members at Princess Anne High School have undertaken a project that may make their school one of the most unusual -- and attractive -- anywhere.

The club, with some 25 members, has initiated the program of awarding the top senior art student each year with $25, in exchange for which that student donates some of his work to the club's now-embryonic art collection, based in Princess Anne's library.

Teachers will be permitted to "check-out" the art to decorate their classrooms.

Mrs. Lou Lowenthal, art instructor at the high school, said that it may take "five, even ten years, to build up a large enough variety to give everyone what they want or need." But a beginning has been made.

The first student to receive the award was senior Mike Jones, who has donated a cross-section of his work to the school, ranging from pen-and-ink sketches to oils, from representational to purely expressionistic art. Jones' work went on display at the school last fall.

Art Club members are now working on a library display to include both art and student-written poetry. "The point of the display," said Mrs. Lowenthal, "will be to make the students stop and think about what they're looking at, not just glance at it and say 'Oh, how pretty.'"

The art classes have been involved lately in turning out book illustrations, using books on the high school's reading lists for subjects. The illustrations will be available to teachers to use in their English classes as visual aids.

The Art Club's collection, begun this year, already includes 50 works.

F & M Bank Extends Credit Plan

First & Merchants National Bank, soon to issue an all-purpose BankAmericard, is extending the service to its correspondent banks throughout Virginia.

Robert L. Gordon Jr., president and chief executive officer, announced that agent banks are now being offered the credit card program under the name of "Virginia BankAmericard" for cities outside of First & Merchants' office locations. First & Merchants is one of 18 banks in the U.S. now licensed by BankAmerica Service Corporation to provide the BankAmericard plan.

Charles R. Talley, vice president and BankAmericard project administrator, explained that through such licensee banks, there are now over 200 agent banks in the program in this country. He explained that there are now six million card holders and some one hundred and 55 thousand places of business honoring the card in the U.S. It is interchangeable with the Barclaycard in Great Britain which has an additional 1,200,000 card holders.

As part of the BankAmericard program, First & Merchants will be extending to banks throughout Virginia the right to offer the BankAmericard in their communities. This system of agent banks, according to Talley, will make BankAmericard available to every qualified individual and merchant in the state.

K. of C. To Have Open House

The Father Nicholas J. Habets Council #4632 of the Knights of Columbus will hold an open house for prospective members and their wives on Saturday, Feb. 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the Council Home at 235 First Colonial Road in Oceanview.

The fraternal group is open to Catholic men 18 years of age or older. The evening's program will include guest speakers and a color film followed by discussion and refreshments.

Bond Sales Fail To Reach Goal

Sales of United States Savings Bonds went up 5 per cent in Virginia for 1967, even though the total sales reached only 92.49 per cent of the goal set for the state.

Virginia Beach residents bought a total of $473,866 in bonds, 93 per cent of their goal. Chairman for the city is E.V. Slattum.

Princess Anne High School art students Mike Carroll, Yvonne Whitehurst and Linda Harris put up book illustrations done by the art department students as visual aids for the high schools English classes.

Summer Program Set At VPI for Farmers To Feature Drive-In To Feature Two Shows

To help farmers and their cooperative purchasing, marketing, credit, and service organizations understand and face 1968-69 farm business developments and changes, an outstanding program is in the making for the 40th annual summer session of the American Institute of Cooperation, Aug. 4-7, at Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, Va.

In announcing the Virginia dates and first meeting of the National Program Committee Jan. 8 at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles, Calif., J.K. Stern, Institute President, emphasized the unprecedented changes that are overtaking farmers and their organizations.

"Compacency and lack of knowledge of what is happening can be disastrous," Stern said. "It is vital that all farmers and their cooperative management, as well as farm youth and young farm families seeking a paying career in farming, keep informed about latest developments in contract farming, mergers, integration, and the new services that farmer cooperatives can provide in this period of increasing competition. The Virginia program will provide this opportunity."

"Virginia's Governor, Mills E. Godwin Jr., Dr. T. Marshall Hahn Jr., president of Virginia Tech, and the Virginia Council of Farmer Cooperatives have pledged their full cooperation and unique Virginia hospitality to the 2,000 farm business leaders and 1,000 young farmers and rural youth expected to participate."

"A separate, timely program is being prepared for the young people which will add to their understanding of basic economics, as they learn more about the American competitive enterprise system and the role of cooperatives in the agribusiness complex."

"Twenty nationally prominent farm business and educational leaders are members of the A.I.C. National Program Committee and three Virginia Tech faculty members are in charge of local arrangements--Dr. P.H. Massey, associate director for agriculture and life sciences; Dr. T.J. Horne, associate dean for instruction, College of Agriculture; and Dr. W.E. Lavery, director for administration and training, Extension Division.

"Requests for housing accommodations should be sent to: J.R. Nichols, Chairman, Housing Committee, A.I.C., VPI, Blacksburg, Va. 24061."

GI's Eligible For VA Aid In Pre-College

Ex-service men who need additional hours of high school education to qualify for college preparatory courses are now eligible for Veterans' Administration aid in continuing their education.

Maurice J. Hunger visits the Alan B. Shepard Convention Center, 19th Street and Pacific Avenue, the second and fourth Thursdays of each month, 12:30 p.m. to 4 p.m., to advise veterans on their eligibility for VA assistance.

Eligibility for the GI bill requires at least 181 days of military service, with part of it dating after Jan. 31, 1955. One month of VA educational assistance is authorized for each month of military service, up to 36 months.

Single veterans can receive $130 a month while attending either full-time high school or preparatory school level courses. Veterans with one dependent receive $155; those with two dependents, $175 and $10 more per month for each additional child.

McAlister Wins

William H. McAlister of Curtis Drive, Johnson Wax building maintenance products sales representative from Virginia Beach, has been named winner in the company's Service Products Division "Top Ten" sales competition for 1967. McAlister also had been a "Top Ten" winner in 1966.

Seaboard To Build New Branch

Seaboard Citizens National Bank has received an approval from the Deputy Comptroller of the Currency, Thomas G. DeShazo, to open a branch near the intersection of Indian River Rd. and Military Highway at Virginia Beach.

The new office, scheduled to open in mid-year, will be located on the parking apron of the Century Park Shopping Center, south of the Military Highway main entrance.

The exterior of the building will be of a paneled construction alternating a grey tint glass and off white masonry with a charcoal top band of pre-cast aggregate panels. It will feature two drive-up teller windows. Interior plans allow full-service banking including night depositary, complete business and personal checking and savings programs, safe deposit boxes, and complete business and personal loan facilities.

The shopping center's first phase will approximate 112,000 square feet of retail selling space on land area of over 1,500,000 square feet. When complete, it will contain the bank, drug store, full-size food store and the largest Miller's Discount Center in the area (Miller's is already completed). The second phase, scheduled to begin in about three years will add another 50,000 square feet of retail store space and the third phase is expected to include a closed mall and movie theatre. Parking facilities for approximately 2,150 cars is available to customers of the shopping center.

Nursing Home Gets Assistant

A new assistant administrator has been appointed to the Liberty House Nursing Home of Virginia Beach at 340 Lynn Shore Drive.

R.S. Buck comes to Liberty House as assistant administrator from Suffolk, Va. The appointment was announced by Homer W. Cunningham, president of the organization. For the past 17 years Buck has owned and operated the Buck Office and Equipment Company in Suffolk. He plans to make his home in Virginia Beach.

The nearest twin-screen theater to Tidewater, said Price, is at New Orleans.

Workers for the city's department of landscaping for streets, highways and bridges put straw around the Japanese holly they planted last week on Laskin Road. The shrubbery is a small part of the department's three-year beautification program.

Winter Fails to Stop Planting

If you've taken your eyes off the road long enough to look out your side windows lately, you may have noticed the new shrubbery and landscaping along five of Virginia Beach's main thoroughfares.

According to Richard Humphries, superintendent of landscaping for highways, streets and bridges, the planting and landscaping is part of a three-year beautification program for the city's streets, now in its second year.

The shrubbery-planting began in mid-October, said Humphries, and is being done along Independence, General Booth and Virginia Beach boulevards, Shore Drive and Laskin Rd.

Japanese holly, American holly, live oaks, camellias, nandina, Japanese black pine and crepe myrtles are among the plants going up along the streets.

Most of the shrubbery is bought from Virginia Beach nurseries on bid, by the city, Humphries said. But many of the local garden clubs are contributing plants to the project.

Future plans for the city's landscaping crews include the approaches to the new Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway and 'new roads and highways, as they are built," said Humphries.

Albano Named Vice Pres. To Serve Area

James A. Albano Jr., has been named vice-president in charge of operations for Albano Cleaners, Inc. The announcement was made by James A. Albano Sr., chairman of the board and president of the dry-cleaning firm.

Albano has been with the organization since 1961 as operations manager. He attended Belmont Abbey College and completed both the general and management courses of the National Institute of Dry-Cleaners.

He is president of the Norfolk-Virginia Beach Drycleaning Association, and lives in Norfolk with his wife, the former Dorothy Lee Catling, and their two children.

National Airlines inaugurated Norfolk's first Boeing 727 "stretch" jet service on Tuesday.

The 135-passenger tri-jet is the largest passenger aircraft ever to provide regularly scheduled service for the Tidewater Area, according to Bert Wright, district sales manager.

Wright also announced that National will expand Norfolk service on Feb. 26 by substituting regular 727s for prop-jet Electras on two flights. One trip will serve Newport News, Richmond, Washington and New York, with the second going to Washington, Baltimore and Kennedy Airport.

Will Commissaries Survive? Parts Are Back in Hair

Last week saw an informal and unofficial convale of National officers for the Navy Wives Clubs of America at Virginia Beach.

Mrs. Pat Counts, a Virginia Beacher and national vice president of NWCA, entertained Mrs. Hah Glass, the national president, at her Honey Grove Road home Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Counts and Mrs. Glass have recently returned from the Feb. 3 Navy-Marine Corps Council meeting at Washington, D.C., during which there was a briefing by the Secretary of the Navy Paul Ignatius.

The Council meetings included briefings on the significance of maritime power, particularly in Vietnam, and a run-down on the Hubbell Report, which could well do away with Navy commissary stores and exchanges.

As reported in the Navy Times, the Hubbell Report would attempt to put everything now considered fringe-benefits on a salary basis, in the hopes that the accompanying pay raises would make military pay more nearly comparable to civilian pay.

The chief argument to this, cited in the Times, is that there is no way to equate civilian and military pay, because of the inherent risks in military work.

Mrs. Glass, and other navy wives, at a coffee klatch at Mrs. Counts' home Friday, said that their reaction to the loss of commissaries and exchange privileges would depend on the exact pay raises voted by congress.

The Report, in the form of a bill to be presented to Congress, could go into effect as early as

July of this year. It is more likely, according to authorities quoted in the Times article, that the bill will not be voted on until 1969.

Mrs. Glass, who visited Tidewater on her way back to California, where her husband, a flight engineer Chief Petty Officer, is stationed at Moffitt Field, was elected to her national office in October, 1967.

The mother of three children (she is no new-comer to national responsibility, having been national NWCA secretary and southwestern regional vice president before assuming her presidential duties last fall.

Each NWCA president chooses a theme for her one year's tenure of office, and Mrs. Glass's theme is "unity." Her visit to Tidewater was in keeping with (cutwork); Mrs. Connell Garrett (serving); Mrs. E.E.

Husbands to Be Entertained

The Cape Henry Women's Club welcomed two new members at a luncheon meeting held Feb. 8 at the Ocean Health Restaurant.

President Mrs. C.E. Upton, Jr., and Mrs. Earl W. Leaward were elected delegates and Mrs. James L. Craig, Jr., and Mrs. R.L. Counselman alternates to represent the club at the Tidewater District meeting in March at the Chamberlin Hotel.

The program was under the direction of the Fine Arts Department and members exhibited their handwork in an arts and crafts contest. Blue ribbon winners were Mrs. T.H. Fall-Sevastia Nicholsonsoa (Jewelry craft); Mrs. R.L. Counselman (knit suit); and Mrs. Philip Russo who won two blue ribbons for a knit evening dress and a

The "shape" is back. Clothes have it... and hairdos have it. The swing is to costumes that reveal rather than conceal a girlish curve or two... and the hairdos are cut and styled to show off as shapely a head as ever nodded on a swanlike neck.

Hair fashion forecasters for 1968 also herald the return of the part. Missing from the beauty scene for much too long a time, partings are back in many guises... all of them a far, far cry from the uncompromising slash of yesterday. Today's parts are, as hairstylist Gene Shacove puts it, "seen and not seen." They are unobtrusive. The line is there, but the hair will probably be brushed lightly over it. There are misted parts, partial parts and diagonal parts. Every now-you-see-it, now-you-don't parts.

Sneaking back in the way it is, the style with a part brings an attendant hazard. Hair color must be perfect, or parting can literally be "such sweet sorrow." No more camouflaging those dark roots by brushing up and over!

Regular color refreshings, of course, will be a must. However, according to The Clairol Institute of Haircoloring, the trend for 1968 is to keep haircoloring to the natural shade. More women are modifying their hair color than ever before, but the idea is to accent the hue... not to change it. With the shift in shades so subtle, a proper--and oh-so-fashionable--parting need no longer be a problem.

For any style, hair must be sleek and shining and skillfully shaped. Hairstylists Hugh Harrison and Gene Shacove, who call some of the most beautiful heads in the country, give us some thoughts on the new styles and caring for them.

Gene Shacove is a Hollywood hairstylist who goes on all his vacations with a pair of scissors in his pocket! Wherever he goes, he's sure to catch up with some of his glamorous clientele and--even on holiday--he'll tend to their unruly locks.

Shacove can do a cut that will last from 6 to 8 weeks. This is a boon to the busy woman and a blessing to the one going on a trip. Knowing that hair has a tendency to grow faster from different sections of the scalp, the stylist studies his clients, learns the pattern and then compensates in the over-growing areas. If back of hair grows faster, only neckline and back are trimmed; if it grows faster at the crown, hair at nape is left longer.

Shacove's styles are for the most active of women. He believes that hair must have lustre and provide a fitting frame for the face. He likes enough hair left at the crown so a man can run his fingers through it. (Three loud cheers here from the men in your life!) A four-inch from the top allouette would be a good visual measure.

Many of the Jet Set's most

The "shape" is back in hairdos and the head is revealed as tiny and curly. The young sports-minded Miss likes short, manageable hairstyles that shampoo, set and dry easily, like the one created by hairstylist Hugh Harrison.

glamorous members won't stir a step without consulting Hugh Harrison. His inspired stylings can make the difference between a belle-of-the-ball and an also-ran. Hair, says Harrison, must be clean, shining and worn close to the head.

The new hairdos will feature tops that are smooth, with sides that curl. The feeling will be reminiscent of the 30's, but the effect will be modern American today. Long hair, too, will have that 30's feeling, with the classic pull-backs. For evening, Harrison advocates styles that are more classic... more Grecian. Braids will be back on the evening scene, but the treatment will be different. Hairpieces will be redressed into braids... and pin-ons will be the big thing.

With all the delectable doings in the new hairstyles, the big news is still the return of the shape of the head. With more attention, then, on the condition of the hair itself, both Gene Shacove and Hugh Harrison stress the importance of clean, shining, bouncy hair. It has to be brushed and cleaned... and regularly conditioned.

Little Creek

Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base was the scene for multiple goings-on this week, beginning with a reception for Mrs. Hah Glass, national president of the Navy Wives' Clubs of America, Friday night in building 3007. The reception was hosted by the NWCA Davis-Elis club.

Yesterday, Little Creek Officers' wives held a luncheon at the base Officers' Club, and the Wives' club has a champagne brunch-fashion show on tap for March 6 at Rockwell Hall.

Monday is the date for change of command ceremonies at Little Creek. Capt. Alden Whitney, commanding officer of Amphibious Squadron 6, will be relieved by Capt. Raymond G. Hartman.

And Oceana

Yesterday was also the time for the Independence Officers' wives' coffee and fashion show at the Naval Air Station Officers' Club. Commentator for the show was Mrs. Kenneth L. Shugart, president of the All-Wives Club.

Independence wives modeled the fashions from Burke's, and the shoes and accessories from Hoffheimer's. Wives from all the area commands were invited to the fashion parade.

Today VA-42 and VRS-31 squadron wives hosted a luncheon and fashion show at the Officers' club, with other A-6 pilots' wives as their guests.

Fashions on display were provided by the Fabric Tree. VA-42 hostesses were Mrs. Jack Callan and Mrs. Joe Frick.

On Wednesday, Feb. 21, Cdr. L. Wayne Smith will relieve Cdr. Richard C. Boyd as commander of Oceana's Carrier Air Wing 6.

Since the biggest chunk of your food budget usually goes for meat, it pays to get the most for your money. Right now, fresh ham will give you budget a break. Stores are offering whole or half hams at 49¢ a pound. And half a fresh ham is better than none. They weigh about 5-7 lbs. and should amply serve a large family, with some left over for sandwiches and enough to be used in hash, chow mein or a lima bean casserole.

But first, we have to roast it. There are more ways to roast fresh ham than a porker has legs, and it's the basting that makes the difference. First, sprinkle with salt and pepper and put, fat side up, on a rack in an open, shallow roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer inside biggest part of meat so it doesn't touch the bone. Roast in pre-heated oven (325°F) until thermometer registers 185°F. This is about 40 minutes per pound.

For basting, some people prefer dry white wine, fruit juice, pan drippings, or a sauce of ketchup, vinegar, mustard and Worcestershire sauce. But I insist on cider. You can't imagine how cider enhances the flavor of fresh pork, and what a nice finish it gives to the ham. The outside will turn black all over. You'll need about 3 cups of cider.

A 6 lb. ham plus the cider should cost about $8.15. The cost of electricity to cook it, just 6¢. Quite a bargain, electricity. Think about that when you're cooking.

Inlet Is Named; Details Given, Progress Noted

The Rudee Inlet marina—a project begun almost eight years ago and now only months away from reality—finally has a name it can call its own: Virginia Capes Marina.

Among some 350 suggested names submitted in the Rudee Inlet Authority's naming contest, the winning name came from William M. Reed of Bird-neck Point.

For his trouble and his ingenuity, Reed was awarded a $100 U. S. Savings Bond by the Authority. The announcement of the proposed Marina's name and the presentation of the award to Reed, took place at Tuesday's meeting of the Inlet Authority at the city Municipal Court building at Princess Anne.

Following the presentation, L. Dean Curtis, city industrial development director and supervisor of the inlet project, made a progress report of the work done at Rudee.

The stone-work jetties at the inlet have been completed this week, with the jetties and for-ward expected to be installed "within three or four days," according to Curtis. The north jetty has settled more than was expected, but Curtis anticipates no problems.

Curtis and George C. Langley, of Langley, McDonald and Overman, consulting engineers for the project, clarified some points concerning the marina site, Curtis explained that the site, when it opens late this spring, will be a temporary establishment to handle this summer's traffic; that it will not be at all indicative of the finished marina.

With May 1 as a target date for the completion of 10 to 13 inexpensively-constructed slips to accommodate a few charter boats, Langley hopes that the completed marina can eventually berth "about 400 or 500 boats."

In a three-hour meeting Monday, he said he negotiated with the Charter Boat Association, and it has been established that during the summer of 1968, commercial boats allowed to embark or disembark passengers at the temporary marina site must be members of, or approved by, the Association.

Curtis pointed out that, considering the temporary facilities at the inlet, private boats will only be allowed to make temporary anchorage there. The construction of the jetties which lead to Rudee Inlet began in August, 1967, after more than seven years of planning and setbacks. At that time, the George T. McLean Co. and W. F. Magann Corp., joint contractors in the venture, began building a beach road between the Lighthouse Restaurant and the Steel-Fishing Pier on greater Virginia Beach's oceanfront near the southern end of the boardwalk. Their contract was for $608,000.

The road was completed in order to begin footing work on the north jetty, which extends 88 feet seaward and is capped with stones weighing seven to 10 tons. A small pier was built south of the inlet to serve as a platform for apple-driving crane, which built a timber-

Hatchett Fills Mail Bags

Virginia Beach City Manager W. Russell Hatchett has been busy writing letters to members of the Virginia Beach delegation to the Virginia General Assembly on one matter and to all Virginia Congressmen and Senators on another.

Still other letters are expected to be forthcoming to federal officials on a third matter, already approved by City Council.

In his letter to the Assemblymen, Hatchett explained that he and many others charged with preparation of a municipal budget had many unanswered questions concerning the formula used in allocating school funds to localities.

He added that the formula "attempts to require and determine local effort based entirely on real estate taxes."

"The inequity of such an approval is most glaring," said Hatchett in the letter.

Hatchett went on to say that the present formula has been completely understood by all officials with whom he has come in contact.

He then suggested a resolution to be passed by both houses of the legislature asking discontinuance of the formula and determining exactly what the State will do as its share toward the cost of education on a per pupil basis. He said then no questions will arise concerning fairness.

Because Hatchett said he realized some localities could not meet their local financial obligations in this matter, he suggested a contingency fund to make outright grants where absolutely necessary, to be paid with state funds.

The letter to the U.S. Senators and Virginia Congressmen concerned the proposed cut in federal impact funds for localities. Hatchett said he wished to express his concern on this matter of cutting the funds by 20%, particularly since Virginia Beach gets such a large share of the funds for the purpose of educating federally-connected children.

ed the State of Virginia would not appeal a case to the Supreme Court of the United States that would give all impact funds to localities which were supposed to receive them. The State had been withholding half of the funds, and had been distributing them statewide, until forced to stop by a three-judge federal court recently.

Sen. Byrd to Speak Here

U.S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Jr. will be the guest speaker at the banquet Feb. 29, in honor of Virginia Beach's "First Citizen."

The annual banquet will be held at the Black Angus Restaurant on Pacific Avenue, beginning at 7 p.m. Reservations for the dinner may be made by calling 428-7700.

Last week the Virginia Beach Jaycees, sponsors of the "First Citizen Award," announced the selection of Mrs. Lucille Clark as the 1967 winner. Mrs. Clark has long been a civic leader in Virginia Beach.

She is only the third woman to receive the Jaycees' high award in the 18 years it has been given, according to Robert Hatchett's third letter, to federal officials, will be in the form of re-application for federal funds for the Little Island recreational area at Sandbridge, turned down by the government recently. Council has approved the re-application and has permitted Hatchett to try again for the funds.

L. Warren, chairman of the First Citizen committee of the chapter.

VBEA to Honor Cox

The Virginia Beach Education Association will hold a testimonial dinner in honor of retiring school superintendent Frank W. Cox at the Cavalier Hotel on Feb. 25. Cox retires on March 1 after more than three decades of service in his present position. Mrs. Frances Sachon, president of the VBEA, said that the main dining room of the hotel will be used for the event, but because of the large crowd expected, additional rooms in the hotel will also be used. They will be connected by closed circuit television.

Incoming Supt. E.E. Brickell will act as master of ceremonies and will also speak. Friends of Cox and educators from across Virginia are expected to attend in honor of the retirement.

Cox is recognized as one of the most outstanding educators in the country and has on several occasions been cited for the job he has done during the last-growing years of the Princess Anne and Virginia Beach school systems.

In 1965 Cox was also named "First Citizen" by the Virginia Beach Jaycees.

10th Scout-O-Rama Is Success

The 10th annual Scout-O-Rama, held last Saturday at the Virginia Beach Civic Center has been termed a "tremendous success". Spectators jammed the Dome all afternoon to visit the booths which covered most of the floor.

Scout Troops, Cub Packs and Explorer Posts displayed their work and their talents in nearly 40 booths. The Girl Scouts also had one booth.

Handicraft, puppets, space age exhibits, as well as general scouting exhibits were displayed by the various units, both inside and outside the main auditorium from noon to 7 p.m.

Capt. S.L. Collins, U.S. Navy Amphibious Division, Little Creek, delivered the welcoming address.

At the close of the day awards were presented to top scouts and scouting units.

The Scout-O-Rama is a function of the activities committee of the PAVAB District. The district is made up of units from all sections of Virginia Beach. Chuck Steh was the Scout-O-Rama director.

Mrs. Simiele Picked To Man New Office

Thomas N. Downing, First District Congressman, has appointed Mrs. Barbara R. Simiele as his assistant to man his new office in Virginia Beach.

Mrs. Simiele will assume her duties about March 1, when Downing's office in the old Municipal Court building at Princess Anne opened. She is a member of the Board of Deacons of the Pembroke Manor United Church, a member of the Board of Trustees of St. Mary's Infant Home in Norfolk, a member of the Women's Democratic Club of Virginia Beach, and secretary of the Virginia Beach Chapter of the March of Dimes.

Mrs. Simiele said she hopes to get it decorated as soon as possible, but admits she has to start from the very beginning with new drapes, furniture, rugs and pictures.

"One room will be my office," she said. "The other will be a private conference room and office for Mr. Downing when he is in Virginia Beach."

She is going to Washington, probably next week, for a week of crash indoctrination in Downing's office and will work closely with his administrative assistant, Tiny Hutten.

"I'm really excited about this," said Mrs. Simiele. "I think it is a great opportunity to help others, and it could be wonderful experience for me."

She will be available five days a week from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., (except for her lunch hour, she says) to help anyone who comes in get in touch with Downing on any matter they feel is important. She will be in constant touch with Washington to relay the problems, but if the problems are serious enough she will make an appointment for the next time Downing comes to Virginia Beach on a regular visit.

Ideally Downing will have several people to talk with each time he comes.

"This way, I'll probably get to Virginia Beach more often," said Downing. "And I hope the people of the city will take advantage of the new office."

He added that he feels he will be able to serve the people of Virginia Beach much better through proper use of this new office.

Mrs. Simiele is no newcomer to responsibility. The wife of Robert Simiele, she is a member of the Board of Deacons of the Pembroke Manor United Church, a member of the Board of Trustees of St. Mary's Infant Home in Norfolk, a member of the Women's Democratic Club of Virginia Beach, and secretary of the Virginia Beach Chapter of the March of Dimes.

Mrs. Simiele

In addition she has also been president of the Virginia Beach Elks' Auxiliary, president of St. Mary's Auxiliary, and 1st vice-president of the Princess Anne Woman's Club.

In the past she has also been a secretary to Capt. James Mayo of the Norfolk Police Department and to Traffic Court Judge Vernon Hittings.

Here is a full-time paid staff position, and Mrs. Simiele summed it up by saying, "This is not a campaign office in any way. It is a place where people can come to make an appointment with Congressman Downing. It is a real service and an honor for Virginia Beach."

Difference Explained By Caton on Wording

State Sen. Edward T. Caton, III of Virginia Beach says City Council can pass a resolution on any subject it likes, and that the difference in the "fair housing" matter in Virginia Beach and in Arlington was that Arlington was concerned with an ordinance, not a resolution.

The matter was disclosed about two weeks ago when Caton, in response to a letter from a "fair housing" official, declined to seek an opinion from the Attorney General of Virginia concerning the validity of Council's passing a resolution on the subject.

At that time Caton said he did not want to take the intelligence of the attorney general, since Council can pass any resolution it wants.

Meanwhile an Arlington legislator did ask for an opinion from the Attorney General, and was told that municipal legislative bodies could not pass such an ordinance legally, and that it was up to statewide legislation. That legislation was introduced in the Virginia General Assembly but was given little chance of passing.

Meanwhile sources in Virginia Beach said that even if a resolution were passed by City Council, it would not be binding in the matter of "fair housing," since Council had no means of enforcing the resolution legally.

No Kindergartens School Board Says

Virginia Beach will not have public school kindergartens in 1968 and probably not in 1969, J.W. Buffington, chairman, said at Tuesday's School Board meeting.

This was in answer to a list of "suggestions" put forward in a report of the League of Women Voters of Norfolk and Virginia Beach. Mrs. McArthur Tozer, president of the League, said her organization had recently completed a study of the feasibility of kindergartens in both the Virginia Beach and Norfolk school systems, but the results have not yet been published. She offered a "summary" of their findings, "however, these were: That the League supports public school kindergartens."

That the League is in favor of two half day sessions rather than one five-hour session as required by the State for funds.

That there be a teacher-pupil ratio of not over 29 to 1 with a helper.

That kindergartens be for the full school term rather than just for a summer term (which Virginia Beach presently has).

That the League supports higher salaries and enforcement of requirements for improvement of teacher education.

That the League supports higher local property taxes as long as they are designated for use by the schools.

To which Buffington answered, "I am forced to say that we have no plans for kindergartens in '68, and I don't think we will in '69. Under the present circumstances, I don't see how we can. We must concentrate on the needs most important now."

Mrs. Tozer suggested that first grade teachers "must see quite a difference in children whose parents could afford private kindergartens and those who could not."

Robert Deford, Jr., a school board member, then replied, "I want to assure the League that we are doing all possible to get the best education possible for the children in Virginia Beach."

Buffington pointed out that of 1,600 teachers in the Virginia Beach school system, only seven are certified to teach kindergarten. He also said there are not enough classrooms for kindergartens.

"A pupil-teacher ratio of 29-1 would eliminate us from State aid," Buffington said. "We must have an average daily attendance of 30 which would mean about 38 children per class."

(See "School Board," p. 2)

Bidding Time Arrives For Future Schools

For the next five months, Virginia Beach School Board construction supervisor, Ernest R. Stone, will stay quite busy, just opening bids on all the new schools and additions to existing schools to be built. The first bids will be opened this afternoon at the School Board office at Princess Anne. These bids for the new Pembroke Meadows school have been advertised for about three weeks.

On Tuesday, Feb. 27, bids will be opened for the additions to First Colonial and Kempville High Schools. Those bids have now been advertised about two weeks.

In March the bids will be opened for Plaza Junior High School and for V. B. 68 elementary school to be built on Yoder Lane and Parliament Drive. The tentative date for opening the elementary school bids is March 7, however this may be delayed a few days because of a few problems, according to Stone. Bids will be opened on the Junior high tentatively on March 19. This was delayed from March 5, because of waiting for entire state approval of plans.

April 1 or thereabout, bids will be opened for V. B. 67, an elementary school in the area south of Windsor Woods. About May 1 bids will be opened for additions to Tranwood Lynnhaven, Malibu, Pembroke and Kempville elementary schools.

About June 1 bids for the new junior high school in the Bellamy Manor area will be opened. Plans now call for the school to be built according to approximately the same plan as Kempville High School.

At about the same time bids will be opened for the new junior high school in Bayside, which Stone says will be built according to "another entirely new concept."

"We don't have any complete plans ready on that one yet," said Stone. "...just a lot of pencil sketches."

Then on July 1, bids will be opened for the vocational-technical high school to be built in the Green Run Farm area.

The money for construction and land acquisition was approved in an emergency bond issue on Jan. 20 for the new facilities, which school officials say must be ready by the fall of 1969. Schools received the lion's share of the bond issue, about $14.5 million.

Question Arises

A letter from M.P. Strickler of Virginia Beach, chairman of the advisory council of the Atlantic Mental Hygiene Center, was prompted Del. Glenn Yates of Portsmouth to seek an opinion from the Virginia Attorney General, Robert Y. Sutton.

Strickler wrote to Yates, who is an architect, noting that some members of the council are concerned about possible conflict-of-interest that might arise from Yates drawing the plans for the new facility, soon to be built on First Colonial Road.

Yates answered Strickler in a letter noting that the contract to draw the plans was signed before he was elected to public office, but that he would request a ruling from Sutton.

HUD Project Officially Begins

Although the cinder block foundations and a good deal of groundwork were already in place, Bayside Arms Apartments on Witch Duck Road is now officially under way. Groundbreaking ceremonies were conducted at the site last Friday.

First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing headed a list of dignitaries on hand. Downing also wielded the shovel to turn the first ceremonial spade of dirt for the rent supplement project, the first in Virginia and third in the nation. Downing praised the development, which will guarantee rent supplements to those who qualify to live in the project.

Work has been underway on the complex for more than two months, and the first units should be ready for occupancy by August, according to C. W. Hickman, vice-president of the development firm. Nearly all the apartments have been rented already, mostly by Negroes, but applications are still being taken.

About $85,000 has been allocated by HUD for the Bayside Arms Apartment project.

This headquarters building of the Princess Anne Courthouse Volunteer Fire Department is scheduled to be torn down upon completion of the Municipal Fire & Rescue Center on Princess Anne Road.

Department Waits for Home

The new Municipal Fire & Rescue Center under construction on Princess Anne Road is the future headquarters of the Princess Anne Volunteer Courthouse Fire & Rescue Department.

Indications are the building may be completed by April of this year, in time to celebrate the 21st anniversary of the founding of the "Courthouse Volunteers".

A group of residents of the region decided to form the unit in April of 1947, which was comprised of 12 or 15 men. Support of the unit was evident from the beginning. Residents of the region contributed money towards equipment, as did several business men such as Frank Kellam, the late Judge Floyd Kellam and Herman Bartee. Titus Sawyer permitted the use of a barn off North Landing Road for housing the unit's first truck and to serve as "Department Headquarters".

The first truck was an old Ford chassis which was converted into a "tanker" truck by "Chuck" Cadis, Roland West, who played a large role in forming the unit was elected as the department's first president and serves as a "trustee" today.

The present board of constitutional officers include Carl Christen, president; William Golwin, vice president; J.G. Brown, treasurer; and Elgia Easter, secretary; Robert E. Lee, one of the original members of the department has held the office of "chief" for the past 12 years. He is assisted in operation of the unit by Alfred Llywman, assistant chief; F.A. Benson, captain; and Elvin Miller, first lieutenant.

The department is comprised of 25 men, and according to Chief Lee, is the full quota provided for in the department's by-laws. However, Lee says three or four men are on the waiting list for new openings, and several of the men are expected to enter military service this summer. In addition to Chief Lee, others who were among the original members and still active include Christen, J.G. Brown and Russell Lee.

Chief Lee spoke proudly of the men of the department, when he said, "The men seem to put everything they've got into their work, and they do a wonderful job. We get a good turnout on all fire calls, no matter what the weather, and the men work together 100%."

Present equipment consists of two "pumper" trucks, one of which was purchased last year, a "power wagon" truck designed for fighting brush and woods fires, and a "salvage" truck, which is undergoing some repairs and changes. Two ambulances make up equipment for the Rescue Squad, which is operated by men of the Courthouse Volunteers. The Rescue service, while available around the clock, operates during the night through rotating shifts, which call for three men to be on standby duty nightly from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m.

In addition to providing more space for housing equipment, the new headquarters building will also, according to Chief Lee, provide space for a kitchen, dining area, a meeting room, a possible recreation room and space for several bunk beds.

Looking towards the future, Chief Lee told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "We're planning on getting a Ladies Auxiliary underway this summer. We have three or four ladies interested already, and they could help us in several ways. We are also planning on holding an open house for people of the community as soon as possible after locating in our new headquarters building."

While discussing the operation of the Courthouse Volunteers Chief Lee spoke highly of the people of the community for their support in fund raising campaigns and of all fire departments of the city being "willing to help each other when ever they are called upon for assistance in fighting fires or answering other emergencies".

Clean-Up Campaign Keeps Students Busy

By Erik Klingenberg
First Colonial

The Patriots of First Colonial pushed their way through a busy week, with the next few weeks promising even more activity. Last week found the students starting a two week clean-up campaign, with signs in home-rooms and halls proclaiming, "Stash Your Trash," "Trash? Can It!" and other eye-catching slogans.

Final selections were made for the Colonial Ball Dance attendants, the Senior class choosing Patti Jensen, Jane Danforth, and Debbie Murden, one of whom will be selected as the queen.

The other attendants are Pat Hubbard and Angie O'Gorman, junior class; Melonie Bone and Rosemary du Pree, sophomore class; Priscilla McNary and Linda Bozart, freshman class; and Michelle du Pree and Mary Carquist for the eight grade class.

Play rehearsal continues throughout this week for "Around the World in Eighty Days," to be presented on two new dates, Feb. 29 and March 1.

On Friday, Feb. 9, the student body observed "Stomp Cox Day," which saw a large part of the students plodding around in boots of various sizes and descriptions. A pep rally held in the morning witnessed the introduction of F.C.'s various teams, basketball, track, wrestling, and gymnastic. A small but loud senior class won the Spirit Cannon for showing the most school spirit at the rally.

"Stomp Cox Day" came to a successful end as the Patriots smashed the Cox Falcons 68-52. The tables were turned, though, on Saturday night, when Lake Taylor defeated First Colonial 56-45.

Other upcoming events include the Annual Winter Band Concert, on Feb. 15 and the National Honor Society tapings scheduled for Feb. 23.

Finally, First Colonial's "H-Q" team pulled a 120 point curtain over Cradock Sunday, defeating the Admirals 265-145. Being the team's third victory, it places them in the championship rounds, to be held at a future date. So far, only Princess Anne High has made it to the final rounds.

Comedy Is Good Fare In VBLT Production

The Little Theatre of Virginia Beach has scored another hit with its current offering, "The Late Christopher Bean," a very dated comedy by Sidney Howard.

Both the costumes by Myrtle Rutledge and the set by Penny Martin have helped create the atmosphere of a long forgotten era in American history. The players at the Courtyard Playhouse have brought back those terrible "depths of the depression" days of the early 1930's most successfully.

The play itself is just not that great, although it is a pleasant enough comedy and study of human nature. The action revolves around a simple country doctor, his social-climber of a wife, his 26-year old unmarried "baby" daughter, a younger more pleasant daughter, and a housekeeper-cook of 14 years.

The whole lot of them are reasonably happy and content with life as it is, even if the doctor is beginning to feel the pinch of his patients not being able to pay their medical bills. But their lives are complicated by a collection of honest and unsavory characters who come onto the scene. They come when the art works of one Christopher Beans become one of the "hottest items" of the art world in New York.

Bean had been the doctor's patient. He had no family, and was taken in by the doctor and nursed until he died 10 years before. He left several paintings in the house. Suddenly the paintings are famous and greed enters the happy household.

John Haffing does a superb job as the doctor and head of the family. He holds the pace together beautifully. And Theresa Worall, his wife, is excellent as the scheming, but nice, snob. Susanne Hume as the older sister has a tendency to play the role too young and sometimes her voice reaches too high, but for the most part her characterization of the "bawling old maid" is a pleasing one.

As the younger sister, Susan Epstein, does a nice job. Her facial expressions and reactions to what is going on around her mark her as a fine actress to be.

It is Anne Henry, as Abby, the housekeeper, who takes all the honors in this one. Her characterization is flawless. Her walk is perfect. And her ability to charm the audience is outstanding.

Mike Hamblin as the younger sister's boyfriend, Harrell Tice as an art forger, Frank Ferrigno as an art dealer and Louis Hubbard as an art critic, all turn in good performances in the production.

Liz Sills adds another to her successful directing jobs. On opening night there was a considerable amount of line miffing, but we feel sure this will not be the case in this weekend's performances. At no time did it completely detract from the production, and the play is highly recommended as weekend fare. HJL

This is boy Scout week, which will be climaxed by the annual Scout-arama which opens Saturday at the Civic Center. Last Friday night Scouts of Troop 64 camped out overnight in Princess Anne Plaza shopping center. Cub and Scout demonstrations were also presented at Pembroke Mall, Sunday was Scout Sabbath when special services were held at many area churches.

Miss Princess Anne Selected

By Kacey Chuilli
Princess Anne High

Senior Ute Ward was chosen Miss Princess Anne of 1968 Saturday, in Princess Anne High School's auditorium. Ute, who sang "Tan Shoes and Pink Shoes" for her talent routine, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D.E. Ward.

First runner-up in the pageant was Susan Marshall. Second runner-up was Diane Fox. Seniors Andrea Benda and Laurie Harris tied for third place. Laurie also won the Miss Congeniality Award.

Miss Linda Satterfield, last year's Miss Princess Anne, crowned her successor, and sang "What Now My Love".

Guest performers were Hiram Guerra, Princess Anne's foreign exchange student from Brazil, and Miss Virginia Beach, Bobbi Chuilli. Hiram played "Ebb Tide" and "Born Free" on the piano and Bobbi sang "The Summer of His Years".

Seniors Andrea Benda and Robert German have been named Outstanding Students of America from Princess Anne High School, to compete against other Virginia and national selections for the Optimist-sponsored award.

Andrea is treasurer of the Student Council Association and Bob is a co-captain of the high school's state-championship football team.

A group of students will be making a five-week tour of European universities this summer under the Travel Study International summer seminar plan. The trip, under the guidance of Steve Lall, journalism teacher, will include a week's stay in such cities as Rome, Paris, Bern, Amsterdam and London. Anyone between the ages of 15 and 19 is eligible to go. TSI has Travel Study plans available to any high school or college in the U.S. that meet certain requirements.

The Drama Department of Princess Anne will present Oliver Goldsmith's classic comedy "She Stoops to Conquer" as their entry in the District Drama Festival Feb. 23 at the Norfolk Little Theatre.

Bayside Schedules Council Elections

It will soon be that time of year again when candidates are nominated and elected to public offices throughout the land. Here at Bayside we too are preparing for election day.

Student Council officers will have to be chosen to fill next year's positions. Next week, a primary is scheduled between the candidates in order to narrow down the number of students running.

A candidate must have a "C" average in each subject, a petition signed by 100 people and all of his teachers. In order to run for president, he first must be a junior or a senior. The other three offices are vice-president, secretary, and treasurer. All other positions will be appointed.

Ballots will be cast at the end of next month, giving the candidates time to prepare lively and interesting campaigns.

If you have attended any of the recent Bayside dances and have seen a tall dark figure staring at you, the possibilities are great that you may be chosen to appear on Disc-O-Ten next week.

William Fitzgerald, Bayside's junior class guidance counselor, is this strange figure. He has been given the job of finding Bayside's best dancers. While he scouts past enthusiastic participants, each try their best to show him their individual talents. There is an extensive assortment of good competition, but only a limited number will be allowed to attend.

On the varsity athletics scene, the Bayside matmen defeated Great Bridge last Saturday 28-14 to complete their season with a 4-7 record. Outstanding competitors for Bayside this year were Joe Honeycutt at 133, Jinks Meyers at 138, Butch Strickland at 154, and John Bowles at the heavyweight spot. The Marlin five lost a tough decision to Princess Anne last Friday night. The Marlin started out strong in the first half but fell behind the Cavaliers in the second half. Outstanding Marlin scorers are John Todd, Ray Emerson, Jackie Boone and Don Solomon.

Car Dealer Appointed

Harold Heisch, president and owner of Hilltop Volkswagen, Inc., has been appointed to serve on the Governmental Relations Committee of the Automotive Trade Association of Virginia.

As a Trade Association member for more than 14 years, Heisch has served in previous years on the ten-man committee, which maintains liaison with state government agencies sharing an interest in matters affecting the auto industry. His appointment is effective for at least two years.

Vegetation Improvement Brings Ducks

Submerged vegetation in Back Bay has shown a marked improvement following the artificial introduction of salt water which began in the summer of 1965, reports Game Commission Research Biologist Joe Coggins.

Approximately 260 samples of bottom vegetation taken in late fall revealed 25 percent with vegetation last fall as opposed to only 12 percent with vegetation in 1966, the lowest figure reported during the eight years the sampling has been undertaken.

"An invasion of milfoil is responsible for part of the increase," Coggins said, "but there was a noticeable increase in widgeon grass and other plants important to waterfowl." Waterfowl census figures for the Back Bay area indicate that the ducks noticed the difference also. A total of 16,625 ducks were counted in the area during the mid-winter waterfowl census in early January of 1968 as opposed to 8,526 ducks recorded during the corresponding period a year earlier.

Salinity readings from the bay have shown a definite increase in the salt content since the pumping began with levels of over 10 percent noted in some sections. A salt content of about 10 percent is considered optimum for waterfowl and fishlife found in this unique brackish environment.

Granby Hi Wins Again

It looked for awhile as if Bayside might upset defending champion Granby in Tuesday night's semi-finals of the Eastern District basketball tournament.

Robert Jones and John Todd led Bayside's scoring attack and foul-line accuracy at one point, the Marlins led by three points, with a 19-16 score, before Granby pulled away to take the game, 71-58.

Bayside lost to Granby twice during the regular season, by 48 and 36 points.

In the first game of the evening, Princess Anne, the 1966 champion, crushed Norview 85-34. P. A.'s Bob Corman scored 24 points to move above a total 900 points for his career.

Two years ago, Princess Anne and Norview met for the championship. But this year the contest was Princess Anne's all the way and they will meet Granby tomorrow night.

Last night unbeaten Maury, the tourney favorite, met Kellam in the second game at 9 p.m. and First Colonial took on Cox in the first game at 7:30 in Norfolk's Arena. The winners of those games will meet Friday night.

Maury has already clinched one of the two slots in the Group I-A Eastern Regional tournament by winning the season championship. The second slot will go to the tournament winner, or to the runner-up, if Maury takes the tournament.

Boy Held

Members of the Virginia Beach Police Youth Bureau this past week took a 16-year-old boy into custody in connection with a series of burglaries in Nashville, Tenn. Authorities said the juvenile was returned to Nashville for questioning in theft of approximately $6,000 including a rare coin collection.

Court Action Pends

Court action is pending for two adults and two juveniles in connection with last Friday's robbery of the Kayo Service Station in the 1400 block Virginia Beach Boulevard. Authorities identified the accused as Charles T. Harmon, Jr., South Birdneck Road, aged 19, Stephen Trotman, 16th Street, 18 years of age, and two 17-year-old juveniles. Authorities said approximately $71 was taken in the robbery of the service station.

Raid Nets Fines

A raid by Virginia Beach Police Vice Squad detectives earlier this month has resulted in suspended jail sentences and fines for a Connie Lane resident. Willie Cason received fines totalling $224 and suspended jail sentences totalling 90 days when he appeared in Municipal Court for the alleged possession and sale of illegal whiskey and operation of a disorderly house. Authorities said Cason's arrest followed the alleged purchase of illegal whiskey from him by a Norfolk policeman assisting Virginia Beach officers investigating the case.

Residents Seek Damages

Damage suits totalling $135,000 have been filed against Princess Anne Utilities, Inc. charging the firm with negligent operation of a sewage lagoon near the Kennet Grove section. A total of 18 residents of the region are claiming their homes have allegedly been damaged by odors rising from the lagoon, which has resulted in making the dwellings unfit for habitation.

3 Men Bound Over On Dope Charges

Three men, arrested during the current investigation into the movement of marijuana through the city of Virginia Beach, have been bound over to a grand jury on charges of possession of narcotics. The accused are identified as Benjamin F. Herndon, Martin Avenue, Chesapeake; Harold E. Ritter, Jr., East Bayshore Road, Virginia Beach; and Guy B. Phillips, III, Greensboro, N.C. Authorities said Herndon, 22, and Phillips, 23, were arrested following a raid on an apartment in the 300 block 25th street, while police were conducting a search for illegal drugs. Ritter, 18, reportedly was charged during an earlier investigation into the possible linking of marijuana with the public schools of the city.

Thus far 68 persons have been charged with various violations of state laws during the four-week-old investigation into the use of marijuana or other drugs, including a number of juveniles who were charged as incorrigibles. Officials said the investigation is continuing here and in neighboring regions.

The investigation has also led to the charging of a number of adults and juveniles with glue-sniffing, and the uncovering of at least three locations in the city as possible gathering places for the sniffing of glue.

Most of these charges were disorderly conduct, the only charge applicable under existing laws covered by the code of the city of Virginia Beach. Action has been taken in City Council, as well as the General Assembly, to establish laws which be more specific in prohibiting the act of "glue-sniffing."

Convictions, thus far under existing regulations include 19-year-old Marjorie PFC Dennis Sanford, on orders for duty in Vietnam, given a 13-month suspended jail sentence on conviction of disorderly conduct and contributing to delinquency of a minor; Daniel Howard, 18, and Phillip Glennon, 18, both of whom have received $25 fines following disorderly convictions. Both Howard and Glennon are awaiting further court action on charges of contributing to delinquency of a minor.

This is all that remained of the 28 ft. sea skiff, the "PARA JACS" after fire roared through the craft at its mooring behind the Bay Harbor Club on Laskin Road. Early investigation showed an unexplained explosion occurred moments before fire swept through the craft last Friday morning.

Ordinance Still Waits

The minimum housing code ordinance is reportedly still a long way from City Council and a public hearing. It had been expected to come before Council again last week, but was not mentioned.

Some months ago when the ordinance which would place stricter restrictions on housing in Virginia Beach was introduced, it was referred to a committee chaired by Councilman Al Bonney. City Attorney Harry Marshall and Councilman Lawrence Marshall also serve on that committee.

Speculation had it that the committee was about to report, but after more deliberation, the ordinance was reportedly put off again until it is in more final form for presentation to Council. When it is finally introduced, a long public hearing is expected on the matter.

'Inlet'

groin designed as part of a sand trap south of the inlet. At the ocean-end of the 562-foot groin is the south jetty, canted in a northeast direction for 285 feet.

Between the jetties is a 10-foot-deep channel (mean low water) which is 85-feet wide at the bottom, extending to Lake Rudee under a high-level bridge on General Booth Boulevard. The boulevard will eventually tie into a new highway south along the coast to Nag's Head, N. C.

When opened, Rudee will be the only oceanfront inlet on the Atlantic seaboard between Chesapeake Bay and North Carolina's Oregon Inlet. All of the marina's piers extending beyond the bar will be equipped with both a light and fog horn for greater boating safety, said Frank Kellam, Rudee Inlet Authority chairman.

The material for the inlet jetties came from the Suprior Stone Quarries in North Carolina. The Virginia Beach Erosion Commission has dredged the navigable drainage canal from the inlet to Linkhorn Bay.

Two years ago, when construction plans for the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway were cleared, city officials convinced state highway officials to include high-level bridge in that project, keeping the future construction of the canal in mind. The bridge was built into the expressway across a small creek west of Seatack Elementary School, to facilitate building the canal.

In a report made to the authority in January, Curtis said, "A lot of people have worked hard on this project for seven or eight years. I'm glad to see a culmination of all their plans."

"When it's finished in the fall," he went on, "it will be the most modern marina on the East Coast, with all services and a dockmaster."

Ex-User Discusses 'Pot'

By Joseph Lowenthal Jr.

I could pay the phone bill. And I suppose I noticed things around me -- aesthetic things -- more, like nature and artistic things and music, especially music.

Question: What did it do to you physically, and mentally?

Answer: It made me light-headed, and it put me in a good mood. I don't think it can make you do anything you wouldn't do anyway. While I was high, I had a dislike for any kind of hassle, but I was never impaired physically, and I don't remember ever seeing any of my friends impaired in any way. I have known people to pass out after smoking pot for hours and hours, but I've seen the same thing happen with alcohol.

Question: Did you feel a need for more and more pot as you continued to smoke it?

Answer: No. All it would take to get me high was a few drags. Some people it would take a little more than others. And all it depended on the mood you were in to begin with. If you were depressed, it could cause a bad "trip" or a "low". That happened to me only once, the last time I smoked it. It increased my depression and put me in a worse mood. It had been some time since I had smoked it, and that low helped stop me for good. But I still think it's a lot less dangerous than alcohol.

Question: Do you regret any of your actions while on pot?

Answer: I don't think so. You are maybe a little less inhibited, but I think a girl is more likely to be less inhibited in a crowd anyway. The danger is in not worrying about things, like driving.

Question: Why did you stop?

Answer: Pressure from my family. They found out about it, and were very upset. I was worried about the distress it might cause them if I was caught. And I really didn't need it. So I promised to quit.

Question: Any urge to continue?

Answer: No, I don't think so. Nothing more than wanting a cigarette, and I did promise not to. I won't break my promise.

Question: How did you get the marijuana?

Answer: That's easy. I never had to buy any. My friends always had some. It's very available, or at least it was until the crackdown. Now everybody I know is "clean". It's cheap enough for the kind of person who tries it. Each joint costs about 50 cents to a dollar. That's about the standard price, and one joint is enough to get three or four people high for awhile. Question: Your friends who use marijuana... What are they like? What is their story?

Answer: Some of them have real "hang ups." These who really need it are looking for some type of escape. They don't like themselves or the world around them. Then these unstable ones hide behind it.

Question: Did you ever know anyone who went on to anything stronger?

Answer: Yes. A few of them have tried acid, or the pills, but these are the ones with the real hangups, the ones trying to be the "super-cools". It's part of the pseudo image. Being themselves is not enough. They make up a story to go with this hangup. I've never had any urge to try anything else. Sometimes the pot would be cut with cocaine, and it was strong. My crowd would stay away from this stuff. I've never known anyone on heroin, and I don't know of any in the area.

Question: Where is the pot coming from?

Answer: All over. It's easy to get here from the larger areas, since there is so much travel in and out of a big city, and so many servicemen able to bring it in and sell it. Usually the pushers are selling it just enough above their cost to be able to pay for their own. I hear it has come here from New York, California, Mexico and down in the Caribbean. You'd be surprised at the number of businessmen in this area who smoke pot.

Question: Glad you stopped?

Answer: I guess so. I really don't see any difference, I mean, if others want to try it, I say ahead, but don't be stupid about it, and don't get caught. My circle of friends changed for the better when I started smoking pot. I was with a group who were more aware of things.

Question: Any other comments?

Answer: I think it should be legal, with restrictions and control, like alcohol, those with hangups drink too. As far as the crackdown is concerned, I am aware that they broke the law. They got caught. I didn't. But the police will never be able to get rid of it altogether. It'll just go underground for awhile. I wouldn't suggest using anything stronger though. Acid users risk real physical and mental dangers. Anyway, I don't regret my experience with pot, even though I could have been caught.

Branch manager Jack Dougherty smiles a welcome at his new Moore's store, which opened today on Virginia Beach Boulevard. Registration for a $500 prize-drawing at the store will run through Mar. 15.

Moore's Celebrates Opening

Moore's building supply stores arrive at Virginia Beach today, amid cherry tarts (in honor of Washington's birthday) and soft drinks for all, and the chance to win $1,000. Mayor Frank Dusch will be on hand for the ribbon-cutting at the chain's newly-completed Virginia Beach Boulevard store.

Branch manager John ("Jack") W. Dougherty said the Virginia Beach store is the 30th Moore's branch to open since the chain began "12 or 13 years ago," and one of 12 stores scheduled to open this year.

Dougherty described Moore's as "the largest building supply company in Virginia" and "a subsidiary of Evans Products." With branches all over the East and the Mid-West, the chain originated at Richmond and carries a complete line of building materials -- electrical and plumbing equipment, as well as hardware and appliances.

"We hope that in this area we'll attract as many consumer customers as contractors," said Dougherty, explaining that the store will hopefully serve the 1,300 families within the five-mile radius. Wholesale prices will be offered to consumer public as well as contractors he went on.

The nearest Moore's branches are located at Chesapeake and Newport News. According to Dougherty, a survey was made before construction began last fall to determine whether there was enough potential business at Virginia Beach to warrant another store. Thanks to positive results, the new branch, with 45 thousand square feet of space, including 7,000 square feet of showroom space, was built by Moore's construction team.

The Moore's store will operate with several credit and charge plans: the BankAmericard, the Bank of Virginia Charge Plan and Moore's own revolving charge plan, plus credit on commitment to contractors. "We have some credit plan for almost every one," said Dougherty.

Contest blanks -- with no purchase required -- can be filled out anytime before March 15 to qualify for Moore's prize-drawing on that day. The winning card holder will be given a $500 account paid in full to the amount of $500. If the winner already holds an account with Moore's, his account will be credited with $1,000.

Dougherty, who has been with Moore's in Tidewater "for approximately 10 years," has been assistant branch manager at the Chesapeake store for the past three years.

State Budget Cuts

May Hurt Park Plan School Board

Money for the development of a State park south of Sandbridge in the False Cape section of Virginia Beach is still in the governor's present budget, but the budget still has not been passed by the Virginia General Assembly.

Virginia Gov. Mills E. Godwin cut a large chunk off the requests made by the Virginia Outdoor Recreation Commission, and there is some doubt that much can be done toward acquiring land and developing the park in the False Cape area during the next biennium.

The complete plan of the commission was enthusiastically received by the last session of the legislature, but actual funding has not been as enthusiastic. Still in the unpassed current budget for all parks across Virginia is about $2.2 million, including matching federal funds, for park sites, and about $2.2 million, including matching federal funds, for local and regional parks. The commission had sought about $22 million.

The 10-year plan this may receive a real setback financially at the hands of the new State budget.

Meanwhile State Sen. Edward T. Calton III of Virginia Beach has introduced a resolution in the Senate similar to one introduced by Delegate Stanley G. Bryan of Chesapeake in the House that would prevent Dismal Swamp from becoming gobbled up by land developers for homesites, and would make part of the Virginia portion of the swamp into a park area.

Both agree that congressional action may be the answer since part of the Swamp lies in North Carolina also.

Land developers are reportedly already draining part of the swamp, and the legislators feel this is one of the last open areas that can be preserved in this area as a natural wildlife area and park.

In addition plans are slowly developing for improvement of historical attractions at Fort Story, Fort Story and National Park Service officials are drawing up plans of what can be done to preserve the old light-house and "first landing" areas of Fort Story.

Erosion is taking the land away rapidly at the site where a cross is erected, marking the landing by Jamestown settlers in 1607.

Mrs. Tozer's final argument was that "Gov. Mills E. Godwin authorized public school kindergartens in 1966."

And Buffington concluded, "I consider that the worst mistake Gov. Mills E. Godwin ever made."

This meeting was the final one for Frank W. Cox as superintendent of schools. His retirement is effective March 1. He has been superintendent since July 1, 1933 and has never missed a school board meeting in that time.

In other action the board set the March meeting for the opening of bids for new school buses. A clause will be inserted this year that the board reserves the right to reject any or all bids. Bids will be restricted to Virginia Beach dealers except for international which has no outlet here.

Asst. Supt. Joe Owens reported that there are now 13,656 secondary and 25,898 elementary students including special education classes.

Before and after the School Board meeting the board's finance committee met to prepare next year's budget which will be included in the City's budget. Another meeting is planned before the budget is finalized, Buffington said. The fiscal year is from July 1 to June 30.

City Manager W. Russell Hatchett says he has not seen the school board budget in any form, and contrary to a published report in a Norfolk newspaper, the school budget will definitely not be presented to City Council Monday.

Hatchett added that the school board's budget, like that of all other departments, is sent to him to include as he prepares his new budget. He said he could not confirm or deny the Norfolk paper report concerning the contents since he has not seen it, but stated that it was released prematurely by an unknown source.

Students See Optical Maser

Sixty-five Cox High School students, members of the Industrial Arts Club, have seen an optical maser which produces a beam of light a million times brighter than the sun, and is expected to revolutionize communications, medicine, industry and the military.

The maser was demonstrated recently by Capt. J.R. Rohleder, Chief of Staff, Naval Air Reserve Staff 86 of the Naval Air Reserve Training Unit (NARTU) at Norfolk.

Capt. Rohleder, a Weekend Warrior, showed the students how the coherent beam of light generated by the maser can carry conversation over great distances, vaporize objects in space and remove tumors.

"The maser's beam," he told the students, "is capable of carrying one billion telephone circuits, and one million television channels, as well as radio and data processing material."

Capt. Rohleder is a supervisor of Customer Information for the Bell Telephone Co. in civilian life, and gives these demonstrations for local groups during his weekend drills with the Naval Air Reserve.

Capt. J.R. Rohleder demonstrates the optical maser at Cox High School. The maser can theoretically vaporize objects in space, remove tumors and even repair a detached retina.

Students from attack squadron 42 (VA-42) became the first Navy fliers to utilize the new TC-4C training aircraft at NAS Oceana.

New 'Bird' Joins Navy at Oceana

There's something new in pilot and bombardier-navigator training.

The innovation is the Grumman TC-4C, a hybrid bird with the nose of the A-6A Intruder (the Navy's most sophisticated all weather attack bomber) and the body of another Grumman aircraft, a civilian twin-turboprop corporate transport called the Gulfstream.

Ever since the introduction of jet fighters, interceptors and attack bombers, a major handicap has been the training of pilots and bombardier-navigators.

There simply has not been room in the aircraft for a student and an instructor at the same time.

Grumman, apparently, has solved the problem with its flying classroom.

The body of the Gulfstream, which, as a passenger craft, can accommodate 10 persons has been fitted out with a facsimile of the A-6A cockpit. Here, the pilots can practice procedure under observation of an instructor. Bombardier-navigators, likewise, receive on-the-job instruction in operating the highly complex instrumentation which carries the intruder to its goal and discharges its fire power.

Present plans call for four students to be aboard on training hops which are scheduled to run some three-and-a-half hours each.

Play Set To Perform In Norfolk

For those who missed it at the Courtyard Playhouse there will be two performances of "The Late Christopher Bean" at the Norfolk Museum Theatre on Friday, Feb. 23 at 8:30 p.m., and a Saturday matinee on 24 at 2:15 p.m.

Tickets may be reserved by calling the Museum at 441-2728. Admission is $2.50 and for Museum Members, $2.00.

The Virginia Beach Art Association will have an exhibit of paintings in the foyer of the Museum Theatre in conjunction with the play. Such well known local artists as Harriet Goldberg, Herb Jones, Cornelia Justice and Ruth Laake are among those exhibiting.

Some original paintings were needed in the play and will be seen on stage. These were created for the Little Theatre by Reitha Sedel and Lee Lively, whose work will also be on view in the Art Association exhibit.

of VA-42, explained that the TC-4C will be used in all phases of training, with students making alternate supervised training hops in the flying classroom then actual flights in the A-6 itself.

A training system similar to this has been used in preparing pilots to fly the Navy's A-3, a three-seat bomber. In this instance, the bomb doors of the A-3 were permanently closed, and the body of the aircraft was equipped with training devices. The modified trainer was called the TA-3B.

However, the TC-4C marks the first naval use of a hybrid military-civilian training plane, and is the first trainer of any sort developed to simulate flight and bombardier-navigator procedures in the intruder.

Grumman will produce nine of these flying classrooms. Three will be used here by VA-42, three at MCAS Cherry Point, N. C. and three at Whidbey Island, Wash. by Attack Squadron 128.

Rep. Downing To Be Speaker

The Hon. Thomas N. Downing, Congressman from the First Congressional District of Virginia, will be the featured speaker at a dinner-meeting of the Tidewater Association of Home Builders, Inc., Tuesday, Feb. 27, at the Bow Creek Golf and Country Club.

The social hour, sponsored by Smith and Keene Electric Service and Bryant Heating and Air Conditioning, will begin 6 p.m. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m., and will cost $5.25 per person.

Downing will discuss new and proposed legislation which affects the home-building industry in Virginia. He will also be awarded the Home Builders Public Official Award for 1967 by the Association.

Wesleyan Opens Bids For Library

Bids were opened late Tuesday for the new library at Virginia Wesleyan College on the Virginia Beach-Norfolk line. The apparent low bidder was W. H. Belanga, Inc., of Norfolk, with a price tag of $1,616,557.

Five firms turned in bids on the facility. The bids are now in review and the primary contract is expected to be awarded within the next 30 days, according to James Bergdolt, assistant to the president of the college.

Board Votes Stock Split

The Board of Directors of Virginia Electric and Power Company today approved in principle a plan for a 4 for 3 split of the common stock, subject to adoption by the stockholders of a charter amendment at the annual meeting on April 17, and authorization by regulatory authorities.

The record date for the stock split would be April 26 and certificates for the additional shares, one additional for each three held, would be mailed about May 24. The dividend rate on the split shares will be set at the April directors' meeting.

The Board also approved in principle a plan to sell in May additional common stock to obtain $50-$55 million in a negotiated transaction with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. as managing underwriter. The additional capital obtained will be used to finance in part, 1968 construction expenditures.

At the meeting Friday, the Board declared a quarterly dividend of 34¢ per share on the common stock payable March 20, 1968, to stockholders of record at the close of business on Feb. 29, 1968.

The Board also declared quarterly dividends on the five series of preferred stock: $1.25 per share on the $5 dividend preferred; $1.01 per share on the $4.04 dividend preferred; $1.05 per share on the $4.20 dividend preferred; $1.03 per share on the $4.12 dividend preferred; and $1.20 on the $4.80 dividend preferred stock, also payable on March 20, 1968, to stockholders of record at the close of business on Feb. 29, 1968.

Humble Promotes Hamner

Meritorious sales performance has earned a promotion for William W. Hamner, the Virginia Beach-based sales representative for Humble Oil.

Hamner has advanced to the career sales position of senior dealer salesman, according to announcement by M.A. Roberts, Humble's Norfolk district manager.

Mock General Assembly at Cox High School last Saturday was part of that school's Model United Nations Day. The sessions included discussion of world problems and the presentation of possible solutions.

Students Can Receive Tax Refund

Students who worked part-time or during the summer may have a refund coming on their 1967 Federal income tax returns, James P. Boyle, District Director of Internal Revenue said today.

Students are required to file a tax return if they earned $600 or more. If they earned less than $600 and taxes were withheld from wages by their employers, they should file a return in order to obtain a refund of the tax withheld from their wages.

Unmarried students who earn less than $900 will not owe any Federal income tax. They are entitled to claim the usual $600 personal exemption, plus a $300 minimum standard deduction.

Students are entitled to claim their own personal exemption when filing a tax return, Mr. Boyle said. Parents who furnish more than one-half the cost of support for their child who is a full-time student may also claim him as an exemption on their tax return, unless the child is married and is filing a joint return with his or her spouse.

"I don't care what you say," she said. "Nothing...no argument you have, is going to convince me."
"Now, that's what I call an open mind," he answered dryly. "You can talk about it until you are purple in the face, and you won't change my mind," she said a little louder. "I am absolutely convinced that it is something we just don't need, can't afford, and it isn't worth all the money it costs anyway."

"Will you please be quiet?" he asked, when he could get a word in edgewise. "I am trying to watch television."
"The programs are terrible anyway. This year I believe they're worse than ever," she mumbled under her breath. "And they're bad enough in black and white."
"Please be quiet," he pleaded. "Peyton Place is coming on."
"All right. But take this program for instance," she began. "It opens with a picture of a church steeple on some sort of background. Now what difference would it make if it were in color?"

"You'd know what color the church steeple is and what color the background is."
"Now look at that," she said quickly, pointing to a commercial just appearing on the drab screen. "They're just trying to tease people into buying color television sets, with that kaleidoscopic business."

"The 'kaleido-what' business?"
"Oh you know what I mean. All those colors making all those patterns. Just look," she said.
"How can you tell? We only have a black and white set."
"Well I can just guess. Quickly!" she yelled. "Look at the way that flashed. You know that's a change to several colors. See. They're still teasing us."

"Yeah."
"But I just can't see the advantage of it, except maybe that the kids could watch the Saturday cartoons in color," she mused. "Now look at that. I know that lake is blue, even if it does show up a dull shade of grey on our set. Why do I need color?"
"Maybe it's green water," he threw in. "But I'm convinced. Don't worry about it. You've completely talked me out of it."
"Maybe in a few years when they're more perfected and the price is cheaper," she said. "Then maybe we can get one. Now, you know I'd really like to have it now, but there are just so many arguments against it."

"(Right, I'm convinced.)"
"Of course..." she began. "If you really feel you want it and if you think the children would get a big kick out of it... And it is educational for them, I suppose."

"Yeah. Especially Bugs Bunny," he added.
"Oh, you know what I mean," she said. "Certainly a beautiful piece of furniture like some of them are really can be an asset to the room, and it probably would help our standing in the neighborhood."

"You're absolutely right," he said still watching "Peyton Place."

"I give up. You're just being stubborn," she tossed out. "I don't care what you do. If you want a color television set, get it. I'm through arguing about it."

"You're the only one that's arguing. Besides I ordered one yesterday. It'll be delivered tomorrow."

She threw the latest copy of "Reader's Digest Condensed Books" at him.

Virginia Beach Juvenile Court

Case Summation Feb. 9 to 15, 1968

The court had hearings on 71 juvenile petitions which concerned persons 17 years of age or under accused of violating state laws, or city ordinances. Seven of these cases involved felonies.

Other cases which the court settled involved 16 on alleged traffic law violations and three on family domestic problems.

There were three cases of parental non-support during the above calendar dates.

The Green and the Orange

Almost unnoticed, a tremendous amount of planting has been done beside roads and in median strips throughout Virginia Beach to beautify the area. Particularly along Laskin Road and Virginia Beach Boulevard, new trees, shrubs and flowering bushes have appeared in abundance almost overnight.

In the months and years to come they will serve to make our city one of the most beautiful places anywhere, and the city fathers and the Beautification Commission are to be commended highly for taking the initiative in this matter, before we ended up with a network of concrete and nothing else.

All of this planting is being done according to a plan. There is nothing haphazard about it. When the plants and trees realize their full growth, Virginia Beach will have landscaping to be extremely proud of.

Although many people are responsible for the planting now going on, it could never have reached this point without the backing, encouragement and help of City Manager W. Russell Hatchett. This one man has been the spark behind the beautification of Virginia Beach and has done a magnificent job.

Then because he paints a few trash cans orange, the wrath of the ladies is upon him. So he was trying to save money, by using paint on hand. Is there anyone out there against an economically-minded city manager? The fury over the orange trash cans was uncalled for and especially as a criticism of a man who has worked so hard to keep the city clean and beautiful.

We suppose this makes us color-unconscious or at least lacking in artistic values, but we saw the shiny, newly-painted offenders and thought they looked fine. So what's wrong with orange anyway. C'mon ladies. Give Mr. Hatchett a break and a compliment or two.

Mrs. 'First Citizen'

A week from tonight, Mrs. Wallace Clark, known to her many friends as Lucille, receives a great honor. She will officially be named Virginia Beach's 18th "First Citizen," by the Virginia Beach Jaycees.

In winning this honor she joins 17 other outstanding citizens of our city who have also been honored in the past. This is a singular award, and Mrs. Clark is well-deserving of it, for she is a singular woman.

Although it may be more years than she cares to remember, she has given of herself untiringly for more than 30 years. Whether it was a charitable organization, a worthy cause, education of Virginia Beach children, or any other job that just needed doing, Lucille Clark was right there pitching in.

To name all of her many accomplishments in three decades would take more time and space than we have, but she is best known for her work in the fight against polio, with the Fraternal Order of Police, Red Cross, P.T.A., and the Heart Association, to name but a few.

She is a pleasant person, always willing to participate and always with a smile on her face. It is fitting that she should be named the recipient of this high honor, and it is even more fitting that U.S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Jr., whom she has known for many years, should be the guest speaker at the banquet honoring her next Thursday.

The Virginia Beach Jaycees have chosen well their new "First Citizen".

Parks Are Needed Now

It really is a shame that the Governor of Virginia has seen fit to chop such a tremendous amount off the requests made by the Virginia Outdoor Recreation Commission in his new budget. We do not entirely criticize, since we are aware that cuts must be made somewhere in this record budget.

But it was just two years ago that the legislature approved enthusiastically the 10-year plan set forth by the commission. The commission now has asked for money, and that seems to have changed matters.

Fortunately there is still some small amount of money still in the budget for the development of a new state park south of Sandbridge in the False Cape area, but certainly not enough. We still definitely favor a park in that area, one of the last open spaces on the eastern seaboard.

Hopefully this park will come into being. If not now, at some time in the future, when money is more plentiful. Let us only hope there is such a time, because needs of recreation must be met head on. This is absolutely important to our future in Virginia Beach, since most of us have more leisure time now than ever before.

In addition more development of Seashore State Park must be accomplished. This does not mean employing more acreage, only fully utilizing the acreage already in use. Sure a few new campsites are added each year and the cabins were reopened. But many more are needed. This is also an important part of the development of Virginia Beach.

Before we are soon living in a concrete jungle full of houses and roads, open spaces and parks must be planned now by others, including the State, just as they have been planned by the foresighted planners of Virginia Beach, regardless of the money it will cost.

I CANNOT TELL A LIE, DADDIO -- I DID IT MYSELF!

Vietnam Reader Shocked at Drugs

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

The following concerns the recent outbreak of narcotics at city high schools. You may feel free to use this or throw it in the nearest waste can.

While reading the Pacific Stars and Stripes I came across an article that was very shocking. Listed under U.S. Briefs was the caption, 62 jailed in Virginia Drug Raids. As I continued to read I was even more shocked to learn that this was taking place in my own hometown.

I wonder if the teenagers involved realize how much harm they are doing to themselves and to the reputation of our city? Maybe because they weren't aware of the seriousness and the penalty involved they chose to indulge in drug taking as a kick or the thing to do. Now because they were thrill seeking in such a manner, they have brought discredit and black marks upon their families, high schools, and the city. Most important they have brought it upon themselves. They do the real suffering.

I don't think the young people are responsible. It's very plain to see that there is a narcotics ring operating right under our noses and the sooner exposed the sooner our city can rid itself of this trash.

It would be wise for anyone having information concerning this problem to forward it to the proper people as soon as possible. If you are involved don't become any more implicated than you already are. For the first offense the law will usually go easy on you, especially when you are willing to co-operate. Think about it and be a respectable citizen of a fine city.

Ruritans Say Thanks

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the splendid coverage your newspaper gave the recent National Ruritan Convention that was held here in our fine city.

Having worked very closely with the Civic Center and many of the 1800 Ruritans who were in attendance, a very favorable and welcomed feeling was established by all who attended.

Needless to say this is the type of "feeling" that was one of the fastest growing cities in the country must cultivate.

Tight Driving Restrictions

The following editorial is reprinted from the VIRGINIA TRAFFIC SAFETY NEWS, a publication of the Governor's Highway Safety Committee. The editorial was written by Hiram M. Smith, Jr., for the February, 1968, issue of the publication.

The Virginia Traffic Safety Study Commission has recommended two very sensible and necessary additions to our laws directed against drunken driving. Presented to the Legislature is a bill whereby any hospital would be required to administer a blood test to a driver admitted by reason of a traffic crash if a police officer arrests him and requests it. If the driver is unconscious, he is deemed not to have withdrawn his consent as given under implied consent legislation.

Under implied consent legislation, a driver arrested on a charge of drunken driving is deemed to have given his consent, in return for the driving privilege, to a blood test. Refusal brings a 90-day license suspension, whether he be later adjudged guilty or innocent of the drunken driving charge.

If the driver refuses the test when first offered by the arresting police officer, the officer then must take him before a magistrate. If he again refuses, the refusal becomes final. Under the law, an officer must take a defendant before a magistrate with all reasonable promptness.

Drinking drivers who are injured to the extent that they must be hospitalized cannot be taken forthwith before a magistrate, even if they be conscious. Thus, under the present law, they escape the refusal penalty and the state is deprived of possible blood test evidence.

The unconscious driver presents another phase. Recent court rulings are to the effect that a blood test, taken under clinical conditions, even against the defendant's will, is a proper search and seizure of evidence incidental to the offense for which he was arrested. A California court has ruled that a test taken from an unconscious person is proper in that a test, to be effective, must be administered quickly and that the highway carnage justifies it in the light of public good.

However, other decisions are to the effect that blood tests taken under such circumstances are inadmissible in that the defendant was not under arrest due to unconsciousness. Generally, a person must be advised at once that he is under arrest and why, if the arrest is to be legal.

The Commission would have Virginia follow other implied consent states in deeming that the consent given by implication when the individual exercises the driving privilege is not withdrawn because of unconsciousness.

This appears reasonable in that a person who drinks and drives is certainly aware that he is upping his risk of involvement in a crash and a crash often involves unconsciousness. If he can be deemed to have given his consent to submit to a test under prescribed conditions, he can certainly be deemed not to have withdrawn it unless he expressly does so.

With at least 50 percent of our fatal crashes involving drinking drivers, drastic measures are in order to get them off the road.

Kemps Landing Was Urban Center of the Past

The old court house at Kempsville now stands deserted.

The old Lynnhaven Parish rectory at Kempsville.

The Kempsville jail is now used as a private residence.

By Carolyn McAllen
and Mary Wright

Kemps Landing, a thriving tobacco port on the banks of a branch of the Elizabeth River, acquired the more dignified name of Kempsville when it was incorporated in 1783.

By this time the town had replaced New Town as the urban center of Princess Anne County. The original name Kemps Landing was apparently derived from one of the families of Kemps who had settled in the area.

The Princess Anne County court first sat at Kempsville in 1778, carrying on its business in private residences and then in a dry goods store. There is no date on record for the building of the courthouse, but it was completed by 1789, during which year it was mentioned in a property deed.

The courthouse is of Flemish bonded brick and became a Baptist church after the Princess Anne County buildings were constructed at Princess Anne. It now stands abandoned and in disrepair just off Overland Road behind Pleasant Hall.

Peter Singleton purchased lots in Kempsville for 67 pounds in March 1777. He built his house, later named Pleasant Hall, in which the date April 19, 1779 was carved in the bricks above a basement window.

There is evidence that two wings originally were built on each end of the house. According to V. Hope Kelam and Sadie Scott in "Old Houses in Princess Anne," "It is said that as a former owner had heard of ready cash, bricks from the wings or from the fence would be torn out and sold." The house is now being used as a music school.

Next to the courthouse was the jail. The first jail was built of wood, according to a court order of 1782. That structure wasn't strong to hold the prisoners, and in 1787, by a new court order, the jail was rebuilt of brick, two stories tall with a gallery and consisting of four apartments.

Like the courthouse, the jail was put to other purposes after county buildings were erected at Princess Anne. It became a private school—a women's seminary—and was used later as a public school. It is now a private residence.

Across Princess Anne Road from Pleasant Hall and next to Emmanuel Episcopal Church is the Lynnhaven Parish rectory, reported to be the house built by Maximilian Boush II in 1680. It reportedly became the home of his son, Samuel, the first mayor of Norfolk. Later it was run as a tavern by James J. Johnson in 1818. It now stands abandoned.

There is evidence of the house's age in its wide floor boards, chimneys and very high mantels with narrow shelves.

Another old house in the area is the Bellamy Manor, purchased last year by the City of Virginia Beach and presently used by the Parks and Recreation Department. There is some uncertainty as to its age, but it was built at least 150 years ago and perhaps more than 200. The original building is white-painted brick. A wooden frame wing was added later. There were slave quarters in the basement of the house, and the hand-carving on the stairway and molding was done by slave labor, according to Carol Bellamy, son of T. Marshall Bellamy who bought the house after moving here from Petersburg in 1916.

Efforts are now underway by a group of business and civic leaders in Kempsville to restore several of the buildings. Their main objective is their restoration of Pleasant Hall, part of the Whitehead estate, which the heirs have expressed the desire to run over to a historical group. Other buildings under consideration are the Lynnhaven rectory and the courthouse.

The Parks and Recreation Commission has already received approval from City Council for a feasibility study to be made for dredging and restoring the waterway to Kemps Landing, for future use as a park.

'A Delicate Balance' Centers Around Bar

The action of Edward Albee's Pulitzer Prize play, "A Delicate Balance," currently playing at Wedgewood Theatre, Williamsburg, takes place in a handsomely furnished living room of an affluent couple in their autumnal years.

One of the room's appointments is a well-stocked bar, to which the people in the play give their continuing attendance, almost as if it were a wood-burning fireplace in which logs must be frequently turned and replenished to keep a blaze going. In fact, the bar quite replaces the traditional hearth as the spiritual and focal center point in the play.

In two of his major plays Albee has recognized a cultural change that has substituted the clink of ice in glasses for the crackle of burning logs, and the accompanying change of spiritual climate. In his first Broadway success, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" the scene was a college professor's home during an all-night drinking bout of the professor, his wife, and two guests.

In "A Delicate Balance" the trips to the bar are as frequent as in "Virginia Woolf" with the main difference being that, in the later play, the home is more affluent, the people in it more urbane, and thus there are more, and more varied, liquor bottles on view, bearing more expensive labels.

Since in "A Delicate Balance" Albee was particularly seeking to show the inner aridity of his empty-hearted characters, their search for warmth and meaning in themselves and their inter-relationships is symbolized in their continued resort to the liquor bottle.

"A Delicate Balance" will continue through March 2 with a Sunday matinee on Feb. 25. Evening performances are on Wednesday through Saturday with buffet dinner at 7 and performance at 8:30 p.m. Sunday matinee performances begin at 3 with buffet luncheon at 1:30.

Mrs. Henley To Return

Mrs. Lynne F. Henley, of Baltic Avenue, arrives at Los Angeles International Airport tomorrow afternoon, after a three-week friendship tour to New Zealand with members of the Second Marine Division Association.

While in New Zealand, the Association members participated in ceremonies commemorating the 25 years which have passed since the Marines were based there in World War II. Sir Francis Kitts, mayor of Wellington, New Zealand, American Ambassador F. Henning and New Zealand's Deputy Prime Minister, John P. Marshall, all participated in the commemorative services at McKays Crossing, Paekakariki (near Wellington) which was the Marines' WWII camp site.

week. The Princess Anne-Beach Jaycees, smaller of the two chapters, took the occasion to announce its planned activities for the coming year.

The Virginia Beach chapter of the Jaycees held at Bosses Night Monday at the Black Angus Restaurant and also called for nominations for the 1967 First Citizen award.

Activities planned for Princess Anne-Beach Jaycees include:

- Incoming Virginia Beach School Super. E. E. E. Monday attended a meeting in Richmond with the Governor's proposed budget for the meeting of the Virginia public education.
- The meeting of the Virginia Association of School Administrators was called by its president, E. L. Lamberth, superintendent of Norfolk Schools.
- The administrators adopted a modified resolution which not only expressed disapproval of the new money scheduled for schools in the 1968-1970 school year, but also strongly urged the Governor to reconsider and to propose substantial additional funding for the General Assembly's service and education in Virginia Beach.
- In addition to briefing from the Governor's Committee chairman, the award will be presented at a banquet on Feb. 27. Nominations for First Citizen will be sent to First Citizen Committee, 1613 City Park, Va.

One of the big problems in locating the missile once it has been launched, particularly during daytime raids. First you must determine if the missile has your name on it, and then you have to out-manuever it much in the same manner as an enemy aircraft. Armed with Russian knowhow, the North Vietnam ground runners launch air missiles that strike with great accuracy. There is no such thing as a low flying aircraft getting away. Strangely enough, high altitudes also run an increased margin of risk from the surface to air missiles. The Navy has learned, through costly experience, the most likely "safe bombing" altitude it is rated "classified."

Once during a briefing session our group was shown a motion picture film, taken by a helicopter, of an actual bombing raid over North Vietnam. It was made in color and is something I won't soon forget. In one scene

'Hardtimes' Entertains Ocean Park Club

"Hardtimes" Hunt, well-known and out spoken mayor of Oyster, Va., added just the right touch of gaiety to what was already a gay evening when Ocean Park Womens Club members entertained their husbands on Valentine Day with a dinner at the Commodore Country Club.

Mrs. L.E. Quackenbush, club president, made her first public appearance (in a wheel chair) since breaking her knee cap on the ice last month.

Hunt, who was introduced by Mrs. Charles Burlage, told the group that he controls Oyster by insulting the local people "until they pull together--against me."

He also said that Virginia Beach is lucky to have the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel approach within its boundaries. He said he thinks Oyster should annex Northampton County so the northern bridge-tunnel approach will be in Oyster.

On a more serious note he commented that "I get a great deal of satisfaction in liking people."

Downing Strikes at Apathy

Patriotism mixed with a liberal dose of fellowship was the keynote of the local observance of the 100th birthday anniversary of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Friday night at Bow Creek Golf and Country Club.

U.S. Rep. Thomas N. Downing who spoke after dinner, told the Elks of Virginia Beach Lodge 2268 and their wives that "these are tortuous times for all Americans. Times that try Men's souls". If there was ever a time for patriotism it is now.

He said he had not seen Washington so gloomy and tense since 1962 when the Russians blockaded Berlin.

"But it is the heartbreak of Southeast Asia and Vietnam that casts its pall over the nation's capitol," Downing said. "The hijacking of the 'Pueblo' was an act of piracy and war which threw this country into humiliation. And there is the frustration of a seeming stalemate in South Vietnam where nearly 600,000 of America's finest are fighting their hearts out. We have the finest weapons, training, complete supremacy of air and sea--and yet no visible successes."

He then quoted the famous words of Stephen Decatur, who in 1816 while speaking in Norfolk said, "My Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations, may she always be right; but my country, right or wrong."

He went on to say that the young Americans in Vietnam know what they are fighting for. "They know, if we do not, that this country has obligations that communism is the greatest threat to democracy--unless it is our own apathy; that communism has 'concerned' itself with nearly two-thirds of the earth's surface.

"At what point do we say 'Stop! You have gone far enough!' South Vietnam? The Philippines? Australia? San Francisco or Richmond.

"Every American has the constitutional right to criticize the course of the ship of state. But for God's sake, don't rock the boat!"

In a more festive mood, the Elks had an evening of dancing climaxing the 100th birthday was the cutting of a huge cake prepared by Mrs. Ed Keiger, wife of the co-chairman for the evening.

Rep. Downing stands with Elks Exalted Ruler William H. Carnes, left, in front of one of several historical flags on display at the dinner.

McAllen's ALLEY

Teenage Bride Became First Lady

If you think kids are bad today, just check your history book--like back to the days of George and Martha Washington.

Did you know that Martha Dandridge Custis Washington was a teenage bride? She was married (the first time) at the age of 17 to a man 14 years her senior. Not only that, his father objected to the marriage and would not give his consent for two years. Their first home incidentally, was called "The White House."

Their son, Jacky, grew up to be a draft dodger--at least a hold out. He did not enlist in the army (which George Washington was commanding) until the Revolution was four years old. He also married at 19--a 16-year-old girl.

But Patsy, as she was called by her family, had troubles of her own with getting married. After the death of her first husband, Daniel Parke Custis, she became engaged to Washington. Her parents objected to the match because they did not consider him her "social equal."

Patsy was the daughter of a wealthy landowner who lived in New Kent County, Va., near Williamsburg. She had no formal school but was tutored at home.

According to reports, she was short and slight with brown eyes and light brown hair. She danced well and played the spinet.

During the Revolution, Patsy Washington rallied behind her husband, joining him at his camps during the winter of 1776-77 at Cambridge, Mass., 1777-78 during the difficult winter at Valley Forge and 1778-80 at Morristown, N.J. At her instance, her coach was loaded with food and supplies from Mount Vernon which she carried to the troops.

She also organized a women's sewing circle to mend the clothing of the soldiers. Then she arranged a Christmas ball to "encourage re-enlistments."

After the war all she wanted was to settle down at Mount Vernon. No such luck. First she and George adopted their two youngest grandchildren after their son Jacky died. Then George, who said he wanted no public office, was elected president.

While serving as First Lady of the land, Patsy dressed so plainly that "people often mistook her for the family maid." She said she felt like a "state prisoner."

Times have sure changed. Now everybody wants to live in the White House. Either Patsy Washington was very smart, or she just didn't appreciate when she was well off.

P.S. Although Washington's birthday is usually thought of in terms of cherry pie, Pembroke Mall was to serve free pancakes to all comers this morning until 11.

Fashion Show To Be Tomorrow

The third annual Heart Fund Fashion Show, sponsored by the Princess Anne Womens Club, will be held at 8 p.m., Friday at the Civic Center.

Proceeds from the show will go to the Tidewater Heart Association.

Mrs. Charlton and Mrs. Diggs hold two of Mrs. Diggs' many violets.

Violets to Be in Show

Princess Anne African Violet Society will have a show within a show when the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach and Surrounding Areas has its annual flower show in March.

Set up as part of the show will be the African violet show, but it will have a separate schedule, different judges and different chairmen to meet national African Violet Society regulations for a standard show.

"We couldn't give national ribbons without national judges," said Mrs. C. W. Diggs, chairman. And many nationally accredited flower show judges are not African violet judges." Mrs. Nelson Charlton is co-chairman of the show.

This will be the fourth show the African Violet Society has had in conjunction with the council's show. Dates are March 9 from 3 to 9 p.m. and March 10 from 1 to 9:30 p.m. at the Cape Beach and Cabana Club. One ticket is good for both shows.

All classes African violet-31--will be open to the public except one, Mrs. Diggs said. "But they must be clean plants and insect free." Pots should be wrapped in foil with the dull side out, and the exhibitor's name along with the plant's name must be put on the bottom of the pot with adhesive tape. Entries will be accepted at the same times as for the flower show: 3 to 5 p.m. Friday and 8 to 10:30 a.m. Saturday on the 9th and 10th. They will also be removed at the same time as the others.

One class is closed for members only. That will be for sinningias, miniatures, for which the club will give prize.

There will be a sweepstakes winner and a queen of the show. An educational exhibit also will be included.

Classes include single-blossom with sub-classes divided according to color, double-blossoms according to color, classes for Duponts, Amazons and supremes, single and double-blossoms; miniature (four to six inches) and semi-miniature (up to eight inches); variegated foliage plants; all white foliage; seedlings, mutants and gesneriads (tuberous, scaly rhizome and fibrous).

Tickets for the show are now on sale from garden club members for 75 cents. They will be 90 cents at the door.

'This Is Your Life Robert Stenzhorn'

To say that he was overwhelmed would be the understatement of the year.

As the words "This is your life Robert Stenzhorn" rang out over the cafeteria, Stenzhorn, his face a bright red, mounted the stage at Kempville Elementary School where he has been principal for the seven years since the school opened. The PTA planned the special surprise program to show its appreciation.

The PTA unveiled a portrait of Stenzhorn which will be hung in the school, and presented a smaller copy to his wife. Among the city personnel who took part in the program and reception that followed were soon-to-be school supt. E.E. Brickell, asst. supt. M.P. Strickler, Frank Taylor, secondary supervisor; Elmer Tarrall, instruction supervisor; R.H. DeFord Jr., a member of the school board; George Ferrell, city councilman from Kempville Borough; Harold Whitehurst, director of parks and recreation, and many supervisors, principals and teachers from other schools.

Stenzhorn was given one piece of luggage by the PTA and another piece by members of the faculty.

A native of Pennsylvania, Stenzhorn was stationed at Oceana while in the Navy, married and decided to stay here. He first taught the eighth grade at Kempville Junior High and became its assistant principal in 1959 before being named principal of the elementary school in 1960.

Mrs. Dink Morris was chairman of the program, and Mrs. Pat Potter was mistress of ceremonies.

Life memberships in the PTA were presented to Mrs. Dot Radcliffe, Mrs. Lils Hutchison and Brickell.

Radios Needed For Emergencies

Virginia Beach is one of 66 cities throughout the United States, with populations of over 100,000, making use of an unusual program which links residents of the city with police officers in a dual effort to combat crime. The program is called "Community Radio Watch".

The program is a public-service effort on the part of citizens giving support to police by the use of existing two way radio communications. Private citizens, taxi drivers, ham radio operators, and members of business firms having two way radios in their auto's are constantly on the alert for unlawful acts, fires, accidents and/or persons in need of emergency assistance. When such an incident is observed by a member of "Community Radio Watch" the information is relayed to his "base station", and in turn given police by phone. Thus police, or other emergency units, can be dispatched to the scene within moments.

has already been proven in summoning assistance in a large number of accidents, some involving personal injury, a robbery in the Beach Borough last fall and a number of larcenies. According to Terry, plans are being made for establishing a "central dispatchers office" in the city, which would operate around the clock as a focal point for handling "Community Radio Watch" messages. Through the use of this central radio relay point all calls could be "screened" before alerting police, fire, or rescue units, and for the alerting of additional "Watch" members if requested by authorities to assist in any emergency.

The value of the program is further demonstrated by its having been initiated in 382 cities and towns in 47 states. Motorola Radio Corporation has taken over sponsorship of the program, and is bearing the expense of printing literature and membership decals and identification cards.

Kempsville Lists Wins

By Roxie Knight

On Monday, Feb. 12, the Kempsville Grabbers defeated Granby in wrestling, 66-33. Tuesday, the Kempsville Braves scored another basketball victory in a game against Norfolk Catholic, with a score of 73-33.

The Fidelis Tri-Hi-Y, as its February service project, made valentines for all Kempsville teachers and for the children at St. Mary's Infant Home. To raise money, the club is making book racks with the help of the Hi-Y.

Friday night's basketball game against Frederick Military Academy forfeited to Kempsville because the Academy failed to arrive for the game. A dance, which had been scheduled to begin after the game, began early. Admission was $7.50, and the Venerable Bedes were the featured band. The Kempsville Gymnastics team is preparing for a tri-meet with Princess Anne and First Colonial, to be held at First Colonial Feb. 27.

Provisions Made for Disability

New protection for the young worker and his family stands out among the new provisions in the social security law for the disabled.

For young workers who became disabled before they had a chance to work under social security for at least five years, a new change in the disability benefit provisions is a boon.

For benefits to be paid to a disabled worker and his dependents under the old law he needed social security credits for at least five out of the 10 years before becoming disabled. Now, if you become disabled between 24 and 31, you need credits for only half the time between age 21 and the time you became unable to work. If you are disabled before you reach age 24, you need only one and one-half years of work under social security out of a three-year period ending when your disability began.

Benefits under this new provision are first payable for this month. About 100,000 people—disabled workers and their dependents—are eligible. An estimated $70 million in additional benefits will be paid out in the first 12 months.

The new law could mean benefits even for some people who have recovered from their disabling condition, or if they were denied benefits previously because they lacked enough work credits. You should seek more information at your social security office at 220 W. Brambleton Avenue, Norfolk, if you think you qualify.

U. Va. Offers Speech Course

The University of Virginia Hampton Roads Center at Janaf is offering a course titled Education 131, Principles of Speech Correction.

The class will meet from 7 to 9:30 p.m., beginning next Tuesday, on Tuesdays at First Colonial High School. It is free to teachers and is for three hours credit.

The course is an introduction to the field of speech correction dealing with the development of speech, the cause and treatment of simpler deviations from normal speech and clinical and classroom procedures in speech improvement and therapy programs.

For further information, contact the Janaf center at UL 5-2001.

Navy Cited for Program Neighborhood Council Meets

Vice Pres. Hubert H. Humphrey has cited 11 naval commands in the Fifth Naval District for their outstanding support of the President's Youth Opportunity Program last summer, including two in Virginia Beach.

The citations recognized the part these commands played in providing summer employment and recreation for disadvantaged youth.

"The force behind the Youth Opportunity Program was to help economically disadvantaged youth help themselves," said Rear Adm. Reynold D. Hogle, USN, Commandant, Fifth Naval District who was himself cited.

The youths were employed in a variety of occupations, of which many offered "a basis for the development of skills for future careers, according to Admiral Hogle.

Professional counselors were hired to give group and individual guidance and counseling to youths hired under the Youth Opportunity Campaign, the Commandant said.

Each district activity commander who received a commendation was cited for "outstanding accomplishments during the summer of 1967 in supporting the President's program to enhance the opportunities for disadvantaged youth in the fields of employment, education, health and recreation."

"Your effort has helped materially in improving the lives of these young Americans and equipping them for a productive role as responsible citizens of our nation," the citations said.

Recipients of citations in Virginia Beach were: Capt. S.L. Johnson, USN, Commanding Officer, Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek and Capt. A.K. Earnest, USN, Commanding Officer, Oceana Naval Air Station.

Church Head Will Visit

The Rev. Dr. Ben Mohr Herberster, national president of the two-million member United Church of Christ, will be a visitor at Virginia Beach and will present the sermon at Morning Worship services of Lynnhaven Colony United Church, Great Neck Road, on Sunday, Feb. 25.

Dr. Herberster was a key figure in the negotiations which resulted in the formation of the United Church of Christ by union of the Evangelical and Reformed Church and the Congregational Christian Churches. He is presently active in the Consultation on Church Union, in which 10 major denominations are exploring the possibilities of Protestant union. He is a member of the General Board of the National Council of Churches, a member of the executive committee of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, and of the executive council of the International Congregational Council.

He was an accredited visitor to the First Assembly of the World Council of Churches in Amsterdam and a delegate to the Second Assembly in Evanston, Ill., and the Third in New Delhi, India. He has also been named a delegate to the Fourth Assembly, which is to be held later this year in Uppsala, Sweden.

Adm. Hogle Is Speaker

National Brotherhood Week was observed by the clergy of Virginia Beach at a breakfast on Feb. 20 at The Cavalier at which Rear Adm. Reynold D. Hogle, USN, Commandant of the Fifth Naval District, was the principal speaker.

The week of Feb. 18 is observed nationwide as National Brotherhood Week. In Virginia Beach, a committee of the Jaycees worked with the local Brotherhood Chairman, E. V. Slattum, in carrying out the program of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Adm. Hogle, who is a past chairman for National Brotherhood Week, has been closely identified with many military and community programs supporting the objectives of the brotherhood observance.

The Neighborhood Council on Negro Problems will hold its next meeting Tuesday, Feb. 27, at 8 p.m., at Union Kempsville High School.

Guest speakers for the evening will be E. A. Culverhouse, director of personnel for the City of Virginia Beach, and R. O. Rucks, director of the state employment bureau for the city.

Harvey J. Ridinger, field representative for Norfolk's Social Security Administration, talks to Alex Jones about Medicare and Social Security benefits available to him.

Couple Remains Independent

Alex Jones and his wife, of Salem Road, have been married for eight years. And, according to Mrs. Jones, they have "15 or 16 great-grandchildren."

His father died when he was six and he was cared for by his only brother until he was old enough to support himself.

In his younger days, Jones found "eight hours a day was not enough work" for him, and he would work as a carpenter during the day and on his farm at night, often plowing after dark by turning on the headlights of his tractor.

A doctor once told him that if he didn't stop working so hard, he would be a cripple by the time he was 60. But Jones thrived on hard work.

And in 1967, he was hospitalized twice, running up a hospital and medical bill of $2,135. Both Jones and his wife are independent people, who enjoy living by themselves on rural Salem Road. They were reluctant to apply for social security, thinking that it is some sort of charity.

But rather than call on his children to help him with his medical bills, Jones applied for and received $1,932 from Medicare, and is now living on his Social Security payments.

As for Medicare, Jones stated that he would have been paying on his bills a little per month for the rest of his life without it. Jones gave permission for his story to be told in hopes of acquainting others of the help that Medicare and Social Security can be.

Needs of Women Will Be Topic of Statewide Meet

What are the most urgent needs of women in Virginia and what should be done about them?

The answer to that question—at least a good part of it—is expected to be formulated at a statewide conference to be held 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, March 30, at Hotel Jefferson in Richmond.

The Citizens Committee on the Status of Women in Virginia, with individual and organizational memberships, is sponsoring the meeting.

Lt. Gov. Fred G. Pollard will welcome the group. Miss Louise Bernard, former supervisor of distributive education for the State Department of Education, and chairman of the Citizens Committee, has announced the keynote address by Mrs. A. Paul Hartz of Waverly.

Workshops from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. will be conducted on the committee's six areas of concern: education, employment, health, home and community, legal status, and special problems of minority groups.

Miss Guin Hall, Deputy Commissioner, New York State Department of Commerce, will speak following the luncheon.

In the afternoon, summaries of the workshops will be given and discussed, with Mrs. J.A. Keen, chairman of the committee's steering committee, as moderator.

Solutions Offered For Snorers

There are solutions short of mayhem to deal with the drum-splitting snorer.

Speech pathologist Marcus H. Boulware, researcher at Tennessee State A & I University, details the solutions in his encompassing "Theory of Compensative Resonance." Among these:

- * "Wear ear plugs;
- * "Empty sleep-inducing devices;
- * "Develop a positive attitude toward the problem of the snoring spouse to enhance marital harmony;
- * "Train the subconscious mind to reject offensive acoustic snoring stimuli as it rejects various ambient noises amidst which one sleeps comfortably;
- * "Communicate by telephone from separate rooms after retirement in bed."

Boulware maintains that one can cure snoring by training "one's subconscious mind to keep the mouth closed and the tongue forward in the mouth," but this method requires faith in the procedure. "The skeptic is doomed to failure before he starts."

The speech expert pools the notion that snoring was the cause of the decimation of the Transylvanian army by the Tartars in 1604 or the cause of the defeat of the Christians by the Turks in the Battle of Nicopolis in 1396.

"It is our hope," Miss Bernard said, "that plans can be made for a long-ranged, coordinated program for future growth and service for Virginia women."

This awareness of women's needs is not new.

Approximately 30 statewide organizations banded together in 1964 for the first organized effort to improve the status of Virginia women. Their primary objective was accomplished when Gov. Albert S. Harrison appointed a State Commission on the Status of Women in February 1965.

Its report and recommendations in many areas were presented to Gov. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. in January 1966. Each reporting sub-committee strongly recommended that some kind of action group on the status of women be continued.

Registrations for the conference may be made with Miss Mary Wells, treasurer, P.O. Box 5242, Richmond, Va. 23220.

Miss Hand Is Engaged

Mrs. Robert E. Hand of Arlington, Va., announces the engagement of her daughter, Susan Elizabeth, to Gerald Fred Duncan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Duncan of Los Altos, Cal.

Miss Hand is the daughter of the late Lt. Col. Robert E. Hand and granddaughter of the late Col. and Mrs. Paul H. Herman of Virginia Beach.

She is a graduate of the Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia. Mr. Duncan is a graduate of San Jose College.

A March wedding is planned.

Club Plans Sale

The Pocahontas Garden Village Club will hold a bake sale at the Princess Anne Court House, tomorrow.

Cumin seed gives exotic aroma to both the stuffing and sauce of these appetizing beef rollups. It's the kind of dish men like.

Cumin Adds 'Spice' to Recipes

A close study of spice shelves in different parts of this huge country gives further proof that the United States is a "melting pot" with considerable regional differences in cooking and seasoning.

Let's take cumin as an example of spice use around the country. It is a great favorite in Spanish and Latin-American cuisines so popular in the western part of our country. "Comino" gives enticing aroma to rice, beans, potatoes, plantains and sub-tropical vegetables.

Cumin was brought to Spain from its eastern Mediterranean homeland by the Moors, then carried to Latin-America by the early Spanish explorers. Centuries ago cumin was taken from the Nile Valley to Arabia, India, and China. It is popular in the cookery of the Near East and no Indian curry would taste right without its admixture of cumin.

The average person may think he's never eaten cumin, but he has, if he's a lover of chili con carne or any other dishes seasoned with chili powder. Cumin is as important to a good chili powder as it is to its oriental cousin, curry powder. In addition to these blends, cumin is used subtly in all kinds of commercial meats, pickles, sausages, soups and stews.

Use the whole seed in long-cooking dishes such as stews, braised meats and pickling liquids. Ground cumin should be used in baked goods; rice; stuffed, baked potatoes; hamburgers; meat loaves or stuffings. Since this is one of the bolder spices, use between one-fourth and one-half teaspoon of cumin in main dishes planned for six servings.

To show you what cumin can do for a dish, do try these recipes from the test kitchens of the American Spice Trade Association.

These Stuffed Beef Rollups with their subtle seasoning of ground cumin seed are delightful party fare.

Military Wives' Club Notes

By Mary Wright

Vicki Lynn Umphlett, the 14-year-old daughter of retired CPO Henry C. Umphlett, was the object of a fund drive last week at Little Creek Amphibious Base.

Vicki Lynn is a victim of nephritis (Bright's Disease) and was expected to die without the use of a costly hemodialysis machine, which would take over the job of cleansing the bloodstream not being done by Vicki's kidneys.

People from all over Tidewater have rallied to help the Umphletts financially, and last weekend on Friday and Saturday nights, the Little Creek CPO Wives' Club sponsored a fund drive, and collected $140 to add to the Vicki Lynn Assistance Fund.

Mrs. S.H. McCarroll, president of the wives club, said that all donations can be sent to the Fund, at post office box 10066, Norfolk, Va., 23513.

Vicki Lynn and her mother have been in San Francisco two weeks, while Vicki Lynn has undergone surgery on her leg to prepare her to use the machine. They will be in California about another month, while she learns to operate the machine, according to Mrs. McCarroll.

AT FT. STORY

Wine will be the main bill of fare at the March 7 luncheon of the Ft. Story Officers' Wives Club.

Mrs. Kenneth Blunt, wives club president, said the wine-luncheon is an annual affair. It is being given by the Taylor Wine Company, who will serve sherry during the social half-hour before lunch and wine with the luncheon, which will begin at 12:30.

The luncheon will be followed by a program on wines, from the growing of the grapes, to which wine is appropriate for what course.

USS Wright (CC-2) officers' wives held a sweetheart banquet Friday, Feb. 16, at the Ft. Story Officers' Club.

Cocktails were served at 7 p.m., followed by dinner at eight. Music for the evening was provided by a live band.

Administrative Department wives, in conjunction with Medical and Dental Department wives, hosted the banquet.

A Bell Telephone representative will be the featured guest at the USS Wright Enlisted Wives' Club meeting Monday, Feb. 26, at the Ship and Shore Wives' Club Building at the Norfolk Naval Base.

The theme of the meeting will be flower arranging and the preparation of new and different conversational pieces for the home.

French Salon Sets Meeting

The next meeting of the French Salon of the Woman's Club will be on Sunday, Feb. 25, at 3 p.m. A talk will be given in French on "The Creoles of New Orleans" by the Baron Jean de Lustrac. The Baron, a native Frenchman, has lived for many years in Norfolk with his wife, the former Helen Reed of Norfolk, returning for frequent visits to France. He has been a patron of the Feldman Quartette, and of other musical events in the community, and is a student of French influence in Colonial days.

The French Salon is open to all interested in the conversational use of the French language. Students and teachers of French are cordially invited to attend and remain for the social hour which follows the lecture. The Salon is sponsored by the Woman's Club, and by Pierre Schmitt, French Consul in Norfolk. Mrs. Bertha Penning Taylor is chairman and founder.

The meeting will be at the Woman's Club on Fairfax Avenue, Norfolk.

Artist Denys Being an Artist

Betty Crawford is a woman with short-cropped blond hair who doesn't call herself an artist, even though she won second prize at the Virginia Beach Art Association show at the Civic Center two weeks ago.

"Nowadays, everybody who picks up a pencil calls himself an artist," she said, and trotted across 20th Street at Arctic Avenue to dump the contents of her car ashtray in a nearby garbage can.

She glanced at the Beach Borough Fire Department and its fire trucks on the corner, then chuckled and said "I don't want to start a fire here." Taking up bags of seashells and driftwood under her arm, she led the way to the second floor of the Volunteer Rescue Squad's building, where she teaches a class in watercolors every Monday morning.

A graduate of the Memphis Academy of Art and a student at New York's Art Students' League, Mrs. Crawford came to the Beach five years ago. Since that time, she has taught classes at the YWCA and for the past two years has been working with art classes for the city's Department of Parks and Recreation. On Wednesdays, she teaches oil painting at the Activity Center.

In comparing working in oils and watercolors, Mrs. Crawford explained that with oil paints the painter has "more control; it stays where you put it on the canvas. Watercolors are harder to correct, or to change, once you've made, a brush stroke.

"But with watercolors, you can always just tear off the sheet and start again. And when you do get something, it's fresh pristine."

One of Mrs. Crawford's students, Beverly Crockford, who took first place at the recent Art Association show for the best work depicting Virginia Beach, voiced this same opinion almost verbatim. Mrs. Crockford, who has worked in oils for three or four years, has been working with watercolors only about a year.

She calls the difficulties of painting with watercolors "part of their interest, the spontaneity and fresh look."

Golden Age To Hear About Social Security

The Golden Age Clubs of Virginia Beach, under the direction of the Recreation Department, are sponsoring a meeting on changes in Social Security at 8 p.m. March 4 at St. Stephens Church of God in Christ on Birdneck Road.

H.J. Ridinger from the Social Security Bureau will be guest speaker. A question and answer period will follow, and the public is invited.

The art class includes all levels, said Mrs. Crawford, from women who have never worked with paints before to some fairly experienced painters. "I like a mixed group," she went on. "The beginners can see what a finished work really looks like."

The classes run for six-week periods, "and then, if there's enough interest, we go on for another six weeks," said Mrs. Crawford.

Registration for the next six-week period of classes is Monday at the Rescue Squad building. More information can be obtained from the department of Parks and Recreation. Classes will begin the following Monday, March 4.

PTA to Have Phys. Ed. Demonstration

Another phase of Virginia Hall will be shown at W.T. Cooke's PTA meeting Monday, Feb. 26.

Virginia Hall will become a gymnasium under the leadership of Lou Bredlow, physical education director for W.T. Cooke and Linkhorn Park schools. 100 children of W.T. Cooke will present a program demonstrating the many activities offered in the physical education programs such as marching, exercises, relays and tumbling.

Valentine Gift

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Haas of Baltimore, Md., announce the birth of their second child, first daughter, Emily Frances, on Feb. 14 at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Mrs. Haas is the former Linda Geiger, daughter of Mrs. Francis J. Geiger of Atlantic Avenue.

Betty Crawford, art teacher for the department of Parks and recreation, arranges a still life of shells and driftwood for her watercolor students to paint.

Womans Club Gives Awards

It was a day of rewards for arts and crafts at the meeting of the Princess Anne Woman's Club at the Pine Tree Inn when entries were judged to be entered in competition with other clubs at the Tidewater District meeting at the Chamberlin Hotel on March 19.

Walter Thrift, local professional artist, awarded ribbons in the arts category to the following: Mrs. P.E. Woolard, a blue, red and gold in Professional Oils, Professional Watercolors and Professional Graphics; Mrs. T.J. Follary (Artist Class Oils) red and gold; Mrs. J. Douglas Wilson (Artist Class Oils) blue and red; Mrs. D.L. Van de Wiele (Novice Class Watercolor) blue, red and gold; Mrs. D.L. Van de Wiele (Novice Class Oils) blue; Mrs. P.C. Hartman (Novice Class Oils) gold.

The Hallmark winners, a class open to high school student artists sponsored by the club, was judged by George and Ruth Laasko from the Studio Gallery. The winners were Mary Ann Haines (Cox) blue for Watercolor and Ink; Valerie Baroody (Cox) red for Pen and Ink; Loy Clement (Bayside) gold for oil; Honorable mentions went to two Bayside students, George Kello for his Paper Collage and Vicki Hendricks for Mixed Media.

Among the winners in the crafts, judged by Mrs. Roy Allen and Mrs. Lucy Priest were Mrs. W.H. Graham (knitting) red and blue; Mrs. F.H. Stribley (knitting) yellow; Mrs. J.E. Garrett (knitting) red; Mrs. M. B. Zoll (knitting) red; Mrs. John Adams (miscellaneous crafts) blue and red; Mrs. T. J. Follary (ceramics) two blues.

On the program was Mrs. LeRoy Ober who spoke on her recent visit to the Holy Land. Charles Oliver, director of the Virginia Beach Civic Chorus, furnished music for the program.

The club voted to give a scholarship to a male nurse at Norfolk General Hospital, and 10 per cent of the 1968 proceeds from the Antiques Show and Sale will go to Hospitality House.

Mrs. P.E. Woolard is the club's chairman of the Arts division and Mrs. P.C. Hartman chairman of the Crafts Division.

African violets are among our most widely grown and most cherished house plants. Within the past few years, hundreds of new varieties have been developed.

When attempting to raise these, one must remember only a few pointers:

They do best when out of direct sunlight; in direct sun, the leaves will often burn. Rotate the pot regularly; the plant will be drawn toward the source of light, thus making rotation necessary.

Do not get water on the leaves, thus avoiding a leaf scorch. Be sure that water which is used is room temperature. Water from the bottom; after the soil has become moist, remove the plant from the watering container.

Maintain in a temperature of 60 degrees to 70 degrees. Be sure the soil does not bake. Keep plants away from a radiator or other direct source of heat.

Coffee Is Worldwide Eye-Opener

As the sun rises in different parts of the globe, it awakens people—and their appetites. The first human fuel for the day may be a single cup of bracing coffee. Or it may be a cup of coffee plus a fruit, a roll or eggs and sausage. It may even be a multi-course affair with everything from coffee to meat and then some! But whether a roll or a miniature banquet is the accompaniment, hot coffee is almost invariably enjoyed by people around the world after the long night's fast.

Though many North American city-dwellers are known for coffee-only breakfasts, our Latin American neighbors have a bit more substance to the morning menu. Colombian housewives follow fruit juice with Arepa—a patty cake made of corn kernels prepared like hominy, then mixed with cheese and baked in a red-hot charcoal oven.

Pan de Yuca is another Colombian favorite, comparable to our toast or English muffins. These are little rolls of yuca flour, baked fresh every day and served hot with coffee. Morning coffee in Latin American coffee-growing countries is mixed with hot milk, making the famous cafe con leche, or cafe com leite as it is called in Portuguese.

Breakfast in Brazil might center around a steaming bowl of Papa de Milho, a nourishing corn cereal flavored with milk, cinnamon and honey. Another popular Brazilian cereal is made of oats which are cooked and blended with egg yolks. Cafe com leite, or media, a half and half combination of dark coffee and steaming milk, is almost always on the menu. On occasion, black coffee is sipped with breakfast, but the half-and-half version is more popular.

Cafe con leche is also an important part of breakfast in Mexico, and so is the omnipresent kernel of corn in all its many forms. Corn is such an integral part of Mexican culture and history that the ancient Mayas believed that people were constructed of it, husks and all.

And in the array of tortillas and breads appear Mexican breakfast tables. The breads are not only nutritious and tasty, but they have fascinating shapes with names to match. There are shell-shaped breads called conchas and tie-shaped ones named, appropriately, corbates.

Breakfast in Mexico, as in the United States, range from quick cereal and coffee repasts to a complete meal of eggs with tomato and fried bananas. Or you may feast on frijoles and bistec, known to us as beans and steak. Some luscious-sounding Mexican egg dishes for Sundays, holidays, and ranch-style dining call for peppers, sausage, cheese and avocado sauce—great ideas for glorifying the versatile egg!

Often, cosmopolitan breakfasts in the United States closely resemble the continental breakfasts of France and Italy. Petit déjeuner in Paris is a little morning repast—black coffee with milk (cafe au lait) and the famous flaky croissant. The French and Italians have a special way of preparing cafe au lait. Two tiny pots are placed on the table—one filled with hot coffee, the other with hot milk. The steaming liquids are poured simultaneously into the cup. The result is a frothy, incomparably delicious coffee-milk blend.

If you've ever had the pleasure of breakfasting in Britain, you know that the first meal of the day can be grand as well as petit. A hungry Anglo-Saxon greets the morning with fruit or porridge, finnan haddock with boiled potatoes, grilled tomatoes and mushrooms, crisp toast with marmalade and at least a couple of cups of coffee.

Holland and the Scandinavian countries also believe in hearty morning fare. The big coffee-pot on a Dutch table will inevitably be surrounded by an assortment of cold cuts and cheese, thin black pumpernickel, fruit breads and a bevy of preserves.

Austrians and Germans love breakfast with such a passion that they frequently have two. The early breakfast in Austria consists of coffee, brewed by the French drip method, and sweet, shiny rolls. Coffee is enjoyed with milk in varying amounts or with a dollop of whipped cream. Second breakfast begins about ten in the morning. This time the menu calls for eggs, sausage or a small dish of goulash.

Besides, tests have shown that people who have a morning meal are less likely to overeat at lunch.

An authentic breakfast with fruit juice, cereal, eggs, meat, sweet cakes and coffee was once an all-American tradition. Perhaps the big breakfast will make a comeback soon and the cup of morning coffee will be in good company again.

Armed Forces Fight 'Our' War Overseas

By Jack Harris

During the past six weeks I have been my pleasure to write a series of articles, printed exclusively in the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN.

These articles dealt primarily with the United States Navy, the many problems facing us in the Western Pacific and how they are being solved.

The material for the articles was gathered during a 10-day trip that started in Alameda, Calif., and ended in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. The agenda called for a four-day stay on the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise and a four-day visit to the various naval installations in and around Pearl Harbor.

Our group, composed of 15 executives from the various news media, were the guests of the Navy Department. The purpose was to gather first-hand information and, if we so desired, report back to the people in our communities.

This tour is the most exciting and productive I have ever taken part in. We met some wonderful men, officers and enlisted personnel, dedicated to a job even in the face of mass confusion and bitterly voiced opinions here at home regarding United States participation in the Vietnam war.

We were exposed to the most modern weapons of war, so awesome and devastating they defy description. The USS Enterprise, 25-stories high, four football fields long, is powered by eight nuclear reactors that generate maneuverability unmatched by ships one third the size.

The Enterprise is not only the world's largest warship but also the world's fastest. The feats and capabilities of this huge floating island are well known to the enemy. Russia has announced plans for the building of aircraft carriers. So has Red China, but theirs is a catch-up game. Uncle Sam has the lead and has other carriers on the drawing board.

The crew of the Enterprise is almost hand-picked, with a heavy accent on electronic experts. America's young manhood responds to the challenge of sailing such a highly technical warship. Reenlistments on the Enterprise are 19 percent as opposed to five percent in other Navy areas.

The cost of training men to man nuclear powered aircraft carriers and nuclear submarines is high. Navy officials insist the end result is well worth the tax dollar expenditure. There are those in Washington who say "No."

A part of that confusion can be traced to the news coverage of the "doves" who want us out and the "hawks" who want us in. And what can be more frustrating to a fighting man than to know he represents the world's most powerful country, fighting a fourth rate opponent and still not winning. Frustrating, you bet it is! Civil rights marchers, draft card burners and bearded hippies are not exactly morale builders. When you are thousands of miles away from home and every time you step out of a foxhole some guy takes a shot at you, it's small wonder that these boys want to be damned sure what they are fighting for is worth it!

This, then, is the conclusion of our story, a tale of the men and the ships who watch for us in the Western Pacific. Perhaps, along the way, we have not reported in a completely factual manner. In many instances we may have seemed almost critical of a Navy that we rate, frankly, as "the greatest."

During our tour we saw the largest assemblage of war crafts and weapons ever devised by man: a giant aircraft carrier capable of sailing for years without touching shore; a floating airfield serving as home port to planes that fly faster than sound and carry bombs that could literally set the globe on fire. And we sailed in a submarine that could fire atomic weapons while submerged, with a range of 2,600 miles and the accuracy of hitting a football field.

But in the face of this awesome spectacle, we also saw the face of America's fighting man. It was the same face that has served our nation before, on the road to Paris, Guam, Iwo Jima, Korea. The lips are tight, the eyes glint with steel, the skin is drawn tight. He is old before his time. He fights by force rather than choice, he's there because somebody has to do the dirty work. He wants no part of it but he is a part of it. He gives much and asks little in tax dollars and in lives. "Please, dear God, make my sacrifice worth while. Make this the last one."

Someday these boys, the lucky ones, will be coming back. Let's all try to get our house in shape for the homecoming!

This reporter does not feel qualified to voice an opinion in either direction. Adm. U.S. Grant Sharp, Commander in Chief, Pacific told our group America already is engaged in World War III, an electronic war. There is no doubt but what our forces in the Western Pacific are prepared along this line.

In the air, on the sea and under the sea, our war ships are equipped for "push button" response. The responsibility of planned battle actions have shifted from the individual to the computer light. The decision of when to use that computer still rests with man.

This so called "push button war" is not cheap. American taxpayers are well aware that this by far is our most costly. The electronic war does not save lives. It produces new ways to kill even more. Because of the inability of nations to communicate, the citizens must continue to pay the bill, in tax dollars and in lives. This appears to be a war of three objectives. The electronic area is by far the most costly in monetary terms and in the training of men. The diplomatic war, the war of words or brain washing in Vietnam if you will, is perhaps the most challenging. The hand to hand combat in Vietnam is the real heartbreaker. We're winning but we're losing... lives.

The electronic phase of war is costly, far beyond the comprehension of the average American citizen. Forget it you will the millions that are poured into the building of jets, nuclear subs and nuclear aircraft carriers. Just look at the cost of training men to man these highly technical ships.

For example, it costs an estimated $150,000 to train a pilot to fly a jet fighter. These fellows cannot be called "career" men. A big majority put their hitch and then resign to pursue a safer and more lucrative career—like flying with a commercial airline.

The loss of highly skilled jet fighters and electronic specialists is not restricted as a Navy problem. The Army and the Air Force are having their headaches, too.

While on the Enterprise we had many "frank" talks with jet pilots regarding the extremely low percentage of reenlistments in their ranks. These fellows are sharp, most are college grads. Theirs is a commodity in high demand, particularly with the explosion growth in commercial airlines.

The average Navy jet fighter, perhaps rightly, seems to feel that once he has flown the required number of missions or months he has paid off, in service to his country and for the training he was afforded. Most are looking ahead to greener pastures, flying commercial with more time at home, more pay and less risk.

Not even the Navy's most brilliant 4-star admirals can cope with the problem of reenlistment. It is a problem faced in all branches of the armed forces, a never ending battle of competing with American industry. This is one battle the armed forces are losing.

There was a time when the old "you owe it to your country" plea worked wonders for reenlistment. Not so today. It's not that their loyalty to country is any less than those of other days; rather it is a sense of confusion and frustration.

Men of the Cuban "26 de Julio" retrieving the damaged life boat, in which three men attempted to reach the Virginia Beach shoreline, after it repeatedly had been swamped. Upper left, the Cuban skipper (L) Capt. Ricardo Puri, and his first mate, as he explained the incident to men of the

Questions on Ship Unanswered

It may never be known what happened to three men who apparently sought political asylum during a maritime drama approximately eight miles off the coast of Virginia Beach Tuesday.

The men apparently lowered a life boat from the Cuban "26 de Julio", after holding the ship's captain and crew prisoner, in an attempt to reach the U.S. mainland. Men on board the Coast Guard cutter Point Brown reportedly attempted to reach the men after they had been thrown into the sea when their small boat was repeatedly swamped by the "26 de Julio".

The position of the Cuban vessel prevented the Point Brown from reaching the men or observing if the men were picked up by the Cuban crew.

Although the Point Brown searched the area, and located debris which apparently came from the life boat, there was no sign of the men, or any bodies. During efforts to place the money and various supplies including a quantity of drugs in their alleged "asylum plot". The skipper also said the men had been retrieved from the sea and were in good condition and said he was heading for the open sea.

Authorities at Coast Guard headquarters in Portsmouth told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN men on board the cutter Point Brown did everything they could, but were governed by how much they could do since the drama was taking place outside the territorial limits of the United States.

Another aspect of the drama is that the action on board the "26 de Julio" presumably amounted to "mutiny on the high seas" and therefore placed the skipper of the Cuban vessel in full command of correcting the situation by whatever means he decided upon. States, and the matter would have been potentially a dangerous international incident.

Local Men Seek Manager's Job

Hatchett

Mayor Frank A. Dusch has appointed a five-man committee of city councilmen to screen candidates for the position of City Manager, which will be vacated July 1 by W. Russell Hatchett, 65.

Hatchett made formal announcement of his retirement plans at a Council meeting Monday. The news was not totally unexpected; last May Hatchett indicated he was thinking of retiring.

The screening committee includes John W. McComb, chairman, George R. Ferrell, G. Dewey Simmons, Lawrence E. Marshall, and J. Curtis Payne.

Three local men active in city government have already been named as Hatchett's possible successors: Assistant City Manager Roger M. Scott, Urban Affairs coordinator Richard J. Webbon and City Finance Director Giles G. Dodd.

Scott, 31, who begins his fourth year of city employment tomorrow, is a graduate of Mars Hill College and Virginia Tech, from which he was graduated with a degree in municipal administration. He was assistant planning engineer in Roanoke and assistant city manager at Albany, Ga., before coming to Virginia Beach.

(See "Manager" p. 2)

Many Groups Honor Frank Cox

It's been quite a week for retiring School Superintendent Frank W. Cox, and he may need to retire to recuperate and reduce. Since Sunday he has been the guest of honor at no less than three dinners, two luncheons and several meetings. His retirement becomes official tomorrow and E. E. Brickell takes over the position Cox held for almost 35 years. Cox came to Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County after serving as a principal in Giles County right out of college. He was principal of the Oceana High School for five years before being named superintendent on July 1, 1933.

Sunday evening some 700 persons attended a testimonial dinner honoring the outgoing superintendent, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Education Association. Mrs. Frances Sachon, president of the organization and all school officials put together the life story of Cox and presented a pageant entitled "Portrait of a Great Man." It included speeches by those he had worked with over the years and musical entertainment.

Besides, local dignitaries, among those in attendance were other superintendents, past and present, Dr. Davis Y. Paschall, president of William and Mary, and Dr. Woodrow Wilkerson, state superintendent of public instruction.

Assistant Supt. M. P. Stricker was the main speaker of the evening, and Brickell was master of ceremonies. The association presented Cox a portrait of himself at the dinner.

Cox was also guest of honor at dinners given school boards, past and present, and another by the PTA's of Virginia Beach. The luncheons were given by the secretaries and other school administration employees. Another "this is your life" program was given by the PTA Council Wednesday.

Cox, taking it all in stride, said he was ready to retire but that he would never forget the "challenges, responsibilities and satisfactions of more than a third of a century."

Downing Reveals Contents Of Special House Report For Ending Vietnam War

First District Congressman Thomas N. Downing, speaking Tuesday night to a meeting of the Tidewater Association of Home Builders, took the opportunity to reveal the contents of a special House subcommittee report, aimed at ending the war in Vietnam.

Downing, who attended the meeting at Bow Creek Golf and Country Club, to receive the Public Official Award for 1967 from the home builders for distinguished service to the home building industry in Virginia, departed from his scheduled topic to talk about what he called "a very serious matter."

"I place my faith in the President," said Downing, concerning the conduct of the war. "He has access to the most and the best information."

The Congressman added that the President must listen to his advisors, but said he believes President Johnson has been given "bad advice, no matter how sincere."

Downing said that a year ago Chairman Mendel Rivers of the House Committee on Armed Services realized that Congress did not have a true picture of our national defense and that he named a special subcommittee to make an investigation with all the authority they needed.

The chairman of the subcommittee was Second District Rep. Porter Hardy of Portsmouth, whom Downing called "a relentless investigator." Downing pointed out that the subcommittee was made up of experienced, senior members of the House.

and that they were more interested in military and tactical opinions than in civilian opinions.

He said they talked with generals, the joint chiefs, and in Vietnam talked with those directly involved in the fight. Downing said he believed they had arrived "at the truth," and added that the subcommittee is now engaged in a new study of the Middle East.

Downing called their investigation, the full text of which could not be released publicly for security reasons, one of the most important documents on the war, and noted that it received only limited coverage by the press both in Washington and nationally.

The Congressman said, "The report sets forth a clear course of action for this nation. I wholeheartedly endorse it and recommend it as our course of action."

The summation of the report, in 15 points was releasable publicly, and Downing read them to the group.

They included these remarks: "Only if our military is permitted to make maximum use of our assets can the war in Vietnam be brought to a speedy and successful conclusion." "The theory of gradual escalation in the use of power

Courts Will Move Tomorrow--Maybe

Moving day into the new Virginia Beach Courts Building at Princess Anne is scheduled for tomorrow, after many delays caused by bad weather, changes in construction plans and changes in utility lines.

The latest extension was granted the primary contractor on Feb. 11 without penalty. The building was at one time scheduled to be completed early in January, but this time it really is finished.

"At least, that's the latest information I have," said Assistant City Manager Roger Scott, when queried about the completion date. "As far as I know they are supposed to be open for business over there Monday morning. They'll be moving all weekend."

Most of the furniture for the building is new, and there was some question concerning whether the furniture would arrive on time. Provisions had been made to borrow furniture from the Dome if it did not arrive in time.

Decorating for new offices begins Monday in the old courts.

Within a week, Congressman Thomas N. Downing's Virginia Beach office will be ready in space in the old Municipal Court.

The Congressman's aide here, Mrs. Barbara Simiele will be in Washington all week working in Downing's office there but will man the partially decorated new office on March 11. The new court building was begun early last spring.

Sen. Byrd To Arrive For Dinner

The Virginia Beach Jaycees "First Citizen" banquet will be held tonight at the Black Angus Restaurant in Virginia Beach. The principle speaker of the evening will be U. S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Jr. Mrs. Lucille Clark, who was named two weeks ago, will officially receive the "First Citizen" award.

Sen. Byrd will arrive at Norfolk Municipal Airport at 5:05 this afternoon. He will be greeted there by Miss Virginia Beach, Barbara Chullin, Democratic National Committeewoman Sidney S. Kellam and members of the Virginia Beach Jaycees First Citizen Committee.

Prior to the banquet, the Senator will hold a brief press conference at the restaurant. The dinner begins at 7 p.m.

The new courts building is ready for occupancy this weekend.

City May Get Green Run Funds

Reports on Virginia Beach applications for Federal funds for two proposed recreation areas were heard at Tuesday's Parks and Recreation Commission meeting.

According to Richard J. Webbon, city coordinator of urban affairs, representatives from the Department of Housing and Urban Development have reacted favorably to the city's application, for additional Open Space funds to finance half the cost of the Green Run project.

HUD has turned down the city's second application, for additional Open Space funds to pay half the cost of land bought at Little Island near Skyway.

Webbon met with HUD officials Feb. 20, at the office of Thomas N. Downing, representative from Virginia's second Congressional District. Virginia Beach purchased the 534-acre Green Run tract from Norfolk in July, 1967, for $640,800.

At a Feb. 12 City Council meeting, City Manager W. Russell Hatchett pointed out that the Green Run area may be used for purposes other than recreation--an airport, fair grounds, vocational school, for example--which could make the application for federal funds questionable.

The Sandbridge area, Hatchett continued, would never be used for any purpose other than recreation. At that meeting, he asked for and was given permission to reapply for HUD funds for Sandbridge.

At Tuesday's Commission meeting, Commission chairman Maury Rignato strongly criticized the local news media for over-emphasizing the recent Virginia Beach narcotics probe.

"Only a fraction of the young people" were involved in the investigation, said Rignato. For the 19 or so questioned, he went on, there are five or six thousand young people being provided wholesome recreational outlets.

In additional business, the commission heard a report from Marion Wrenn on the city's public works department plans for a water-oriented park at Kemp's Landing at Kempsville.

Recreation director Harold Whitehurst was authorized to study the possibilities of using land offered by the Aragona Community Recreation Center as a city playground, and it was noted that 800 people are enrolled in the Commission-sponsored recreation classes.

Supreme Governor Visits Moose

Aragona Moose Lodge #1198 on S. Lynhaven Road, played host last Saturday night to George R. Reilly, Supreme Governor Loyal Order of Moose, during his first visit to the city of Virginia Beach.

A delegation of Virginia Moose Association officers, lead by State Director Charlie Brice, along with officers and members of the Aragona, Virginia Beach and Norfolk Moose Lodges gathered for the evening to pay tribute to Gov. Reilly.

A class of 61 new candidates were initiated in the Loyal Order of Moose in honor of Reilly. The class was composed of men who were recently enrolled by members of the Moose Lodges of Aragona, Virginia Beach and Norfolk.

The City of Virginia Beach also joined in paying homage to Reilly. Assistant City Manager Roger Scott presented Reilly with a pin bearing a replica of the old Cape Henry Lighthouse, which represents the official emblem of the City of Virginia Beach.

During his brief address to members of the new class, Reilly spoke with pride of the respect all Loyal Moose have for their country and the American flag. He pointed to the number of young men and women raised in the "Child City" of Mooseheart, Ill., serving in the armed forces of our country, and those who have given their lives in this service.

Reilly also spoke of how proud he was that, to his knowledge, no graduate of the "Child City" had ever been a member of any group of young people which may have demonstrated in various parts of the nation against United States policies. He specifically pointed out such acts as draft card burning, civil rights demonstrations, and reminded all on hand for the evening to continue promoting respect for the American flag which he felt was beginning to lag.

A gathering of 327 guests on hand for the evening heard Reilly tell of his forthcoming visit to Moose Haven, outside Jacksonville, Fla., for the opening of a new medical center. He said, "It will be the greatest thrill of my life to see our senior citizens receiving the kind of care they deserve." The center was constructed at a cost of $2.5 million dollars raised through personal donations.

Auto Firm May Open At Beach

A new automobile dealership may be coming to Virginia Beach sometime in the near future.

A reliable source told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that a lease is being negotiated through the Norfolk real estate firm of Goodman-Segar-Hogan with Phillips Oldsmobile for property at Chinese Corner.

The land in question lies on the northwest corner of the intersection of Virginia Beach Boulevard and Witchcock Road and is owned by the estate of the late Elias Codd. The land is already zoned for commercial use and only a use permit for the automobile dealership would be necessary, however no application has been sent to the Virginia Beach Planning Commission.

Phillips Oldsmobile Inc. now has new and used car facilities in Norfolk at 931 Little Creek Road.

ations of men and women who are members of the Loyal Order of Moose. The staging of a dinner dance after the ceremony resembled "St. Patrick's Day" in February as a further tribute to Reilly's Irish background. The band played a medley of songs of the "Old Sod", while Reilly joined several ladies in a fine

City 'Borrows' On Short Term

Virginia Beach City Council Monday did the same thing that many individuals do upon occasion.

It approved the borrowing of $3 million on a short-term basis to pay off entirely six old bond accounts, as well as for continued city operation through June, when real estate taxes come due, and when new bonds are sold. The council also approved the sale of $7 million in municipal improvement bonds were also approved.

The way the $3 million will be borrowed will be in two loans from Virginia National Bank—$2 million at 3.25 per cent for as long as four months, and $1 million at 3 per cent for 60 days. A higher interest rate proposal from First & Merchants National Bank was turned down.

City Manager W. Russell Hatchett and Director of Finance Giles Dodd said the money was needed to do away with cash overdrafts. The overdrafts included $1,386.83 for a Lynhaven River project dredging bond; $3,019.77 for the health department building addition to be repaid when Hill-Burton funds come in; $31,075.50 for the Bayview library construction bond; $39,398.76 for parks and recreation bonds; $487,968.09 in public building bonds from a 1967 issue; and $149,340 of the 1968 public building bond to be paid by March 1 for the new 2nd Police Precinct, this to be repaid from the bond sale.

Hatchett noted that the loans had been deferred for some time because of the "poor money market", but that he was satisfied the interest rate obtained was a good one.

rendition of the Irish "Jigs". Those present who had Irish background wore "shamrocks" while many others wore green buttons denoting them as honorary Irishmen.

Reilly, whose home is in San Francisco, Calif., was undaunted by the inclement weather of the night. As he was delivering his address inside the lodge, falling snow was being whipped about by strong winds outside. Reilly made light of the weather by saying, "When I was invited to appear here I was happy for the chance to see your fabulous beaches and enjoy your wonderful weather, but perhaps I should have remembered to bring my snow shoes."

Republicans Elect Field

After some disagreement about replacing a committee, the Virginia Beach Republicans in a "mass meeting" Saturday elected a new city chairman, city committee and delegates to the District and State conventions.

John A. Field III, 28-year-old attorney, was elected city chairman over Millard Morrell. Bernie Brown was elected chairman of the mass meeting.

Disagreement arose on appointing a committee to study having a representative of the Republican party on the Virginia Beach Electoral Board. A similar committee had already been elected in November. The group voted to appoint a new committee.

Delegates also voted to appoint a committee to study the feasibility of holding a primary election before the 1970 City Council elections.

additions and about $150,000 for equipment.

Haycox Construction Co., Inc., of Virginia Beach, was the apparent low bidder of six firms for construction of the new Pembroke Meadows elementary school, also to be ready this fall. The Haycox bid was $744,744, and the high bid was $758,911.

Schools To Begin

Conrad Brothers, Inc., of Norfolk is the apparent low bidder on additions to First Colonial and Kempsville High Schools. Bids were opened Tuesday afternoon at the Virginia Beach School Board office.

The low bid was $505,900, according to Ernest Stone, construction supervisor for the board. The high bid was $535,800 for the combined construction work to be done at the two schools.

Stone said work will start in the near future so that the additions will be ready by this fall. The contractors are already on notice to proceed. In the Jan. 20 bond issue, $550,000 was set aside for the 'Old Timer' Joins Carolina Department

When future fires are being fought in the town of Salvo, N. C., men of the Ocean Park Volunteer Fire Department will be taking part, in an indirect way.

Until the present time residents of Salvo had to rely on neighboring regions for fire fighting equipment. Although the town had its own fire station, they did not have any equipment. Men of the Ocean Park Volunteers heard of the situation and donated one of their units, free of charge, to Salvo fire fighters.

Ocean Park Fire Chief George Lyon told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN the truck was obtained in 1943, and remained in service until last year. The truck was initially a "Diamond T" chassis which was purchased from a roving carnival unit, by the Tanners Creek Fire Department in the early 40's. John Erling, chief of that department at the time, swilled the chassis as a "pumper truck". Ocean Park obtained the unit from Tanners Creek.

Men of the Ocean Park Unit, through their volunteer labor and resources, repainted the truck, even to lettering with the Salvo designation, and refinished the unit to put it in tip top condition, prior to its being delivered. The truck was loaded on a trailer and transported to Salvo by Graham White, Civil Defense Coordinator for the city, assisted by men of that department.

Chief Lyon said the Ocean Park Unit received remarkable service from the truck over the years, and that it is still a very good pumper. When asked by the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN what may have been the most outstanding service received from the truck, Lyon said he believed "the biggest fire it was used in was the Old Ocean View Hotel fire, located on the Lynhaven side of the waterfront which caught fire on New Years' night a number of years ago."

The only item removed from the truck prior to delivery to Salvo was the "old fire engine bell". Lyon told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN "we'll probably place that bell on one of our pieces of equipment, if just for old times sake."

P.A. Hits Title Trail

Tomorrow Princess Anne hits the boards again, this time to take on Peninsula District champion Hampton, with 19-1 for the season in the Eastern Regional tournament opener.

Princess Anne's second game of the season was a 63-41 loss to Hampton. But P.A. coach Harold Revis looks for a better showing against the Peninsula champ tomorrow.

When the Cavaliers opened their basketball season Dec. 8, it was with less than a week's practice together behind them. Three of P.A.'s basketball starters had also started on the football team, which only ended its season Dec. 11.

With a 12-3 record, Princess Anne has won eight of 11 games in the Eastern District tournament last week.

First round games in the Eastern Regional, Friday and Saturday at the Norfolk Arena, pair Princess Anne and Hampton, and Maury (21-0) and Southern District champion Churchland (19-1).

In the Group I-A State tournament, March 8 and 9 at Charlottesville, the Eastern and Northern champions, and the Central and Western titleholders, will meet in the first rounds.

Maury, if it gets through Churchland, is lucky in the fact that Hampton, rather than taller Kecoughtan, is representing the Peninsula. Hampton is a short team, whose tallest man is 6'5 junior Foley Jones. The other front court men range from 6'3 to 6'6.

Starting the season with the hopes of a possible fourth place and final berth in the post-season tourney, Hampton is now in the position of meeting second-ranked Princess Anne and possibly, the unbeaten mighty Maury.

Public Concert Set

Three Virginia Beach Festival Band and Chorus will present a concert at Princess Anne High School at 3 p.m., Mar. 3. Directing the fifth and sixth grade chorus will be Clark Graves, the seventh grade band, James Ackels, and the seventh grade chorus, Dean Simpson.

The students in these Festival Chorus and Band are chosen from all of the Elementary Schools in Virginia Beach. This year marks the first time the Festival Chorus have performed in Virginia Beach. The public is invited to the concert. There will be no admission charge.

Time Pressures Va. Legislature

The 1968 session of the Virginia General Assembly moves into its final week on Monday with the prospect of having to stop the clock again.

Virginia law says the sessions will last no more than 60 days, and on several occasions, including the 1966 session, it has been necessary to push the hands of the clock in the House and Senate chambers back several hours to fit that technical point of law.

A great deal of major legislation remains on the horizon in the waning hours, but little that is expected to cause real controversy. In the final hours it is usual that conferees have to be appointed to iron out Senate and House minor differences on pending legislation.

The massive budget bill, already substantially changed from its original form, and calling for an $81 million bond issue to be voted on in November was assured certain passage when it became apparent that no amendments from the floor could pass.

Virginia Beach Del. B. R. Middleton succeeded in tacking an amendment on a bill that makes the provisions of the State Income Tax substantially like that of the federal procedure. Middleton's amendment would exempt the first $2,000 of military and Civil Service retirement pay from the state tax for those over 65. The measure was introduced on the floor of the House unexpectedly and passes by a vote of 54 to 30.

Another bill that would affect Virginia Beach by setting up a four-city Authority to build a stadium somewhere in the Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake, Virginia Beach area was advancing without dissent, and passage in some form was expected.

Final action on Virginia Beach charter changes and the leasing of acreage of Camp Pendleton to the city for a golf course and a sandtrap were also pending nearly to the end of the session but were expected to pass without opposition.

Meeting Attracts 25 Schools

Displays from VICA programs from 25 high schools were set up in the lobby of the Cavalier Hotel last weekend during the two-day district meet.

Some 25 high schools participated in the regional meeting of the Vocational-Industrial Clubs of America last weekend at the Cavalier Hotel.

Although high schools from Richmond to Tidewater were represented, the only Virginia Beach high school taking part was Union Kempsville, which has an active VICA program, according to George W. Swartz, state supervisor of industrial education.

A VICA program will be set up in the new vocational-technical school at Green Run Farms, scheduled to open in the fall of 1969. VICA programs include such subjects as cosmetology, practical nursing, health occupations, drafting, architecture, as well as the automobile and electronic shops.

In the regional contest there were 22 different contests, including current events, hair styling, student of the year, job interview, public speaking, spelling, posters and open-club exhibits.

The winner of the open-club contest was a 17-year old Manchester High School student from Chesterfield County. The judges spent a considerable amount of time examining and asking questions about his walking-talking robot.

Glenn Johnson said he got the idea from a TV program, but that he keeps expanding on it.

Students, faculty and patrons of Virginia Wesleyan College came out Sunday afternoon, Feb. 25, to see ground broken for the college's new 210,000 volume library, and to hear Congressman Porter Hardy speak at the ceremonies.

Ground Broken at Wesleyan

Ground was broken Sunday afternoon at Virginia Wesleyan College for its new 210,000 volume library. On hand for the ceremonies was the Hon. Porter D. Hardy, Jr., United States representative from Virginia's second Congressional District.

Earlier Sunday, at a breakfast in Richmond, Hardy had announced that he will not run for re-election, ending a 22-year Congressional career. In his address before the ground-breaking ceremonies, Hardy pointed out that the very progress which has made America an advanced nation technologically also tends to devalue the individual. The library, he said, is one place where individual learning and individual values can be kept alive.

Board of Trustees chairman Jerry G. Bray, Jr., welcomed the audience at the ground-breaking, and Henry Clay Hofheimer, chairman of the Trustee's Development Committee, introduced Rep. Hardy.

The United States Navy School of Music Band provided music for the ceremony, including among their selections "America" and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

Heaving shovels at the ground-breaking were Hofheimer, representing the trustees; Lambuth M. Clarke, president of Virginia Wesleyan, representing the administration; and John F. Shappell, Student Government president, representing the student body.

Virginia Wesleyan opened its doors two years ago to its first freshman class. The Methodist school now has a student body numbering about 150 freshman and sophomores.

A Norfolk firm has submitted the low bid for construction of a combination library and service building at Virginia Wesleyan College.

The bid of slightly over $1,600,000 has been offered by W. H. Belanga and Associates.

Chuck Laskin Plans Return For Shriners

Shrine Noble Bill Rice has announced that Khedive Temple has succeeded in booking the 15-piece Chuck Laskin Orchestra for the Temple's spring dance at the Virginia Beach Civic Center on April 20. Laskin is being brought back by popular demand, said Rice.

According to Rice, the dance promises to be a gala party. It will be open to all members of Khedive Temple and their invited guests.

Moore's Opens 30th Store in Chain

Moore's Super Stores is open for business in Virginia Beach at Virginia Beach Boulevard and the new extension of Lynn Shores Drive. It opened on Feb. 22, George Washington's birthday, and one of the favors given away to the crowd was a cherry tart.

Brief ribbon cutting ceremonies were held outside the large building. The weather was chilly, but a large number of bargain-hunting shoppers were on hand waiting to get inside. The parking lot was entirely full, as were all off-street parking places in the area. Virginia Beach Police controlled traffic.

Representing the City of Virginia Beach were several City Councilmen, Mayor Frank Dusch, City Manager W. Russell Hatchett, Democratic National Committeeman Sidney S. Kellam, and Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice-President Albin Mailhes.

A number of Moore's personnel from the home office in Roanoke were also on hand, including the president of the 12-state building supply chain, Wayne C. Klopp.

Klopp told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN he was extremely gratified with the response to the grand opening.

"This is our 30th store," he said. "We picked Virginia Beach because it offers a real opportunity for growth, and we are a growth company."

Klopp said he believed Moore's is the largest retailer in Virginia. He added that the stores now are oriented toward retailing.

"We serve both the contractor and the do-it-yourselfer," said Klopp.

The grand opening celebration continued through the weekend, with balloons for children and ball point pens and other gifts for adults.

"Our military forces should be permitted to take the offensive on land and sea and in the air—with a definite timetable for the earliest possible successful conclusion of the war."

"For the successful conduct of the war, the enemy should be given no sanctuary or reprieve."

The report also called for an increase in military power and less control of the military by civilian agencies in operational matters.

The report also criticized the Department of Defense for hindering development of improved weapon systems and took exception to practiced intelligence in Vietnam.

"U.S. intelligence concerning enemy plans and movement is seriously deficient. As a result, major policies for the conduct of the war appear to have been formulated more on the basis of intuition than on fact," stated the report.

Downing told the findings of the subcommittee had been turned over to the Department of Defense and to the President and that he hoped its recommendations would be followed.

On the use of nuclear weapons, Downing told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN, "Certainly the reports mean that nuclear weapons should be made available. I think any country that undertakes to fight us should know we will use them if necessary. However, I don't think they would ever be used except in the case of retaliation or to protect our own shores."

The meeting also heard committee reports including a legislative report from Virginia Home Builders Association president, Fred Neapolitano of Virginia Beach.

Manager

Hatchett took a salary cut from $22,500 to $20,500 last July, in anticipation of his retirement. This could lower the starting salary for his successor.

Some Councilmen think that Scott may have an advantage over other applicants because he will start at a lower salary than an outsider with equivalent education and experience. Scott has said that he will make application for the job of City Manager.

Dodd, whose name was submitted as a candidate to Councilman J. Curtis Payne by an unidentified Virginia Beach lawyer, said that he has "no plans to put in an application at this time."

Webb has said that he will submit his qualifications for the job.

Hatchett, when asked if he would recommend a candidate to succeed him, said the Council had not asked him for any such recommendation. His retirement ends a career of 25 years in city government, during which time he saw the old Virginia Beach merge with Princess Anne County.

Having served as city manager for Virginia Beach before the 1963 merger, Hatchett has been recognized as one of those who did the most to make the new government work.

A native North Carolinian who came to Tidewater in 1925 to work for the Norfolk and Western Railway, Hatchett will stay on in his position as City Manager until Sept. 1 at the Council's request if a successor has not been selected.

"I'm not going to put myself on the shelf," he said. "I'll be around to help out with any civic matters."

"But everybody likes to look forward to the time when he can take it a bit easy," he went on.

Vice Mayor Robert B. Cromwell, Jr., asked Monday that the five-man committee not interview any city manager applicants without giving the entire Council a chance to be present at the interview.

National Honor Society tapping, participation in the District One-Act Play Festival, a radio quiz program taping and basketball tournament action provided an overflow of news last week at First Colonial.

Chris Beebe was also on the tapping list, but he was participating in the One-Act Play Festival.

The production "Infants," by Oscar Wilde, was directed by Miss Paula Lippard and starred Susan Axelrod as Infanta, Chris Beebe as Bossu, and Linda Williams as the Duchess. Other roles were that of Lord Severe, played by Joe Fairchild, and Dorothea, played by Linda Lister.

Top Students Named At Princess Anne

By Kacey Chullit

Seniors Jeffrey Jewett and Lawrence E. Marshall have been named Valedictorian and Salutatorian, respectively, of the class of '68 at Princess Anne. Jeff, the son of Cdr. and Mrs. Frederick Jewett of Declaration Road, is a National Merit Scholarship finalist, a semifinalist in the National Honor Society Scholarship Program, and received a perfect 800-point score on the Chemistry Achievement Test, a college-oriented test connected with the Scholastic Aptitude Tests.

Tom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Marshall of Ewell Road, has also received distinction during the school year. He is a member of the All-Regional Band, was a foreign exchange student to Latin America last summer and was named runner-up in the National Council of Teachers of English Writing Contest. Both boys are members of Princess Anne's H-Q team.

Musical Opens Tonight

"Around the World in Eighty Days" opens tonight at First Colonial High School for a two-night stand.

Performed by members of the Drama Club, and directed by Mrs. Betty Rodgers, the club's sponsor, the production is the musical comedy by Peter Gurney, based on Jules Verne's novel.

The action centers around Phileas Fogg, played by Chris Wade, who wagers that he can travel around the world in 80 days.

William Miller, choral director at First Colonial, is the musical arranger. Mrs. Susan Blackburn is the technical supervisor. The coordinating student director is Vicki Hansen.

Other members of the cast, in order of appearance, are Joyce Griffin, Mrs. Murchison; John Wolfe, Inspector Fix; Winslow Skillman, Smedley; Jerry Alfred, Dunstan; Ned Williams, Stuart; Jay Shelby, Hastings; Gall Gordon, Fanny; Efrain Omar, Passepartout; Debbie Bally, Sybil; Teresa Seaman, Aida; Suzi Washburn, Mary Sydney Baker; Judi Harbich, Debbie Schwartz and Sande Long, French girls; Debbie Schwartz, Lisette; Bob Hanson, newsboy; Joe Fairchild, British Consul; Mike Moss, Indian Guide; Hank Fettes, Yamamoto; Brook Moore, Outlaw; Linda Hansen, Queenie; Dean Entwinger; Larry Van Nostrand, Sailor; and members of the Madrigal Chorus.

Earlier in the week, First Colonial was host to the University of Richmond Scholarship Quiz, a radio quiz program heard on WRNL in Richmond and WVEC locally. Three students participated in the program, one from First Colonial. They were Judy Hendon of Hampton High, Cathy Melroli of Norview, and F.C.'s own Chris Beebe. The students were competing for a $1,000 scholarship to the University of Richmond.

Quizmaster was Dean C.J. Gray of University of Richmond, and the master of ceremonies was Tony Sposo. Dr. Warwick West Jr., Professor of Biology, and chairman of that department, was the judge, and Mrs. Joyce Milne, director of student activities at First Colonial, was the official score-keeper.

The final results of the quiz, which was aired locally last Sunday at 12:30 p.m. on WVEC Radio, saw Cathy Melroli of Norview in first place, Chris Beebe in second place, and Judy Hendon of Hampton in third place.

The Patriots basketball team went to the Eastern District Tournament in its last week and week-end and defeated Cox in their first game. Coach Koffey's team fell short, however, and dropped a 70-32 game to Grayby. Maury's team did not brighten things up too much by rolling the Patriots 82-46. Despite the tournament losses the Patriots still finished the season with good results.

Coming up this week is the presentation of "Around the World in Eighty Days." Curtain-time at First Colonial auditorium is 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow night. Tickets are $1.

The cast, under the direction of Mrs. Miriam Stewart, will present this one-act adaptation of Oliver Goldsmith's classic comedy at Princess Anne March 14-15, with two one-act plays presented by the Drama Department.

Senior Michael May was awarded one of the five Best Actor awards given at the competition.

Seniors Gary Meredith and Anne Woodward have been named members of the State Madrigals.

"Sing-Out America," a choral group concerned with the promotion of moral re-education, or the support of patriotism, will appear March 23 at 8 p.m. in the Princess Anne Auditorium. Price of admission is $1.

Members of Princess Anne's newspaper staff and year book staff will attend the annual Columbia Scholastic Press Association convention, March 14-16, at Columbia University, New York City.

At this workshop-convention, high school newspapers, literary magazines and yearbooks from across the nation are graded according to school size in ratio to the quality of the publication.

Princess Anne's paper, The Page, has received a first place award for the past three years. The Page, its annual, received a second-place rating last year.

Representing The Page will be Ken Reitz, sports editor; Mike McCully, assistant sports editor, and Rosemary Stallings, Journalism I student.

Page staffs traveling to the convention will be Pat Read, Dana Pillow and Sharon Grober. Accompanying the students will be Steve Lall, newspaper faculty advisor, and Frank Peele, faculty advisor for the drama.

Tapping, Quiz, Play

Tapping for the National Honor Society last week at First Colonial High School saw 19 students inducted into the Society, which gives recognition to students with high scholastic records.

Kellam Places Third In Wrestling Tourney

The play, "Fragile With...", was written by Rod Amis and Rick Williams, sophomores at Kellam. Under the direction of Miss Laura Rice and Miss Martha Spitzer, the play will compete in the state competition in Charlottesville.

Diane Shackelford and Margie Gibson were instrumental in the girls' gymnastic team victory over Cox and Bayside.

The class of '68 of F. W. Cox High School has chosen Bow Creek Country Club as the site of their Senior Prom.

The Prom will be held on May 17 and Charlie McClelland and the Magnificents is the featured band. Mike Vogt and Leigh Hurst are Prom Committee Co-chairman and Terri Inner is the Decorations Committee chairman.

Bill Cosby is a very funny fellow. He has the ability to take something very ordinary and turn it in to a "fall off your seat" story. Mr. Cosby walks on stage, with just one old chair for a prop, asks just one cornball question and looks you. He's tall, very sophisticated looking in his tux with wide bow tie. Then he goes into his "thing" and, in spite of his appearance, he'll convince you he's a little kid against the world.

This album, "Bill Cosby-Revenger," is his fifth album, for Warner Bros. He has also had a hit "single," "Little Old Man," which headed the charts for many weeks. In this epic, Bill talks about revenge, two daughters, (and two brothers) a tank, smoking, wives, cool covers, the Ninth Street Bridge Club, Buck and Planes. You'll get to know some of his friends. Friends like old weird Harold and fat Albert. He'll make you remember a lot of incidents from your past and show you how they were much more fun than you thought.

Variety of Building To Start in March

The month of March will see the beginning of a great deal of construction in Virginia Beach and the setting of the wheels in motion for the start of a lot more.

Bids will be also opened tomorrow at 4 p.m. to put the municipal marina at Long Creek under private operation on a five-year lease beginning April 1. The marina, opened last summer under city operation, was built partly with federal funds, along with dredging and maintenance of the Lynnhaven River and its near tributaries.

The marina is to be used for berthing boats engaged in the seafood business, as well as pleasure craft. Bids have been accepted since last July 1. About 50 pleasure boats can be accommodated, and there is a 300-foot area for commercial craft.

By mid-March bids are expected to be let for the extension of Independence Boulevard from its current four-lane ending at Haygood Road northward. Part of the work aimed at completing the four-laning of the road to Shore Drive is already underway by the city. Independence Boulevard will eventually extend through Robbins Corner to Shore Drive at the entrance of the Amphibious Base at Shelton Road. The project includes high level bridges over Northampton Boulevard.

Independence Boulevard work south of Virginia Beach Boulevard to the Expressway is also scheduled to be completed this spring to handle the unexpected overload of the exit ramps of the Expressway at that point.

In addition school construction of new elementary schools and additions to others will begin in March in hopes that no delays will be forthcoming and that the schools can be finished by the opening of the fall semester in September.

Several other schools, also approved in the Jan. 20 bond referendum, will be started this spring and summer for eventual completion of all by September 1969.

Frank Cox Will Be Missed

It really won't seem right. Tomorrow for the first time in almost 35 years, the chair of the Virginia Beach Superintendent of Schools will not be occupied by Frank W. Cox. His retirement becomes official tomorrow.

In the past week he has received many new honors, among them a testimonial dinner with over 700 of his friends and colleagues attending. Unending words of praise have been heaped upon him recently. But all the honors and all the words would not really suffice.

Frank Cox has given more than 39 years to Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach, first as a high school principal and then as superintendent. He has served the area during the toughest days of the Depression, during the beginnings of growth of World War II, and during the fantastic rapid growth era of the past 15 years. He has seen our school system change from one of the smallest in Virginia to one of the largest.

His has been a challenging job, to say the very least. Yet, he has met each new challenge calmly and well. Both his name and the name of our school system are well-known and respected in educational circles. He will be greatly missed.

But we wish him well on the golf course, in his travels and in the joys of his family during his retirement years.

His successor, E.E. Brickell is a straightforward man. He has a dynamic personality, a quick wit and a genuine interest in continuing to gather accolades for our school system. As he takes over tomorrow, we wish him well also.

The shoes he must fill are impressive and they have seen a lot of wear, but we feel that the choice of Ed Brickell is a good one. . . Just as we feel that Virginia Beach is a better place because Frank Cox worked for just that.

Still More Retirements

What is the world coming to? As we were preparing to go to a dinner honoring the retiring school superintendent, F.W. Cox, came the news that Second District Congressman Porter Hardy was not going to run for re-election. Then the very next day while the shock was still sinking in, Virginia Beach City Manager W. Russell Hatchett announced he is also going to call it a day and retire.

Congressman Hardy has served his district diligently for more than two decades, and he has long been a friend to Virginia Beach. Finding an able successor will be difficult.

Where Mr. Hatchett is concerned, we realized he has talked of retiring for some time, but Virginia Beach just won't be the same without his able hand at the helm. We'll have more to say about this retirement as soon as the shock wears off.

Four Lanes to Nowhere

It is certainly welcome news that U.S. Route 13 will be a fully four-lane facility by December of this year. . . seven months ahead of schedule. The roads on the Eastern Shore of Virginia needed improving, and the four-laning has come about quickly, although none too soon.

Obviously a four-lane road from New York to Virginia Beach will be a fine selling point for the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, that alluring debt-ridden man-made wonder of the modern world. We hope this will be a real shot in the arm for the span. It can certainly use some good news.

Not to cast any wet blankets on this news, but to keep the news in proper perspective, let us look also to the south. It is nice to get the tourists into Virginia Beach and to Norfolk and the horrible traffic tieups there, but then what about heading toward Florida? Route 17 is a mess, full of inadequate, two-lane stretches that go through too many large and small towns. Sure, things are in the works to do something about that, but improvements are needed now in North Carolina and southward, before the bridge-tunnel can really boast about being part of a fine, through route.

The four-laning on Eastern Shore is wonderful, but let us not look to this as a panacea for all financial woes. And just another suggestion for what it's worth. Maybe it would be better to publicize the southern terminus of the bridge-tunnel as Virginia Beach instead of Norfolk. We think more people might be enticed here than to Norfolk.

Red Cross '68

In this country, March is Red Cross month, the period during which we salute and support the organization which contributes so much to the nation's welfare. In Vietnam, Gen. William Westmoreland says, "Every month is Red Cross month."

Some 350 Red Cross workers are in Vietnam as social workers and recreation specialists. And these same people serve as vital links in the "hot-line" from our fighting men to the folks back home.

This year the Red Cross faces a crucial financial problem because of increased demands. Both in far off lands and during times of need in domestic disaster, the Red Cross is on the job. In this area, however, efforts of the United Communities Fund have made it unnecessary to seek additional funds for the Red Cross. We have already met our goal, and we continue to salute the American Red Cross.

Letters to the editor

Right To Work

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:
The practice of firing employees who do not pay money to labor unions would be legalized by enactment of a bill submitted last week to the Virginia General Assembly by Senator Henry E. Howell, Jr., of Norfolk.

Discrimination against employees on the basis of either union membership or non-membership has been prohibited since 1947 by the Virginia Right To Work Law. As it now stands, that law expressly forbids labor-management agreements which require workers "to pay any dues, fees or other charges of any kind to any labor union or labor organization."

An examination of the Howell proposal reveals that it would sanction a collective bargaining agreement compelling employees to pay money to a labor union. According to various press reports, however, the Senator said, "This has nothing to do with the Right To Work Law."

His comment is reminiscent of the legendary legislator who said: "Let me say emphatically that it is not my purpose to repeal the law forbidding bigamy; I merely want to make it legal for a man to have more than one wife."

At the very least, Senator Howell should honestly acknowledge that he is endeavoring to repeal the Virginia Right To Work Law.

If the Drugstores Close

The following is an editorial published by a nationwide news service for distribution to weekly newspapers. Its contents are reprinted with permission.

Dr. James L. Goddard, commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, has said that the corner drugstore should be closed down. However, he qualified this statement by adding that any such development is 20 years away.

Not surprisingly, the remarks by the FDA commissioner before newsmen at a New York press conference aroused the ire of retail pharmacists throughout the nation. A spokesman for 40,000 of the country's 53,000 drugstores, Willard B. Simmons, executive secretary of the National Association of Retail Druggists, declared that it wouldn't have made any difference if Dr. Goddard had said that drugstores wouldn't be shut down for 50 years. "It is all the same to me," said Mr. Simmons while speaking before the Northern California Pharmaceutical Association recently. "Dr. Goddard has gone on record as favoring the elimination of the American drugstore from the public scene. That leaves us no choice but to seek his resignation."

Mr. Simmons also charged in his speech that Dr. Goddard is dedicated to the concept of moving the practice of drug dispensing out of the drugstores and into the doctor's office. "But I have news for Dr. Goddard and others within and outside of pharmacy," Mr. Simmons said. "The American drugstore as a vital, progressive, updated service institution is here to stay. That's the way the public wants it and that's the way it is going to be."

If Mr. Simmons is correct in his forecast, drugstores in every community will continue to make a major contribution to the public welfare and to the economy. If Dr. Goddard is correct, we can look forward to a decrease in drugstore expenditures to meet payrolls and advertise goods and services, empty stores, and the possible elimination of the drugstore as a traditional service institution in all communities.

We can also look forward to queuing-up at the few and far between medical centers and hospitals to obtain our prescription drugs. That is not at all a pleasant prospect when you consider that, more often than not, the patients who are in need of drugs are not feeling well enough to travel long distances and wait in line for medicine.

If Dr. Goddard's dire forecasts turn out to be true, no longer will we be able to have our prescriptions filled or refilled at our "corner drugstore" or call for immediate delivery of health care needs in all kinds of weather or have emergency drug services readily available over a 24-hour period, or to be able to have a trained professional and business person ready to serve all members of our family, young or old, with the kind of personal attention we have always received from our local pharmacist; or be able to talk to our neighborhood pharmacist about a large number of personal and community problems.

We sincerely hope that the commissioner is wrong in his predictions and the drugstore will remain as a vital service institution in all of our communities. But if the commissioner is correct, what other segment of our free enterprise system will a few schemers turn to in their efforts to control our society?

Today the very existence of the drugstore is threatened. Who knows what tomorrow has in store for other professions and business enterprises?

SPOTS

By H. Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.

She quivered and sat quietly, bolt upright in the straight-backed chair he always provided for her next to his desk on such occasions. The light somehow always seemed to shine in her eyes a little too brightly and she was reminded of a third degree. . . and she could swear that sheet of papers looked like a rubber hose.

"Are you ready?" he asked with a sigh.
"As ready as I'll ever be," she said with a nervous laugh. He frowned.

"All right. Number 432. The stub shows you made it out to the food store, but you neglected to put down the amount. I don't have any way of knowing how much we have in the bank until we get the checks back," he grumbled.

"I remember that one," she perked up. "It was $26.30. . . or was it $30.26. . . ?"

"Very good," he tossed out, trying to control his temper. "That puts us within four dollars of knowing where we are, Gee, I'm proud of you."

"You don't have to be so sarcastic."

"Well, considering this is the first time you've left out the amount now in about ten days, I guess you're right. You're beginning to show a lot of improvement," he said. "Now, then on to numbers 439, 439 and 439, three checks?"

"I guess I just kept copying the same number over again. I like that number," she said, again with a nervous laugh. He frowned. . . again.

"You know, I bet that accounts for the $62.26 more I thought we had in the bank last month than the statement showed," he said. "You just kept writing checks with the same number and didn't bother to record them for posterity anywhere."

"That's possible," she confessed. "Sometimes I get in a hurry and forget to put it in that little book. But I have so much faith in you, I know you can straighten it out." He frowned again.

"OK. Number 446 for $6.59 on some date that isn't in the book. Would it be asking too much to know who received this paltry amount and when?"

"Yes," she said. He frowned. "I was just joking," she said. "Now, let's see. I think that was the one I wrote for cash I needed last Thursday or Friday."

"Well, at least we know which week," he mumbled. "Why didn't you write it for an even amount if it was for cash?"

"Because I only needed $6.59." He frowned.

"Oh."

"That brings us to number 452 made out to the kids' doctor. It really would have been better if you had signed it. The nurse returned it for your signature."

"I knew that check didn't look right," he frowned.
"Fine. That takes care of this month," he said. "Now would you please get me two of those little white pills, I have an Excortin headache."

"Certainly," she said as she ran quickly to do his bidding. . . anything to get away from that inquisition.

"You know," he said, "You really have improved. I remember those times before we were married and you always got those 'overdrawn' notices because you never kept any record at all of the checks and deposits. And to think that's only been ten years ago."

She brought him the pills, and smiled sweetly. "Incidentally, I think there was another check numbered 439 I wrote, made out to somebody, but I can't remember who."

He frowned and took the pills.

Students Recommend Teacher

Every Wednesday morning at 10 a.m., a group of 10 or so wives meet in the kitchen at Bellamy Manor at Kempsville to watch Mrs. Grace Friello make party foods.

Mrs. Friello is teaching the class in cooperation with the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation, and the course is planned to include chafing dish cookery, vegetable garnishing, sandwiches, hors d'oeuvres and beverages, among many other things.

During a class last week, she demonstrated how pre-sliced ready-to-bake cookies can be pressed into muffin tins lined with heavy-duty aluminum foil, baked for about twelve minutes at 400 degrees, and used as party shells for a number of fillings—both sweet and tart.

Another trick Mrs. Friello pointed out is to halve and scoop-out little cherry tomatoes, fill them with anything from cream cheese to egg salad; quickly hors d'oeuvres.

Here are several of Mrs. Friello's recipes that her students particularly like:

MINIATURE ITALIAN MEAT BALLS

- 1 lb. ground beef
- 1/2 c. bread crumbs
- 1 egg
- Garlic powder (or small clove garlic)
- 2 T. grated romano or parmesan cheese
- 1 tsp. parsley minced
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. black pepper

Mix well and roll into small meat balls the size of large marbles. Brown and cook in sauce—serve hot.

QUICK SAUCE

- 1 family size can tomato paste (1 large can puree)
- 1 can water
- 1 tsp. oregano
- 1 tsp. basil
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- pepper

Cook for 15 minutes—place meat balls in sauce—cook for 30 minutes.

GOUDA CUP

- 1 1/2 oz. Gouda
- 3 T. Beer
- 1 tsp. Bottled Steak sauce
- Dash hot pepper sauce

Cut a circle in waxy top of cheese. Scoop out cheese leaving red covering intact and 1/4 inch cheese shell. Refrigerate shell. Let scooped out cheese soften at room temperature. With fork mash cheese (or put through blender). Blend with remaining ingredients. Let stand 1 hour to blend flavors. Pile cheese mixture into gouda shell. Shape top to look like cone cover with foil or plastic wrap and refrigerate.

Serve at room temperature on pumpernickle triangles or rye crackers.

MARINATED BEANS

- 1 can or pkg. green beans drained
- 2 T. oil
- 2 T. vinegar or lemon juice

The proof is in the puddin'. And members of Grace Friello's party foods class have the delightful job of testing/tasting their instructor's handiwork. The after-class eating spree goes on every Monday noon, and attracts ladies from other classes being taught at Bellamy Manor.

- oregano (crushed clove garlic)
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- salt
- salt and paprika to taste
- 1 tsp. finely minced onion
- finely diced dill pickle (opt.)

Two Virginia Beach students, Charles Jeffrey Shelton and John L. Kordulak, are among the 68 who made the Dean's List for the fall semester at N.C. Wesleyan College.

Shelton, a junior psychology and history major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C.V. Shelton of Cavalier Drive.

Kordulak, a sophomore biology major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kordulak of Nelms Lane.

Barbara Riley, daughter of Cmdr. and Mrs. William P. Riley of Smith Farm Road, has been chosen a member of the 1968 May Court at Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

George McIntyre of Virginia Beach was assistant set director of Randolph-Macon Academy's production of "The King of Hearts," a comedy by Jean Kerr and Eleanor Brooke. He is the son of Mrs. George L. McIntyre of Atlantic Avenue.

Arnold Snitz, a freshman at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville, has been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Snitz of 70th Street.

Thomas R. Gallagher and Michael M. Raphael have been named to the Dean's List at Virginia Tech's College of Architecture at Blacksburg.

At the Tech college of Arts and Sciences, Michael P. Murphy, Nelson S. Payne, Jr., Glen W. Sachse and Barbara A. Williams have been named to that college's Dean's List.

David B. Defoe has made the Dean's List for the college of Business at Blacksburg.

Mrs. Friello stirs up good things in the kitchen of Bellamy Manor.

Check Before Serving Whale

Mrs. Grace Friello is an American mother, via Italy, who is without a doubt among the best—and most ingenious—cooks around Virginia Beach.

She has been teaching wives the art of food preparation for about 15 years now, concentrating on cake-decorating, and is currently teaching party-foods classes for the city's Parks and Recreation department, every Wednesday morning at Kempsville's Bellamy Manor.

The big kitchen at the Bellamy mansion lends a congenial, informal atmosphere to Mrs. Friello's classes, as she stands behind a long table demonstrating cooking tricks and time-savers that can get a hostess out of the kitchen and into her own party as participant rather than coordinator.

That same concern for detail that results in a relaxed party is incorporated into many of Mrs. Friello's comments to her students while she stands before them making a pastry filling or preparing a cheese spread. She cautions wives to serve fairly standard party fare to guests unless their tastes are well-known. In Mrs. Friello's words: "Don't serve them whale meat unless you know they'll like it."

Mrs. Friello lives at Pembroke Manor with her husband Alphonse, and their four children: ages 18, 12, and a set of seven-year-old twins.

She studied cake decorating through Cornell University, but most of her recipes and hints she has picked up over the years.

In commenting on the theory that most Italian wives are good cooks, Mrs. Friello said she thinks it's true. Since her husband's parents and her own, who live near Naples, are Italian, she has some basis for an opinion.

"Most Italian women love to work in the kitchen," she said. "We have large families, and the children like to eat, so it's a pleasure to cook for them."

And Virginia Beach wives who have taken Mrs. Friello's course will probably find it at least more delectable a pleasure to cook good things for their families.

New Vegetable

Celery is one our new vegetables, having been greatly improved in flavor and tenderness by cultivation during the last three centuries. Florida is now one of the great growers of quality celery during fall, winter and spring months.

Wallcoverings Prepared For Do-It-Yourself Fans

How many times have you wanted to install wallcovering but had second thoughts? Gets too involved, you said to yourself; all that bother and mess of mixing paste.

You, then, are among the many who have not heard about preprepared wallcoverings, the new aid for the do-it-yourself decorator.

The United Wallpaper Company of Chicago has pioneered preprepared wallcoverings and offers them in a variety of designs from mod to traditional at most retail wallcovering dealers.

To hang preprepared wallcoverings it is necessary to have only one special tool—a "waterbox"—which is obtained from the dealer. The strip of covering is immersed in clean, warm water for about 30 seconds so as to activate the adhesive which has been applied at the factory.

Often if you are doing a small area such as a kitchen or bathroom, the bathtub or sink can be used in place of a waterbox. The important point is to immerse the rolled strip long enough to activate the adhesive properly.

The preprepareds open up decorating opportunities which you may never have considered before. Linen closets, closets (with matching hatboxes, shoeboxes, etc.); wastebaskets, chests, lamp shades, door panels, decorative wall panels, picture mats, and screens, for instance. The wallcovering is so easy to handle that these smaller jobs do not require a great deal of time.

Wallpapering can also be handled by the woman of the house with relative ease. And, most husbands will appreciate not having weekends consumed with decorating chores.

The pattern choice among preprepareds is varied and fresh—bold florals; psychedelic designs in fluorescent colors; striking black and white vignettes; embossed textures; graceful florets; whimsical Americana; bound-tooth checks, Scottish plaids; paisleys; polka dots; stripes and medallions.

The interest and warmth that wallcoverings will give your house need not be postponed... preprepareds are here in the latest colors and designs!

Wash Your Kids in Winter

Cold, wet, snowy weather keeps children indoors during winter months, but doesn't usually do a thing to dampen their energies. They play just as much and just as enthusiastically whether they are in the back bedroom or the back yard. That's why it is as important as ever to see that they follow their usual washing and bathing routine.

Children won't be as visibly dirty after play indoors as out, but that's no sign to let them relax their scrub-up habits. When youngsters gather to play in a confined area, they bring with them all the dirt and germs they picked up on the way. It's a familiar problem for every mother that the children catch and pass along most of the colds or illnesses that go through their classroom or play-group during the winter.

Other germs may be passed around, too. The skin bacteria that can cause infection in little cuts and scratches are always present. The easiest way to protect your child is to continue his regular soap'n water routine, with a mild, antibacterial soap, like Dial. Regular use builds up an invisible film on the skin that inhibits germs and keeps them away.

Washing before and after each meal, before nap or bedtime, and after play periods, particularly if there is a pet in the home, sends dirt and germs down the drain. A daily bath is not to be forgotten and if winter weather leaves children's tender skin rough and dry, add a moisturizing lotion before bed.

A regular cleanliness routine all year 'round builds the good habits that will accompany a child all his life when clear skin and grooming will be important to him.

World Day Of Prayer Is Tomorrow

Clifford Robinson, who has been assistant director of International Christian Leadership in the United States, will be guest speaker tomorrow, March 1, at the World Day of Prayer services to be held at 11 a.m. at Star of the Sea Catholic Church.

The program is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women United. There will be luncheon served after the program. A baby sitter will be provided.

Mr. Robinson (He is a member of the Society of Friends which has no ordained ministers,) was a missionary in India for almost 20 years with his wife and four children. He and his wife are planning to return overseas in March.

The Robinsons will also lead a retreat which members of the Council of Church Women United and their husbands will have Friday night and Saturday at the Washington Club Inn.

Mike Woodward looks ready to defend himself as he models colorful coordinates by Davidow.

Rae Godfrey wears a two-piece ensemble in gray and white.

Looking happy after the show were four of the women most deeply involved in it. They are Mrs. Aldridge, Mrs. Alexander, Miss Sullivan and Miss Claire Ackman, also of New York.

Heart Beats in Fashion Is Success

"Heart Beats in Fashion," second annual Heart Fund Fashion Show sponsored by the Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach, was a success if the size of the crowd and the favorable comments were any indication.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the show was the choice of fashions—they were wearable instead of being too extreme. Mildred Sullivan, press director of the New York Couture Business Council, commented that the fashions she had brought with her were trends representative of the spring and summer rather than the more radical styles.

The show was in three parts. First a collection of fashions from the Florence Wilson Shoppe were modeled, along with men's clothes from Toppers Mens Wear. Then Miss Sullivan took the microphone as commentator as she presented the New York fashions she had brought.

Among the trends for the next seasons will be longer jackets for women's suits, fabulous print cottons, flowing gowns for evening and lots more color in men's clothing, along with plaids in jackets and suits. The turtle-neck shirt continues to be popular.

Something else new is the use of off-side zippers on women's fashions rather than down the center of the back. Armholes are cut square rather than round to be more comfortable.

Perhaps the hit of the evening—as far as the men present were concerned—was the final outfit presented. It was a silver mini evening gown with a maxi silver coat.

Other commentators for the evening were Mildred Alexander of WTAR, Suzanne Holden of the Ledger-Star, Cammy Sessa of the Virginian-Pilot and Verne Jones of WAVY-TV.

Mrs. George L. Aldridge was general chairman of the show which was produced and directed by Mrs. Alexander.

All proceeds from the show will be applied through Tidewater Heart Association toward the purchase of open heart surgery equipment for the Cardiovascular Center at Kings Daughters Hospital in Norfolk.

Mrs. Robert Owens is in charge of church arrangements for World Day of Prayer, and Mrs. Charles Earley Jr. planned the service and the retreat. Mrs. John Waller is president of the Virginia Beach Council of Church Women United.

Wedding Planned For March

Mrs. John P. Parker of Virginia Beach announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Barbara Joan Parker, to William Thomas Verdon.

Mr. Verdon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Owen Verdon.

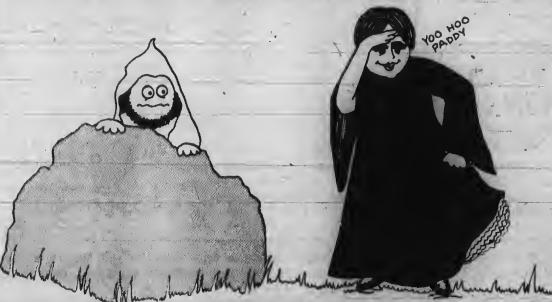

Miss Parker is also the daughter of the late Mr. Parker. A graduate of Princess Anne High School, she completed studies at the Ray Vogue School of Design in Chicago.

After graduating from Virginia Beach High School, Mr. Verdon joined the U.S. Army and served one year in Vietnam.

The wedding is planned for March 16.

George R. Reilly, Supreme Governor Loyal Order of Moose, took time out from serious business Saturday night to dance an Irish jig. Aragona Moose Lodge #1198 was host to Reilly and members from Virginia Beach and Norfolk Moose lodges for a dinner and dance at which Reilly was guest speaker.

Shoppers Celebrate Washington's Birthday

It all began with free pancakes....

Until finally....

McAllen's ALLEY

By Carolyn McAllen

Get Your Man While You Can

Bill, our four-year-old, is finally celebrating his first birthday today.

It was all my husband's fault. On the night before Bill was born, my husband kept teasing me about a Leap Year baby. He had his dates mixed up and thought it was already the 29th instead of the 28th. Then he didn't want to take me to the hospital because he didn't want the doctor to have to go out in the snow.

People are always asking when we have Bill's birthday. We've been celebrating it on the 28th. At least that's the same month if not the right day.

I was married during a Leap Year—however my husband did the proposing, not me. There are two mythical versions of how woman gained the right to propose every four years.

One is that St. Bridget went running to St. Patrick one day weeping that her nuns were in revolt because they didn't have the right to choose their mates (this was in the day when celibacy was not required in the monasteries and nunneries). Supposedly she flung herself on old Pat for consolation, and he was so moved that he suggested every seven years the women have a chance to propose for themselves.

Bridget couldn't quite see the one in seven arrangement, so she said how about once every four years? Pat, himself even more moved, went along with the idea of one year out of four for the ladies' proposals, and even made that Leap Year, the longest of all years.

Immediately taking advantage of the situation, Bridget proposed to Pat. He refused because he'd taken a voluntary vow of celibacy. He gave her a silk dress and a platonic kiss to ease the blow, hence the custom of a rejected female expecting a silk dress from her rejector.

Another story goes that in 1288, Queen Margaret of Scotland decreed through her parliament that in Leap Year a woman had the parliamentary right to propose to the man of her choice.

He could only refuse if he were already engaged, on penalty of paying 100 pounds fine. The myth was accepted as fact in Genoa, Florence and France. But in Scotland, where the men were a little more dubious—and wary—women had to wear red petticoats during Leap Year if they were man-hunting.

Pigeons Have Own Road Maps?

By Les Lehigh

During the next four weeks F. Warren Lambert will be devoting his time to training and conditioning his flock of homing pigeons for a series of "cross country races" which get underway on March 30.

This year's schedule of contests for members of the Hampton Roads Racing Pigeon Club consists of a series of races covering distances ranging from Henderson, N. C., 125 miles away (as the pigeons fly) to a 600-mile race from Indianapolis, Ind.

A junior at Princess Anne High School, 18-year-old Lambert is the son of Virginia Beach Police Officer and Mrs. F. (Nick) Lambert. He told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that although he has been raising and training homing pigeons for only 18 months, he earned his first racing trophy last year. Lambert received the first place trophy in a race of "young birds" during a 320-mile race from Chester, S. C., of the 102 birds entered in the competition. Lambert's completed the flight and returned to its home loft one hour ahead of his closest competitor. A number of the birds were hindered by driving rain storms, and by hunters taking shots at them as they flew overhead.

Lambert and a friend Ray Pond, also 18, are the only two teenagers on the roster of 15 members of the Hampton Roads Racing Pigeon Club. He speaks highly of the cooperation among club members in assisting each other whenever possible and of the assistance received from club secretary E. R. Keeter in the training of his birds.

At the present time Lambert's "flock" consists of 40 "racing" pigeons and 35 "breeder" pigeons. Training of the birds begins when a bird is five weeks of age with becoming familiar with the area surrounding the "home loft."

The birds are trained by taking them various distances from their home loft and releasing them for the return flight. This training begins at a distance of one mile and is increased during training to a maximum distance of 75 miles. Homing pigeons being trained as racers usually reach their peak capability at two years of age.

The price of a homing pigeon varies depending upon its strain, or breed, Lambert says. "There are good birds in all breeds, but Dad and I prefer those of the 'House of David,' 'Wedge' and 'Farby's' (which originate in Belgium)."

Homing pigeons being trained as "racers" fall into one of two categories, "young birds" and "old birds." A "young bird" is described as one which is entered in competition in the calendar year following the year in which it was hatched, while others are classified as "old birds."

When a pigeon is hatched a small metallic band is slipped over one of its feet over the leg. The growth of the pigeon prevents this band from slipping from the leg. Each band is stamped with a designation of the United States Racing Pigeon Association and the year in which the bird was hatched.

When preparing a schedule of races officials stagger distances involved in order to give birds ample rest. This is accomplished by building up to a maximum distance of 320 miles then dropping the range before proceeding upwards until the maximum distance race is set for that schedule's "main event."

While the condition of a bird is a key factor in its speed during a race, Lambert said a "good bird" will not stop during a race for food or water. This can usually be verified for checking the bird for traces of foliage or mud on its feet or feathers.

Each owner is responsible for "timing" his bird during competition. Special clocks, which are usually imported from Germany, are used in timing races. The clock's contain a paper tape, which is stamped with a time symbol at the start of a race, along with another such symbol when the bird reaches its home loft. Two bands are also prepared at the start of the race which correspond to a code in each clock.

One of the bands is placed under security by race officials, the other is removed from the bird's leg when it reaches the home loft and placed in the clock for registering with the elapsed time designation stamp.

Anyone who has ever given any thought to the performance of homing pigeons usually ponders the question "How do they find their way home?" In fielding this question Lambert said that no one has been able to explain it. He did, however, advance one theory which appears prevalent among trainers of homing pigeons.

Lambert surmised that the birds during their training acclimate themselves to the position of the sun in relation to their home surroundings, and use it as a type of compass heading for finding their directions. While this may appear feasible for training a bird over a given distance and heading from its home loft, how do you explain the ability of a bird to return from any distance or direction from its home loft?

Busy Students Take Part in Activities

By Michael Moore

The performing arts departments of Bayside High School have been busy lately.

The Choral Department, under Faye MacKinnon, sent 18 boys and girls to District II All Regional and Workshop Chorus. This included a weekend at Woodgrove Wilson High School, learning and rehearsing music for the Sunday concert.

From this group of 18, three were chosen to attend the All-State chorus scheduled for April at Charlottesville. They are Lois Lilley, Larry Tice and Michael Moore.

Performances are now in the planning stages for the Bayside Madrigals, the most outstanding 10th, 11th and 12th grade singers.

Hugh Copeland and his Drama Department have been the busiest of any group here at Bayside.

While rehearsing for the Creeds Ruritan Show, which Copeland wrote and directed, the Hurrah-Players were also in rehearsal for the District I prompt competition. The group (Darlene Brickel, Barbara Tarvaris, Mike Stevens and David Dexter) received a superior-plus rating at the competition, and as a result will go to the state drama competition at Charlottesville to present their play.

The Hurrah-Players helped in the production of the Ruritan Show, "Vaudeville '68," supplying 50 per cent of the cast.

One of the most exciting events of the Bayside school year will take place Saturday, March 9. The second annual Miss Bayside Pageant, under the direction of Copeland, will be presented in the High School Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. The theme of the pageant will be "Around the World with Beauty."

The opening scene will be one of the girls hurriedly boarding a plane to travel around the world. Then, the evening gown competition will take place in Italy; talent, on Broadway, U.S.A.; sportswear competition, in the French countryside, and back to Virginia Beach for the crowning of Miss Bayside, 1968. Copeland will be Master of Ceremonies for the pageant.

Competing for the title are: Betty Anderson, Diane Bellomy, Mini Cash, Donna Dobronie, Lani Duncan, Debbie Hodge, Lois Lilly, Sheila McWaters, Linda Olcese, Donna Owens, Vicki Temple, Debbie Uhlenbrock, Willi Yarn and Gladys Young.

The senior class is sponsoring the pageant and the proceeds will go towards the Senior Prom and its class memorial.

Lions Begin Eye-Donor Campaign

The Lions Clubs of Virginia, which provide full financial support for the Old Dominion Eye Bank, have initiated a drive to increase by a substantial margin the number of eye-donor pledge cards on file in the eye bank's Richmond office.

Over 5,000 members of the approximately 150 Lions Clubs in the coverage area of the eye bank in eastern Virginia have been asked to establish a goal of one donor card per month from each member. Achievement of this goal, according to R. Kenneth Hudgins, executive director of the Eye Bank, would make it possible to provide enough human eye tissue for transplant purposes to restore sight to all blind individuals in Virginia whose loss of vision is of a type which may be helped by such transplantation. Restoration of vision is now possible in many cases where blindness is caused by diseased or damaged corneas or detached retinas.

As part of the campaign to interest the public in pledging their eyes on death to this cause, Lions members have formed an Eye Bank Speakers Bureau and are now soliciting clubs and organizations throughout the eastern part of the state, requesting the privilege of presenting programs explaining the work of the Eye Bank.

W.E. Wood Is Promoted

Oscar B. Ferebee, Jr., vice president and general manager of Goodman-Segar-Hogan Residential Sales Corporation announced today, the election by the Board of Directors of William E. Wood, Jr. to the office of vice president. Bill Wood joined Goodman-Segar-Hogan in 1963, and for the last three years his sales have been in excess of One-Half Million a year. In 1966, the company designated him as the Outstanding Salesman of the Year, and that same year, he received from the Sales and Marketing Executives of Tidewater, their Distinguished Salesman's Award.

Mutual Fund Declares Dividend

Financial Industrial Fund, Inc., a Denver-based mutual fund with current assets of approximately $346 million, has declared its 129th consecutive quarterly dividend from investment income. A distribution of 3.0 cents per share is payable on March 18 to shareholders of record Feb. 29.

Announcement of the dividend was made by George Hankins, Virginia Beach divisional manager for Financial Programs, Inc., fund distributor.

The dividend rate of 3.0 cents per share is the same as for last quarter and for this same quarter in 1967.

Den-mothers Mrs. Doris Shortland and Mrs. Lynn Wetmore kept a watchful eye on the cake for the 58th birthday celebration of the Boy Scouts of America Friday night, Feb. 23, at First Colonial High School. Scouts James Boggs, Michael and Barry Shortland, Edward McDevitt, Mark Swindell, David Priest, Mark Wetmore and Joseph Johnston were interested in the cake, too.

Study Postpones Jitneys

When the matter was first proposed spokesmen for Beach Taxi and for Carolina Trailways appeared but did not oppose the service. Several Councilmen, however, felt that more time was needed to study the matter. Monday they felt still more time was needed, although a spokesman for the jitney company said he thought all questions had been answered.

The same spokesman said that reports of feasibility studies being made for possible jitney service to Seatack, Princess Anne and the General Hospital of Virginia Beach were still a bit premature.

The jitneys have been in operation along Atlantic Avenue since last May and service has been extended once to serve the military bases at Dam Neck and Oceana, when studies revealed the need.

Virginia Beach City Council voted again Monday to delay for another two weeks a request by Beach Transport Inc., to operate charter bus services for small groups within the city limits.

Mrs. Paschang Is Speaker
The Thalia Garden Club held its February meeting at the Thalia Methodist Church. Hostesses were Mrs. W. H. Smith, Mrs. A. L. Sykes, Mrs. D. H. Rhodes and Mrs. J. R. Goff. Guest speaker at the meeting was Mrs. C. Paschang, who demonstrated how to make arrangements using driftwood and foliage. The Lake Joyce Garden Club judged the arrangements and horticulture awards were awarded to many of the members.

Plant Indoors Now For Spring Gardens

Now is the season to start vegetable and flower plants for your garden. Sow seeds about six weeks ahead of the time you plan to set the plants outdoors. Don't plant too early. Plants that are a bit too small are easier to transplant and recover more rapidly than those that are too large.

A few pots or flats, which can be located in a sunny window or porch, will supply many of the plants you need. Most of us set out too many cabbage, tomato, and other plants anyway. A dozen well-grown plants will provide an adequate quantity of cabbage, lettuce, peppers and tomatoes for the average family. A half-dozen hybrid cucumbers will provide all you need, plus some for the neighbors.

The soil for producing seedling vegetable or flower plants should be a loose, fertile mixture which holds moisture and yet allows good drainage. The small amount needed to raise plants for your home garden can be secured from a local florist, greenhouse or garden center. Be sure the mixture has been sterilized to control diseases, insects and weeds.

You may prepare your own soil by using two parts of soil, one part shredded peat, one part coarse sand and one-half part dried manure or leaf mold, plus one-half cup bonemeal per peck of completed mixture. Sterilize the mixture by baking in shallow trays in an oven for 15 minutes at 250 degrees Fahrenheit followed by 30 minutes at 200 degrees Fahrenheit.

Seeds may be planted in pots or shallow flats made of wood, metal or plastic. Good drainage should be provided. Transplanting will be easier if the seeds are sown in a single line, in shallow furrows about two inches apart. Seedling emergence will be improved if the seeds are covered with a thin layer of sand rather than soil.

Transplant the seedlings as soon as they are large enough to handle. In most cases, this will be when they are about an inch tall, and are developing their first true leaves. Set the small plants slightly deeper than they were in the seed flat. Plant in small flats filled with peat pots or plant bands. Water carefully and keep in partial shade for about two days until the plants recover from the shock of transplanting. If the leaves become light green in color, apply a soluble house plant fertilizer as directed on the package.

Before the plants are set out in the garden, they should be hardened to withstand rigorous outdoor conditions. Allow the soil to become fairly dry, discontinue the applications of fertilizer, lower the temperature by moving the plants to a porch or outside location and increase ventilation and light intensity.

If possible, set plants in the garden on a cloudy day, or late in the afternoon on a sunny day, to reduce wilting. Apply one cup of water to each plant. Early growth will be stimulated if the water contains soluble fertilizer. Water liberally for several days to help the plant overcome the shock of transplanting.

Club Learns About Birds

At the February meeting of the Lake Joyce Garden Club, Dr. Ann Lee spoke on little known facts about birds, the laws that govern them, their history from pre-historic times to recorded history, their adaptation to make them the best flying machines in existence and some hints on how to attract them to our environment.

She said the Archaeopteryx is the oldest known to scientists. It lived over 100 million years ago. It had sharp teeth and claws on its wings. When the scientist found fossils of it and studied it they gave it a name, the name means "ancient wing."

Some birds have become extinct within the last century, the great auk which looked like a penguin and the passenger pigeon once our commonest wild birds. Unless individuals take measures to protect our birds of the present day they too will disappear, our dainty hummingbird, the painted bunting, blue bird to the giant white heron.

Do you realize that a few pennies saved on food every week can mean dollars in your pocket at the end of the year? That brings me to the penny-wise, vitamin-packed turnip. It's in peak supply now, at 10¢ a pound.

Most people like them mashed and seasoned with butter or margarine. But remember, if you have an electric range, always boil your vegetables in a small amount of water and in a tightly-covered sauce pan. Personally, I prefer half turnips and half potatoes, cooked in boiling salted water till tender, then drained and mashed with light cream or butter till fluffy. Another flavor surprise is to cook them in beef consommé (one 10 1/2 oz. can to 2 lbs. of turnips) until tender. Drain and mash the turnips till fluffy, then add a 1/2 teaspoon of sugar and 2 tablespoons of chopped parsley before serving.

And here's a recipe that should be on your list of specials. LEMON-PARSLEED TURNIPS. Pare turnips and cut into sticks (as you would potatoes for french frying) till you have 2 cups. Boil in salted water until just tender, 10 or 15 minutes. Drain and add 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, 2 teaspoons snipped parsley, 1 finely chopped onion and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Toss to coat evenly. Makes 4 superb servings, and the cost, about 28¢. The cost of electricity to cook it, less than 1¢. Quite a bargain, electricity. Think about that when you're boiling your thrifty turnips.
